In California, GOP Sen. Pete Wilson, 56, a popular two-term federal lawmaker and former San Diego mayor, easily defeated token opposition Tuesday to capture the Republican gubernatorial nomination. If not a favorite to replace retiring Republican Gov. George Deukmejian, Wilson must at least be viewed by Feinstein as an extremely tough opponent.

And in North Carolina, Gantt will contend with three-term Republican Sen.

Jesse Helms, who is one of the most outspoken conservatives in the country and popular at home. Nonetheless, both Feinstein and Gantt were ecstatic Tuesday night and looking forward to doing battle with their Republican rivals.

"Well, we did it!" Feinstein told cheering supporters in San Francisco after declaring victory over state Attorney General John Van de Kamp. "One mission completed - one to go."

Immediately moving to portray a unity image and dispel some of the nastiness of the often-bitter primary campaign, Feinstein added: "I think we have shown tonight that we are one state. That we're not Northerners versus Southerners, that we are not mountain people versus coast people, but that we're one state - Californians and proud of it."

"The times have really changed, yes they have," Gantt, 47, told happy supporters in Raleigh, N.C., after his Democratic runoff win over attorney Michael Easley.

"North Carolina needs a new kind of senator, someone with the very best hopes and aspirations of all the people of North Carolina," he added. "Folks, I want to tell you, God is good, yes he is. The wonderful people of this state showed their confidence in me. There's a new day in North Carolina."

With 93 percent of the vote counted, Feinstein had 1,222,071 votes, or 52.3 percent, while Van de Kamp had 956,845 votes, or 41 percent. Minor candidates split the remainder.

In North Carolina, with 97 percent of precincts reporting, Gantt had 264,378 votes, or 57.8 percent. Easley had 192,877 votes, or 42.2 percent. The two men had finished first and second in a May primary.

In all, nine states held primaries Tuesday. Incumbent governors and senators seeking re-election generally faced little opposition and had an easy day.

Early in the California campaign, Van de Kamp, 54, was considered a heavy favorite, but a media push by Feinstein propelled her to the lead. The closing days of the race were also marked by an increase in negative commercials from both camps, leading to some speculation that Democrats might hurt themselves far in advance of the fall campaign against the GOP. Despite that, Van de Kamp Tuesday night pledged his support to Feinstein's general election effort.

But Wilson refused to believe it and reveled in the Democratic discord, gleefully telling fellow Republicans: "Germany will be reunified before the Democratic Party."

But while Feinstein might have a tough time against Wilson, it is generally believed that the Republican would have had an easier general election race if Van de Kamp had won the Democratic nomination. At least one recent poll gave Wilson a slight edge over Feinstein and some exit polling done Tuesday showed a Wilson-Feinstein match to be a dead heat.

Highlights of other Tuesday races included:

- Alabama: Republican Gov. Guy Hunt easily defeated token opposition; Democrats Paul Hubbert and Don Siegelman will be in a runoff for the right to challenge him. Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., breezed to a nomination for a third term. His Republican opponent, Bill Cabiniss, was unopposed.

- Iowa: Republican Gov. Terry Branstad was unopposed and will face Democratic winner Don Avenson, an abortion-rights candidate. Abortion was a key issue in the Democratic primary. In the state's hot Senate race, neither incumbent Democrat Tom Harkin nor GOP challenger Tom Tauke had any primary opposition.

- Mississippi: Republican Sen. Thad Cochran had no opposition. There is no Democratic candidate.

- New Jersey: Democratic Sen. Bill Bradley easily defeated token opposition and won nomination to a third term. His Republican opponent, Christine Whitman, had no opponent.

- New Mexico: Republican Sen. Pete Domenici and his Democratic challenger, Tom Benavides, had no opposition. In the race to replace Republican Gov. Garrey Carruthers, former two-term Gov. Bruce King won the Democratic nomination and Frank Bond, a Sante Fe attorney, won the GOP nod.

- South Dakota: There was no opposition for any of the major candidates: Republican Sen. Larry Pressler, his Democratic challenger, Ted Muenster, Republican Gov. George Mickelson or Democrat Bob Samuelson.

- Montana: Sen. Max Baucus, a Democrat, had little trouble beating minor opposition. Four Republicans fought for the right to challenge him.

ZURICH (JUNE 6) UPI - Switzerland's national airline Swissair, which traditionally has posted profits, Wednesday said it has imposed a recruitment embargo because of poor results on North Atlantic and Far East routes and foreign exchange setbacks.

Previous cost-cutting measures, including partial hiring restrictions, failed to prevent continued setbacks in April, Swissair said.

Overall revenue rose 3 percent compared to April 1989, the airline said, but costs before depreciation were 10 percent higher.

The seat-load factor was also 2 percentage points lower at 63.5 percent, Swissair said.

''Europe showed a positive trend but intercontinental services - the North Atlantic and the Far East in particular - were below budgeted objectives '' it said.

''In addition, exchange rate developments for key foreign currencies further eroded revenues for the month,'' the airline said.

The weakness of U.S. dollar and other major currencies against the Swiss franc meant a decline in revenue when moving earnings abroad back to Switzerland.

Swissair said management at a meeting Tuesday approved further cost-cutting measures.

''One of the key points in this latest package is a general, open-ended embargo on all personnel recruitment, with immediate effect,'' the statement said.

''This will be supported by a number of additional measures focusing on both revenues and costs,'' it said. ''The package should have a sustained effect on results for this year, and create a better basic position for 1991.''

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 6) UPI - Engineers pumped frigid liquid hydrogen back aboard the shuttle Columbia Wednesday and almost immediately saw signs of the fuel leak that has wrecked NASA's launch schedule and threatens to ground the ship until early August.

Repeated fueling "runs" confirmed the belief that the leak only shows up when supercold liquid hydrogen is pumped through a critical fuel line fitting, but NASA spokesman George Diller said technicians were unable to immediately pinpoint where the leak was originating.

"We have recreated a leak ... but it is not clear exactly where that leak may be coming from," Diller said. "We have no conclusions about why we're seeing that buildup of hydrogen. It may take considerable data analysis after the test to pinpoint exactly what in that area is creating the leak."

With Columbia facing a roll back to the hangar for repairs and a months-long launch delay, NASA managers ordered the fueling test in a last-ditch bid to pinpoint the elusive leak.

Engineers pumped liquid hydrogen through Columbia's engines and into its external fuel tank. Diller said 21 special instruments were installed to help locate the leak, which apparently shows up only in the presence of liquid hydrogen.

NASA officials strongly suspect the leak is located in the area where the shuttle's primary 17-inch-wide fuel line butts up against the belly of the orbiter. A critical seal in the 17-inch "quick disconnect" fitting is one possible suspect, although the problem could involve internal mechanisms.

Engineers repeatedly pumped hydrogen through the fitting Wednesday to resolve the matter once and for all. As soon as the temperature of the 17-inch disconnect fitting dropped to around minus 420 degrees - the temperature of liquid hydrogen - sensors began detecting a buildup of hydrogen gas in the shuttle's engine compartment and in a cavity where the fuel line line enters the belly of the orbiter.

A top NASA manager said Tuesday the space agency likely will delay Columbia's launch on a 10-day astronomy mission until around Aug. 9 in order to launch the shuttle Atlantis on schedule July 11 to ferry a secret military satellite into orbit.

Engineers cannot fix the quick disconnect fitting without first unhooking Columbia from its external tank. And that can be done only using a giant overhead crane in the Vehicle Assembly Building 3 1/2 miles from the launch pad.

Because of the time needed to fix Columbia, NASA managers may decide to proceed with the shuttle Atlantis's roll out to launch pad 39A next week for blastoff around July 11.

Engineers in the shuttle Discovery's hangar, meanwhile, are continuing to assess the condition of the ship's right-hand payload bay door to find out if the fragile panel was damaged during an accident Monday.

One edge of the 60-foot-long door was pulled up more than ten inches when an overhead crane was accidentally moved, pulling on cables running from the crane to door-closing fixtures on the long panels.

But the long panel returned to its original shape once the tension was released and "looking at it, it doesn't appear to be damaged," a NASA spokesman said. "What's concerning some people is hidden damage under the (heat insulation) blankets."

The Discovery accident was the latest in a series of problems that has thrown NASA's ambitious, around-the-clock launch processing schedule into disarray.

With Columbia facing a roll back to the hangar and a months-long delay, the space agency can ill afford problems with Discovery, scheduled for launch Oct. 5 on a key flight to lift the Ulysses solar probe into space.

To reach an orbit around the poles of the sun, the European-built Ulysses must first use Jupiter's titanic gravity for a slingshot boost out of the plane of the solar system and back toward the sun.

NASA has only 18 days to get Discovery off the launch pad or Ulysses will be grounded for 13 months while Earth and Jupiter return to favorable launch positions. If the shuttle's payload bay door was, in fact, damaged Monday, NASA could face problems getting the ship ready for launch.

DETROIT (JUNE 6) UPI - Chrysler Corp.'s directors, rocked by a series of high-level resignations, are poised to discuss this week a contract extension for the automaker's charismatic chairman, Lee Iacocca.

''I'm sure that will be discussed'' at Thursday's board meeting in New York, an unnamed Chrysler executive told the Detroit News.

The Detroit Free Press quoted ''industry insiders'' as saying the 64-year-old Iacocca may not retire when his current contract expires in December 1991 but plans to keep working until at least 1994.

Chrysler spokesman Steve Harris could not be reached for comment Wednesday but was quoted in the Detroit News as saying he knew of no change in Iacocca's plan to decide on his future at the end of next year.

In the past month, Chrysler has lost three key figures - Vice Chairman Gerald Greenwald, Treasurer Frederick Zuckerman and Vice President Michael Hammes. In addition, the firm saw its earnings slip nearly 80 percent in the first quarter of this year.

''Right now, there are important constituencies within Chrysler's dealers, employees, the financial community and shareholders that would like to see Iacocca stay on,'' said Jack Kirnan, an auto industry analyst with Kidder Peabody & Co. in New York.

''I think it's going to happen. I think it's very critical to Chrysler's future.''

Contributing to the pressure on Iacocca to remain at the helm is his popularity as Chrysler's leading advertising spokesman.

The News quoted ''sources familiar with Chrysler's marketing plans'' as saying the firm is having difficulty devising an advertising plan that does not include Iacocca.

The News also quoted sources as saying Greenwald's departure has cast doubt on the retirement plans of Bennett Bidwell, the 63-year-old chairman of Chrysler Motors.

SACRAMENTO (JUNE 6) UPI - California voters have ended their decade-old tax revolt by increasing gasoline taxes, raising the state's constitutional spending cap and authorizing the sale of nearly $3 billion in bonds to fund improvements in the state's overburdened transportation system.

The $15.5 billion gas tax hike approved Tuesday is the largest since California voters passed property tax-slashing Proposition 13 in 1978 and sent a wave of anti-tax fever rolling across the country.

Proposition 111 doubles the state's 9-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax over the next five years and increases truck weight fees by 55 percent over the next decade. It also raises a limit on state spending so the extra money can be spent.

''People are willing to support a tax if they know what the tax revenue is going to be used for,'' Proposition 111 spokesman Bob Schmidt said.

The state's 9-cent-a-gallon gas tax will rise by a nickel in August and a penny annually for the next four years. Republican Gov. George Deukmejian, who abandoned his no-tax position to head Proposition 111's campaign, said the gas tax increase would cost the typical driver 16 cents more a day, or $58 a year.

Voters also passed a companion measure, Proposition 108, which provides $1 billion in bonds for mass transit.

Californians favored a third measure that authorizes $1.99 billion in bonds for 22 local, intercity and commuter rail projects specifically listed in the measure. It also allocates money for six statewide projects, including the purchase of standardized rail cars and promoting the use of bicycles and ferries.

Supporters of all three propositions said that road congestion is choking the state's economy by restricting the movement of goods and services, producing tons of smog, and discouraging businesses from expanding in California.

The election ignites an ambitious program to build new highways and rail lines in California, but also may act as a bellwether of national attitudes toward tax increases.

Deukmejian says that revenue from the gas tax is falling short of the level needed to maintain California's aging road system. While the number of cars and drivers has jumped dramatically, gas tax revenues have not gone up correspondingly because today's cars get better gas mileage.

California's gas tax is the 46th lowest in the United States and well below the national average of 14 cents a gallon. It has been raised only once over the last 27 years, by 2 cents in 1982.

TOKYO (JUNE 6) UPI - The Khmer Rouge, the Cambodian regime in the late 1970s responsible for the killing fields, could lose its few remaining allies in the struggle for control of the country if they insist on rejecting a new cease-fire agreement, Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen said Wednesday.

Hun Sen, leader of the Vietnamese-installed government of Cambodia, and Prince Norodom Sihanouk, leader of a loose three-party rebel coalition fighting Hun Sen's government, signed a joint communique Tuesday calling on all parties to stop the 11-year civil war by July 31 through ''voluntary self-restraint.''

The Khmer Rouge, militarily the strongest of the three rebel factions, refused to join the cease-fire agreement.

The communist Khmer Rouge, which has scant support in the world because of its bloody reign of terror in the late 1970s, could be cut off from its two rebel allies by not participating in the cease-fire, Hun Sen said at a news conference.

The two other rebel factions, led by Sihanouk and Son Sann, are non-communist, but have joined with the Khmer Rouge in an effort to oust the Vietnamese-back government of Hun Sen.

''If Sihanouk and Son Sann implement the (cease-fire) agreement, it means the Khmer Rouge will be isolated,'' Hun Sen said.

The Cambodian civil war is unusual in that the two main adversaries, the Khmer Rouge and Hun Sen's government, are communist.

The United States and other Western nations oppose the Khmer Rouge because of its history, but also oppose the government because of its ties to Vietnam.

Most communist nations, including the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, support the Vietnamese-backed government and oppose the Khmer Rouge.

China is the primary supporter of the Khmer Rouge.

At least 1 million Cambodians died when the Khmer Rouge held power from 1975 to 1979 and forced the people into primative agrarian communes.

Sihanouk contends the Khmer Rouge must be dealt with if the war is ever to end.

''Our relations with the Khmer Rouge will remain the same,'' Sihanouk said after signing the cease-fire. ''That means that we are not hostile to the Khmer Rouge but we are not operating with the Khmer Rouge.''

Hun Sen said he is willing to let voters decide in an election if they want the Khmer Rouge, or one of the other rebel factions, to take power, but only after a cease-fire is in place and an interim government is established.

He called on China and Thailand to cooperate with implementing the cease-fire.

''The Khmer Rouge could never exist without assistance from China and transit through Thailand,'' Hun Sen said.

Hun Sen called on Sihanouk to convince the Khmer Rouge to join the cease-fire.

He said if, however, the Khmer Rouge convinced Sihanouk to abrogate the cease-fire, then ''the joint communique would be useless paper.''

The rebels have been fighting the Cambodian government since Vietnam invaded Cambodia in 1978 and forced out the Khmer Rouge.

Peace talks began in December 1987 but have made little headway due to sharp differences over the role the Khmer Rouge should play in a new government.

(JUNE 6) UPI - AIDS has claimed one of its longest-living victims and a symbol of hope for others afflicted with AIDS. Dan Turner fought AIDS for more than eight years... eight times longer than the life expectancy for AIDS victims at the time of his diagnosis. Turner was a founding member of the AIDS Foundation, People with AIDS and the AIDS Switchboard. He died Monday in a San Francisco hospice. He was 42 years old.

Vandals broke into Abraham Lincoln's tomb in Springfield, Illinois. Officials say the vandals stole about 100 dollars by breaking into a container where people throw coins to pay for the upkeep of the slain president's tomb. Two stone cigarette urns were smashed... and the granite stairs were chipped. Three years ago, vandals stole a painting of Lincoln from his tomb.

A judicial commission in Oregon plans to hear a complaint about a judge accused of settling two traffic cases by flipping a coin. Judge Ralph Currin, who hears cases in northeast Oregon, says he doesn't remember. But he says he might have flipped a nickel. Either way, the judge says he wants to get the complaint settled. A hearing is set for June 14th.

A criminal justice student at Tennessee State University who served on a jury in Memphis says he slept through a lot of the deliberations. The jury reported itself deadlocked Friday after four days of deliberations. The judge declared a mistrial. The case involved horse racing promoter Charles McVean, charged with bribery while trying to get legalized horse race betting in Tennessee.

AKRON, OH (JUNE 6) UPI - The will of actress Greta Garbo is being contested by a nephew who is seeking a share of the estate, which is estimated to be worth hundreds of millions of dollars and left entirely to her niece. Akron lawyer A. Joseph Waterman said he received a signed contract in Monday's mail from Sven Ake Fredriksson of Oxelosund, Sweden.

Garbo, who died April 15 in New York at the age of 84, left her estate to a niece, Gray Reisfeld of Milltown, N.J., who also is Fredriksson's half-sister. The lawyer said Reisfield and Fredriksson are Garbo's only living blood heirs.

Waterman estimated the value of Garbo's estate at hundreds of millions of dollars. However, documents filed with the will in New York City Surrogate's Court said only that the estate was worth more than $500,000.

Waterman said Garbo owned Manhattan real estate and exclusive paintings and other artwork. The artwork alone, Waterman said, has been estimated a $30 million. "She also led a frugal life and did a tremendous amount of investing, Waterman said. The will mentioned Fredriksson as a "possible non-marital child" who would not be entitled to her estate.

"It is my intention by this will to disinherit all persons (other than my niece) who are or claim to be related to me in any way, regardless of the degree of such relationship, including ... any and all children and their descendants of my deceased brother" except for Reisfield, the will said.

Waterman said Garbo may have had "undue influence" in signing the will in 1984. "If a person has full and sound mind and has no undue influence, a person can do anything they want," said Waterman, who claimed Garbo had regular dialysis treatments and "drank a lot. She had to be taken care of after certain times of the day."

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - President Bush welcomed South Korean President Roh Tae-woo to the White House Wednesday, saying he thinks Roh's meeting this week with Mikhail Gorbachev was ''very important.''

During an Oval Office picture-taking session, Bush told Roh that he thought it ''was very appropriate'' that his meeting in San Francisco with the Soviet leader took place in the United States and ''I think it was a very important meeting.''

Bush said he knew that Gorbachev, who flew to the West Coast after a four-day summit in Washington, had been ''looking forward'' to seeing Roh. The Monday meeting ended a 42-year gap in relations between South Korea and the Soviet Union and resulted in a prediction by Roh that relations with the superpower would be normalized.

''When I met President Gorbachev he also had a very hectic day and seemed to be very happy over the summit talks which must have been successful,'' said Roh.

Bush told the South Korean president that they could go into details of Roh's meeting with Gorbachev after the media left the room.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said that the get-together was mainly to give Roh a chance to report on his talks with the Kremlin leader and to discuss the prospect of lessening tensions in the Pacific region.

Roh emerged from his hour-long meeting with the Gorbachev convinced South Korean-Soviet diplomatic relations are moving toward normalization.

''We have endured some extreme hardships in relation to the Soviet Union during our recent history, but the last couple of years have seen genuine warming of ties and we want to put the past behind us and move forward in friendship,'' Roh said in a statement released by the South Korean Embassy.

Roh hopes that closer ties with Moscow will ease tensions with North Korea a Soviet satellite. The Soviets have strong economic and military ties to North Korea while the United States has no relations with the communist government.

With the pending unification of East and West Germany, the two Koreas are the last nations partitioned under the Cold War political divisions.

Relations between Moscow and Seoul were cool during the Korean War, the turning point occurring 35 years later when the Soviets participated in the 1988 Summer Olympics in the South Korean capital.

Trade had been conducted through third-party countries, but direct links gradually formed after the Olympics. Seoul and Moscow set up trade offices in April 1989 and later established consular departments.

U.S. officials favored good relations between Moscow and Seoul, a scenario that could result in an excellerated withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea and the demilitarized zone.

The United States plans to reduce 7,000 troops from the 43,000 now stationed in Korea by the end of 1993. Seoul accepts the reduction, but opposes further cuts unless corresponding moves are made by North Korea.

TOKYO (JUNE 6) UPI - Hitachi Ltd. said Wednesday it would introduce a series of large-capacity, general-purpose computers with what the company claimed represents the world's fastest processing capabilities.

Hitachi said the new group, consisting of four models in the HITAC M-880 series, features 16 trillionbytes of data space and is designed for large-scale database services, high-speed execution of applications, and overall systems management.

The new series is equipped with maximum main storage capacity of two gigabytes and high-speed performance of up to 2.2 gigabytes a second, the company said. A gigabyte equals one billion bytes of storage.

The company said the M-880 series is equipped with extended storage which can be expanded up to eight gigabytes. A water cooling system is employed for the high-density modules involved.

The three models are separable into four-way, three-way and two-way processors while another is a dyadic processor, the company said. Hitachi indicated shipments will start between October and December.

DETROIT (JUNE 6) UPI - United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber urged Congress Wednesday to restore a balance of power in collective bargaining by outlawing the hiring of permanent replacement workers in labor disputes.

Bieber said a series of court rulings, National Labor Relations Board decisions and changes in business practices have greatly expanded the use of permanent replacements in contract disputes and ''emasculated'' labor rights.

In testimony before the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources in Washington, Bieber said ''employers have no adequate business necessity for hiring permanent replacements.''

''Sooner or later, he said, ''Congress will have to decide whether it wants to continue the institution of free collective bargaining.''

Highlights of his remarks were releasaed in Detroit by the UAW. Bieber testified in favor of Senate legislation which would ban permanently replacing striking workers.

''It is pure double-talk to say that although workers can't be discharged for striking, the worker can be permanently replaced,'' Bieber said.

He said workers do not like walking off the job, ''but it is the right to strike that makes collective bargaining work.''

''Without the protected right to withhold services, workers would be forced to accept whatever is offered,'' he said. ''That's not collective bargaining.''

SACRAMENTO (JUNE 6) UPI - Voters overwhelmingly rejected two Republican-backed initiatives to curb the Legislature's redistricting powers Tuesday after Democratic lawmakers unleashed a multi-million dollar advertising campaign against the measures.

With 98 percent of the precincts reporting, voters rejected 67 percent to 33 percent Proposition 118, which would have left redistricting with the Legislature, but required a two-thirds vote to enact a plan - giving the outnumbered Republican caucus virtual veto authority - plus approval by voters in a statewide election.

Proposition 119, which would have stripped the Legislature of its reapportionment power and given it to an independent commission picked by retired appellate court justices, was defeate 64 percent to 36 percent.

''This is a victory for the Sierra Club, Common Cause and all the public interest groups who were opposed to the initiatives,'' said Karin Caves, a spokeswoman for the campaign against the propositions.

Dejected supporters of both measures said a media blitz featuring actors Jack Lemmon, James Garner and Bea Arthur decimated support for the initiatives.

The backers of Propositions 118 and 119 claimed that Democrats abused redistricting a decade ago and created voting districts that gave incumbents a 98 percent chance of re-election, and virtually guaranteed Election Day victories for a dominating number of Democrats and an artificially constrained number of Republicans.

But opponents of the two measures contended they were a conspiracy by Republicans and big business to wrest control of California's congressional delegation and the Legislature from the Democrats.

Supporters of both initiatives admitted the GOP would win more seats in Congress and the Legislature at Democrats' expense if either measure were passed, but insisted other groups would get more power too, including Hispanics, blacks and women.

Under the current system, the Legislature carves up the state into congressional, state Senate, Assembly and Board of Equalization voting districts every 10 years after the federal census to reflect changes in California's growing population.

The plans must be approved by a simple majority in each house of the Legislature and signed by the governor. Voting district boundaries will next be drawn in 1991.

GENEVA (JUNE 6) UPI - Sweden told its international trading partners Wednesday it does not ''at present'' envisage possible membership in the European Community.

Sweden belongs to the smaller, six-nation European Free Trade Association, which lacks political as well as economic commitments. Other EFTA members are Austria, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Switzerland.

Swedish representative Lars Ensell was questioned about his country's future intentions at a meeting of the permament Council of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

In particular, he was asked whether Swedish interest in the EC-EFTA ''European Economic Space'' issue - on which negotiations begin this month - signals interest in EC membership.

''While supporting the concept of a European Economic Space, Sweden does not regard a possible EC membership as an issue at present,'' Ensell told the Council.

Ensell also rejected criticism in a GATT report of Sweden's emphasis on preferential trade with EFTA and EC countries, comprising 70 percent of its total trade, while restricting imports from developing and other countries.

''Sweden sees no conflict between regional and multilateral trade liberalization which it considers as mutually supportive,'' he said.

The GATT report praised Sweden for a basic free trade orientation but attacked what it saw as excessive protectionism in the chemicals, agricultural and textiles and clothing sectors.

CHICAGO (JUNE 6) UPI - The former chairman of Abbott Laboratories has asked a judge to force the company to pay him $21,700 in dividends and remove restrictions preventing him from selling 51,600 shares of Abbott stock.

Robert A. Schoellhorn filed suit Tuesday against the company in Cook County Circuit Court for improperly removing him from office in March. Abbott has countered with a number of charges, including misuse of corporate assets and misappropriating gifts from Japanese pharmaceutical firms with which Abbott did business.

Abbott informed Schoellhorn on May 14 it would not pay him a 42-cent-a-share dividend earned on 51,600 shares of restricted stock ''though dividends had been routinely paid to Mr. Schoellhorn previously '' according to his petition.An issue of shares in a 2-for-1 stock split also was withheld.

Schoellhorn asked Judge Anthony J. Scotillo for permission to amend the complaint he filed March 9 in a suit to block the Abbott board from removing him as chairman.

A hearing on the request is scheduled for Monday.

BANGKOK, THAILAND (JUNE 6) UPI - The Soviet Union would like a U.N.-sponsored body to probe allegations that Vietnamese troops have remained in Cambodia following their announced withdrawal last year, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Igor Rogachev said Wednesday.

''I think the time now is right to establish an ICM (international control mechanism),'' Rogachev said.

Rogachev said the ICM would be able to assure the international community that Vietnam completely pulled its troops out of Cambodia last September after 10 years of occupation.

''If anybody has doubt in this case, let us speed up our effort to create the ICM as soon as possible,'' he said.

The Soviet Union has provided military supplies to both the Vietnamese and the Cambodian government which the Vietnamese established after their 1978 invasion.

Rogachev repeated Soviet offers to cease that aid if all outside aid to the resistance was also halted.

He said some optimists believed the upcoming Paris International Conference on Cambodia would be able to set up the U.N.-sponored body.

The Soviet minister said ICM should include both military and civil personnel, but declined to say how many.

Rogachev said the recent peace talks in Tokyo between the Vietnamese-backed Prime Minister Hun Sen and Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the leader of the three-part resistance, created a new step towards a settlement.

''It's very good that a joint communique was signed,'' he said.

He blamed the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge for refusing to sign agreement which included an unsupervised cease-fire.

''I think the Khmer Rouge abuse somehow the freedom which they have, and their activities run counter to the interests of all parties concerned,'' said Rogachev who is in Bangkok for the annual session of the Economic and Social Commissioner for Asia and the Pacific.

''We should find a way to persuade the Khmer Rouge to join this agreement '' he said.

The Soviet minister said China, the main supporter of the Khmer Rouge, has softened its stand on the Cambodian issue.

''I think now it is easier for us to find common language with Chinese colleauges when we discuss the Cambodian problem,'' he said.

He said an improvement of Sino-Vietnam relations will also encouarge a Cambodian settlement.

BOSTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Fears triggered by the AIDS epidemic about the safety of the nation's blood supply apparently are causing an unprecedented decline in blood transfusions, scientists said Wednesday.

While transfusions became less frequent, the number of people banking their own blood for future use grew more than tenfold from 1982 to 1987 - part of the ''remarkable'' changes in blood collection and use that AIDS has spawned, said Douglas Surgenor of the Harvard University-affiliated Center for Blood Research.

A study of blood use at 5,600 hospitals between 1982 and 1988 showed transfusions peaked in 1986 and then dropped, indicating safety concerns led doctors to use less blood than in the past, Surgenor said.

The Harvard researcher called the development ''on the whole, good, because it shows physicians are really thinking about how much blood they use, and the risks versus the benefits.''

While the study did not set out to find reasons for the transfusion decline, the fact that the changes coincided with the spread of the AIDS epidemic shows concern about the deadly disease was primarily responsible, Surgenor said.

The transfusion downturn was a striking reversal of the nationwide trend between 1971 and 1980. Government surveys showed transfusions of blood and blood components doubled during those years, Surgenor and colleagues said in The New England Journal of Medicine.

''Transfusions of whole blood and red cells reached a peak of 12.2 million units in 1986, then declined to 11.6 million units in 1987 and continued to decline in 1988,'' the study reported. It said transfusions of the fluid portion of blood known as plasma peaked at 2.3 million units in 1984 and then fell.

Meanwhile, donations in which people bank their own blood for future reinfusion, called ''autologous'' donations, grew from less than 30,000 units in 1982 to 397,000 units in 1987, representing 3 percent of all blood donations, the study said.

The transfusion decline, coupled with the increase ine autologous blood donations and blood imports from Western Europe, meant that ''there was a safe excess of blood'' in the country from 1982 through 1988, researchers said.

Surgenor said tests to screen blood for the AIDS virus and three types of hepatitis ''make the blood supply remarkably safe now.'' A recent estimate put the risk of contracting AIDS from a blood transfusion at one in 150,000.

''Statistically, the risk is low. But from the point of view of someone facing a possible transfusion, it is still a serious risk to take, given the terrible consequences of AIDS,'' the researcher said.

In another study, California researhcers said the fact that most U.S. blood donors are white may be causing problems for sickle cell anemia patients who undergo repeated blood tranfusions.

Sickle cell anemia is a debilitating blood disorder affecting at least 50,000 Americans, most of them black. The disease deforms red blood cells and makes them clump together, clogging capillaries and causing health problems like anemia that requires transfusions.

The study at Children's Hospital in Oakland found that because of mismatches of blood proteins between sickle cell patients and blood donors 30 percent of patients who received transfusions showed signs that their immune systems were rejecting the new blood.

Dr. Elliott Vichinsky, a study co-author, said the transfusion recipients developed antibodies that can create fever, pain, kidney failure and jaundice. In some cases, antibody proliferation destroyed the transfused blood, he said.

Because it is easier to match blood within - rather than between - racial groups, Vichinsky said sickle cell sufferers should benefit from receiving more blood from black donors.

''We're recommending that blood banks try to do a better job working hand-in-hand with the minority community to get more minority donors,'' he said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 6) UPI - If history records the 1900s as a terrible century, then Francis Bacon will be remembered as the artist who best reflected his times.

The 80-year-old Anglo-Irish painter sees the human race raw, bestial, tortured and suffering. The unforgettable icon he has given us is a hunk of bleeding meat hung on a butcher's hook, a symbol of the crucifixion worthy of the century that gave us the Holocaust.

A retrospective of Bacon's work, which opened last weekend at the Museum of Modern Art, the first in this country since 1966, must be rated one of the year's major art events whether or not Bacon is to your taste. Bacon has always had his detractors but no great museum in the world would be without one of his canvases.

There is much in this show gathered from London, Tokyo, Caracas, Canberra, Stockholm and a score more sources that is disturbing, even repulsive, but Bacon's insightful portraits alone will reward a visit. Fifty-nine large paintings covering the years 1945-1988 are as unforgettable as nightmares, especially the matched groups of two or three canvasses that magnify the potency and mystery of Bacon's message.

This message, he has said, is mankind's primal howl. Sometimes the howl emanates from a fanged orifice in a smudged face, at others from headless bodies with contorted limbs, victims of manic brutality or savage sexuality. The howl is muted when he paints a sand dune or a jet of water, but it is still there - the echo of the scream first sounded in modern art by Edvard Munch in 1893.

Bacon has paid his respects to many painters, especially Velazquez in his series of raving popes based on the Spanish master's portrait of Innocent X. He seems indebted to Goya, Bosch, Ingres, Soutine and even Michelangelo. He takes faces apart and puts them back together in much the same way Picasso did.

In essence, however, Bacon is academic rather than avant-garde. His smooth brushwork and subtle use of color mark him as Old Master, not modern maverick.

He creates classic enclosures and stage-like platforms within the limits of his canvas. His pictorial elements are carefully balanced. He is theatrical in the tradition of historical and religious painting. Indeed, he has turned to myths such as the Oresteia of Aeschylus and the Bible for inspiration.

Bacon painted many scurfy self-portraits as well as portraits of a small and treasured group of friends including George Dyer, Isabel Rawsthorne, Frank Auerbach, Lucian Freud and Muriel Belcher, the owner of Bacon's favorite drinking club. His vision of Belcher as a sphinx spoofed her reputation as a loquacious publican.

Sir Lawrence Gowing, in his catalogue essay, says Bacon's fantasy of portraits as a private injury done to his subjects is balanced by his drive for a reconstruction of whatever rhythmic principle gives the unity of life to living shape. The artist has succeeded, never better than in his staggeringly vital portrait of Rawsthorne standing in a Soho street.

Here is woman stripped to her animal essence, unbent and unbending in the face of surging and inscrutable forces which surround her in a sort of motorized bullring setting. Bacon has much to say about death, but he is also interested in the possibility of survival in a world that pushes humans to the limits of their physical and emotional endurance.

The exhibition will remain at MOMA through Aug. 28.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Contrary to popular opinion, pregnant women can get all of the necessary nutrients by eating an adequate, well-balanced diet and do not need vitamin or mineral supplements except for iron, a division of the National Academy of Sciences said Wednesday.

The Institute of Medicine's new guidelines, published in the book ''Nutrition During Pregnancy,'' also said average-sized women should gain 25-35 pounds during pregnancy, up from the group's 1970 recommendation of 20-25 pounds.

Underweight women at the start of pregnancy should gain between 28-40 pounds, the institute said, while overweight women should aim for a 15-25 pound weight gain. Obese women should gain at least 15 pounds but seek individual nutritional counseling.

The institute said vitamin and mineral supplements are not only unnecessary, but could adversely interact with nutrients obtained through a sufficient well-balanced diet.

''Evidence is not sufficient to conclude that routine supplementation with other nutrients is warranted, although clearly there are situations requiring special consideration,'' the institute said, noting the exceptions include complete vegetarians, smokers and users of alcohol or illicit drugs.

''Since nutrient supplements typically contain multiple nutrients, there is the potential for nutrient-nutrient interactions during absorption and metabolism. An increase in the concentration of one nutrient may adversely affect the availability, absorption or utilization of other nutrients provided by the supplement and by diet,'' the institute said.

The institute said iron ''is the only known nutrient for which requirements cannot be met reasonably by diet alone'' and recommended that during the second and third trimester, pregnant women take 30 milligrams of ferrous iron daily.

Kate Ruddon, spokeswoman for the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, said her group advocates iron and folic acid supplements for pregnant women who are good eaters. But she said doctors routinely prescribe vitamin supplements.

''There's a general feeling that most women don't eat proper diets,'' Ruddon said. ''And a lot of women think the more (vitamins) the better, but that could be very harmful.''

Another widely held view is that caffeine during pregnancy is bad. But the institute advised limited consumption of caffeinated products, saying there is only ''inconsistent and fragmentary evidence'' that caffeine is dangerous for the fetus. The institute also discouraged expectant mothers from using special protein powders or formulated high-protein beverages.

And, the institute said the evidence is not in to conclude multivitamin supplements reduce the chances of neural tube birth defects, or spina bifida.

As for weight gain, the institute said recent research shows that increased weight gain, particularly in the second and third trimesters, helps deter low birthweight.

MOSCOW (JUNE 6) UPI - The outbreak of fighting in Kirghizia make it the fourth of the Soviet Union's five Central Asian republics to be torn by ethnic unrest in the past year.

Three-fourths of the vast country's estimated 42 million Moslems live in the five republics along its lower rim, giving the region the unofficial name of the ''Moslem Crescent'' - a reference to the crescent and star that are the symbol of Islam.

Most of the remaining Moslems live in the Transcaucasian republic of Azerbaijan, westward across the Caspian Sea.

Soviet Central Asia is perhaps the country's most exotic region, its capitals among the most ancient and beautiful. It is also is the poorest part of the Soviet Union, its infant mortality rate among the world's highest and its lakes and rivers among the most polluted because of ruthless industrialization.

Although much of the violence in Central Asia appears to have been of ethnic origin, it actually has been tied often to economic conditions in the largely impoverished region.

Here are brief profiles of the five Central Asian republics:

-Uzbekistan, bigger than California, lies at the heart of Central Asia on the western slope of the Pamirs. The mainly Sunni Moslem Uzbeks make up 69 percent of the republic's 19.9 million people, making them the country's third-largest nationality after the Russians and the Ukrainians.

Ethnic Russians make up about 11 percent of the population, with smaller numbers of Tadzhiks, Tatars and other nationalities. The capital of Tashkent is the biggest city in Central Asia with 2.1 million people. It shares a small southern border with Afghanistan, where more than 1 million ethnic Uzbeks live.

Most of the Uzbeks work on the sprawling collective cotton farms that grow two-thirds of all Soviet cotton, making Uzbekistan the third biggest cotten producer in the world.

The diversion of water from rivers to irrigate the cotton fields has shrunk the inland Aral Sea in northwestern Uzbekistan by 40 percent since 1960, turning it into an environmental disaster.

Uzbeks rampaged for two weeks a year ago against Meskhetian Turks, who form a tiny fraction of the population, chasing thousands into Tadzhikistan and forcing the central government to airlift many into Russia. More than 100 people died and 1,000 were wounded in the violence.

-Kazakhstan, the second biggest republic after Russia and as large as the other four Central Asian republics combined, is the size of Argentina and makes up one-eighth of Soviet territory.

Bounded on the west by the Caspian Sea and on the east by China, it is dominated by plateau and desert. The late Premier Nikita Krushchev's ''Virgin Lands'' program in the 1950s turned its pastures into wheat farms that now produce one-third of the country's wheat.

Heavily settled by Russians and Ukrainians during the cultivation drive, Kazakhstan is the only Soviet republic in which the native people do not form a majority of the population.

About 36 percent of its 16.5 million people are Shiite Moslem Kazaks, 41 percent are Russians and 6 percent are Ukrainians.

Kazakhs in the oil town of Novy Uzen rioted for four nights a year ago against Georgians and other merchants from the Caucasus, leaving three people dead and at least 53 wounded.

-Tadzhikistan is wedged between Afghanistan and China. The 24,590-foot Communism Peak is at the center of the Wisconsin-sized mountainous republic and is the highest point in the Soviet Union.

The mainly Sunni Moslem Tadzhiks, who make up 59 percent of the republic's 5.1 million people, are the only Soviet people who speak an Iranian language. Nearly 23 percent of the population is Uzbek, and Russians and Ukrainians combined account for just over 10 percent.

Tadzhiks waged pogroms against Armenian refugees in February, when at least 20 people died and 286 were wounded in nearly a week of violence.

-Kirghizia, bigger than Syria and Lebanon combined, is famed for its wool and livestock breeding. Most of its 4.3 million people live in the Tian Shan mountain range that the republic shares with China across its southeastern border.

The largely Shiite Moslem Kirghizians speak a Turkish dialect and represent 48 percent of the republic's population, with Russians comprising 26 percent, Uzbeks 12 percent and smaller numbers of Ukrainians and Tatars.

Kirghizians and Uzbeks have clashed over land allocation.

-Turkmenistan, about the size of Oklahoma, Missouri and Arkansas put together, is the southernmost part of the Soviet Union. Bordering on Iran and Afghanistan, nearly 90 percent of the republic is desert.

The mainly Sunni Moslem Turkmenians make up 68 percent of the republic's 3.5 million people. Another 13 percent are Russians, 9 percent are Uzbeks and there are smaller numbers of Kazakhs, Tatars, Ukrainians and Armenians.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Constantine Mitsotakis, seeking improved relations with the United States, Wednesday became the first Greek prime minister to visit the White House in 26 years.

''This is the Rose Garden,'' President Bush told Mitsotakis during a picture-taking session. The leaders shook hands, smiled and Bush then led Mitsotakis back into the White House for a working lunch.

The Greek prime minister has said he wants to fully normalize relations with the United States, which experienced stormy times with his predecessor, Socialist Andreas Papandreou.

Conservative Mitsotakis, 71, was elected in April. Papandreou, who had held office since 1981, had sought to reduce ties with the West.

''We went through a period during which relations were not what they should have been,'' Mitsotakis said in an interview published Wednesday in The Washington Post.

The prime minister said he would urge Bush to put pressure on the Turkish government to make new concessions to end the 16-year-old division of the Mediterranean island of Cyprus.

Cyprus has been divided since a 1974 invasion by Turkey. Mitsotakis said Washington might be able to convince Turkey to cut its occupation forces in half as an indication of good will.

Bush arranged to brief Mitsotakis on his summit talks with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, which produced accords on arms control and trade, but failed to resolve the dispute over German unification.

Mitsotakis, who will attend his first NATO summit meeting in London next month, said he supports German reunification. But the former World War II prisoner of Germany said he understands the Soviets' security concerns.

Papandreou's government had sought the removal of four U.S. military bases from Greek soil.

Last week, Mitsotakis initialed an agreement that calls for the closing of two installations near Athens, as proposed by the Pentagon, but maintaining two others for another eight years on the southern island of Crete.

TEHRAN, IRAN (JUNE 6) UPI - President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani said Wednesday that Iran is serious about wanting the Western hostages in Lebanon freed, but ''the United States made the situation difficult with its irresponsible attitude.''

''We are serious about this,'' Rafsanjani told a news conference in Tehran in reference to Iran's intention to help free the captives. ''If the United States wants it, the door has been opened.

''Our present policy is to help the release of all hostages, but the United States made the situation difficult with its irresponsible attitude '' he said.

He said three factors made it difficult for Iran to seek the release of more Americans - the U.S. Senate resolution recognizing Jerusalem as Israel's capital, U.S. action ''facilitating the immigration of Soviet Jews to Israel'' and a U.S. veto of a proposed U.N. fact-finding mission to the Israeli-occupied territories.

He said Lebanese hostage-takers had ''shown responsibility'' by releasing American hostages Robert Polhill and Frank Reed in April after Iranian mediation, but ''the United States has had an irresponsible and arrogant reaction.''

After the release of the Americans, Iran expected an appropriate response from the West, such as the release of Shiite Moslem prisoners held captive in Kuwait and Israel, he said.

Iran has asked the United States to show goodwill by helping secure the release of Lebanese and Palestinians held by Israel and four Iranians taken captive by Lebanese Christian Phalangist militiamen in 1982.

''We have learned officially from a government and reliable sources in East Beirut that the Iranian hostages are alive,'' he said.

Rafsanjani said there was no connection between the presence in Tehran of representatives of the Lebanese Hezbollah, or Party of God, and the hostage issue. There are at least 16 Western hostages being held in Lebanon, including six Americans.

Hezbollah and PLO representatives were in Tehran as guests of the Iranian government to attend ceremonies marking the first anniversary of the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's death, he said.

The Iranian president also said Britain should comply with an Iranian Parliament resolution passed last year calling for an apology from London before Iran could resume diplomatic relations with Britain.

He said if British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher condemned writer Salman Rushdie's novel ''The Satanic Verses,'' considered blasphemous to Islam, ''there will remain no problem on the way of resumption of ties.''

Rafsanjani said the British government ''must deplore the insults to Islam in 'The Satanic Verses' and declare its respect for Muslim sanctities,'' but that Iran could not revoke Khomeini's religious decree calling for Rushdie to be killed for writing the novel.

The Iranian president also said he would insist on a role for the United Nations if he is to meet with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to discuss a durable peace in the Persian Gulf. He was referring to two letters he received from Hussein last month, proposing a meeting in Moscow under Soviet auspices.

Hussein's call for a meeting with Rafsanjani came more than a year after Iran-Iraq talks on establishing a durable peace broke down. The U.N. talks began days after the August 1988 cease-fire that ended their eight-year war.

NEW YORK (JUNE 6) UPI - Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers, the NBA's Most Valuable Player the past two seasons, Wednesday headed the All-NBA first team for the eighth straight season.

Chicago's Michael Jordan, Philadelphia's Charles Barkley and Utah's Karl Malone also repeated their first-team honors from a year ago. The center was New York's Patrick Ewing, a second-team selection last season.

Johnson, who last month won his third MVP trophy in the past four years, was the leading vote-getter for the All-NBA team, chosen by a 92-member nationwide media panel. He received 458 points, including 91 first-team votes.

Barkley and Malone were next were 456 points, with Barkley receiving 91 first-team votes and Malone 90. Jordan, named to the All-NBA team for the fourth straight year, received 453 points and 90 first-team votes.

Ewing won the closest race in the balloting, edging out Houston's Akeem Olajuwon for the center position. Ewing was named to the first team by 44 panel members and received 344 total points. Olajuwon recorded 42 first-team votes and 326 points.

Joining Olajuwon on the second team were Kevin Johnson and Tom Chambers of Phoenix, Boston's Larry Bird and Utah's John Stockton.

Named to the third team were San Antonio's David Robinson, Portland's Clyde Drexler, Detroit's Joe Dumars, Golden State's Chris Mullin and James Worthy of the LA Lakers.

MADISON, WI (JUNE 6) UPI - A 45-year-old man wants court permission to marry his 23-year-old adopted daughter because they have developed a relationship ''in the romantic sense.''

James Salt adopted Janett Christen Caylor two years ago when she was 21. The father and daughter are petitioning a judge to overturn the adoption so they can get married.

''The original reason for this adult adoption was that I had nobody in my life and Janett had nobody in her life after having lived for years in a foster home and with a father who had eventually left her life and a mother who had disappeared when Janett was but a small child,'' Salt said in a petition filed with the court.

Salt explained there was no ''romantic relationship'' at the time of the adoption but that over the last several months ''it has become apparent to each of us that we are in love in the romantic sense.''

Dane County Corporation Counsel Cal Kornstedt has said the county clerk cannot issue a marriage license to the couple while Caylor's birth certificate lists Salt as her father. Kornstedt said if the adoption were dissolved, there would be no objection to issuing the license.

But an attorney for the state Bureau of Vital Records said the bureau would not remove Salt's name from Caylors' birth certificate, even if the judge dissolved the adoption.

A hearing is set for June 22.

SAVANNAH, GA (JUNE 6) UPI - A Kentucky Fried Chicken employee fired for throwing hot grease on a robbery suspect said Wednesday the incident would not have occurred if police had responded quickly to his call for help.

James Hampton, 45, assistant manager at the West Bay Street Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant, said he received his termination notice Tuesday, the day after Hampton threw a bucket of hot grease on a customer who robbed him and another restaurant employee last month.

''The notice said: 'James accosted a customer with hot shortening leaving us no choice but to terminate,''' Hampton said.

Hampton's supervisors in Statesboro were unavailable for comment Wednesday.

''This incident could have been avoided if the police had responded. Sometimes it's difficult for them to respond as readily you want to them to, but I went up and filed a complaint (in the robbery),'' Hampton said. ''I'm not criticizing the Savannah Police Department. I'm just saying we have a poor system here in this city, this state and this country where the victim gets treated worse than the criminal.''

Hampton said he recognized the customer as the man who had robbed him and another employee at gunpoint May 4. He said the suspect and a companion were armed and he feared they planned another robbery so he triggered an alarm under the cash register and called police.

''Both of them were armed. I saw their weapons. They sat down to eat, waiting for the place the clear. I waited about 20 minutes. The police never did show up so I went in back ... got me some grease and poured it on him,'' Hampton said.

Hampton said the man ran screaming out of the restaurant and the police arrived about 10 minutes later. The man, tentatively identified as Tyrone McPherson, was captured and taken to a Savannah hospital, where he was in good condition with grease burns Wednesday.

Police said no charges are planned in the grease-throwing incident and that McPherson is a suspect in the May 4 robbery.

Hampton said the suspect also came to the restaurant last Friday with five companions, but left before police arrived.

''It took the police 45 minutes to get there (Friday) and by that time they'd left. So, when he came in Monday, I just handled it my way. I have to defend myself. I have employees, especially teenage employees, and I'm responsible for them. That's my job - at least it was,'' he said.

Hampton said he did not plan to challenge his dismissal.

''I enjoyed it. I really did. I'll just go look for another job,'' he said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - There's still a long way to go in the National Basketball Association championship series but Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., is one step closer to hosting a salmon bake for Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich.

Hatfield and Levin agreed to a friendly wager on the series which began Tuesday night with a come-from-behind 105-99 Detroit Pistons victory in Game 1 over the Portland Trail Blazers.

Levin agreed to host an ''NBA Breakfast of Champions'' for Hatfield and friends if the Pistons lose the best-of-seven series. The breakfast will feature Michigan-made products such as sausage, cereal and apple juice.

But if Detroit wins a second straight league title, Hatfield has offered to host a salmon bake for Levin and his friends.

Hatfield, just back from a trip to Oregon, said fans there have been bathing in ''Blazermania.'' He said the salmon clearly is a better deal but that he does not expect to have to put it up anyway.

The senator's Capitol Hill office is adorned with the slogan: ''Rip City Returns - Go Blazers!'' and each entrance has Blazer signs as well.

Hatfield aide Bill Calder said Tuesday that nobody from the senator's office is out buying a salmon just yet - and they don't expect to have to. He said Hatfield probably will attend Sunday's Game 3 in the series at Portland.

''I was absolutely shocked when I spoke to a member of Senator Levin's staff who said she'd never heard of the Blazers before, clearly reflecting an arrogance that is emanating around Detroit,'' Calder said.

''Given how some species of salmon are nearing significantly reduced numbers, we want to make it clear this will be a hatchery fish,'' the aide said.

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (JUNE 6) UPI - Yugoslavia, pulling out of an economic tailspin, Wednesday announced a May inflation rate of 0.4 percent and forecast that its economic reform plan would keep prices stable for the rest of the year.

Deputy Federal Trade Minister Branko Maricic noted that the May rate was higher than the April level of minus 0.2 percent - the lowest in more than a decade - but said the slight increase was due to price rises for seasonal farm produce set by private farmers.

''This does not change anything in the inflation program. It is of no concern,'' he told reporters.

Maricic said the government would import about $20 million worth of fruits and vegetables to force Yugoslav farmers to lower domestic prices.

''Had it not been for the high prices of fruits and vegetables, the monthly inflation in May would have been minus 0.6 percent. The farm produce prices went up 64 percent in May compared with April, and this is why the May inflation was 0.4 percent,'' Maricic said.

Yugoslavia usually has no need to import acricultural produce, including corn and wheat.

The country plunged into an economic crisis some 10 years ago and in December, the monthly inflation reached a record 64.3 percent, representing a 2 percent per day rise.

In response, the government of Prime Minister Ante Markovic in January implemented its economic reform plan, introducing free market regulations in already decentralized Yugoslavia's unique socialist economy.

Markovics plan of ''political democracy and economic efficiency'' brought almost immediate results, with inflation in January brought down to 17.3 percent. By March, it was measured at 2.6 percent.

As part of his prescription, Markovic froze salaries, liberalized imports, encouraged private ownership and foreign investment, and made the Yugoslav dinar convertible, pegging the exchange rate to the West German mark.

Maricic predicted there would be no inflation in coming months and that the overall annual rate was being projected at betwen 13 percent and 20 percent.

Yugoslavia's main problem now is how to revive production to pull forward the country's economy as industrial production has been on a constant decline in the past months.

KOBLENZ, WEST GERMANY (JUNE 6) UPI - A judge sentenced a retired U.S. Army sergeant to life inprisonment Wednesday, ruling his sale of military secrets to East European Communist governments put the entire Western security at risk.

Judge Ferdinand Schuth said the documents leaked by Clyde Lee Conrad, 42, revealed so much of Western defense strategy that in the event of a war, the West would have either had to capitulate or use nuclear weapons on German soil.

The jurist said the information gathered by the Warsaw Pact through Conrad would have rendered NATO's defense system virtually useless if war had broken out. He said the enemy would have known exactly where and how many NATO troops and weapons were deployed.

The court was told that Conrad had been paid more than $1.3 million between 1975 and 1985 by the then Communist governments of Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

Secret service experts said they believed the amount was the largest such fee ever paid to an espionage agent.

Schuth described Conrad as an ''unscrupulous criminal seeking only financial gain.''

He noted that Hungarian authorities had officially apologized to the Bonn government for the spying, showing the enormity of the crime Conrad had committed.

The court was told earlier that Conrad had given the Communist governments ''mountains'' of top secret U.S. military documents, including some concerning the wartime use of nuclear weapons and locations of weapons depots, maneuver assessments and deployment plans.

Prosecutors said Conrad's activities endangered not only West Germany but also the 250,000 U.S. troops stationed in the country.

Conrad, a native of Bergholz, Ohio, was a document custodian with U.S. forces in West Germany for five years before he retired in 1985.

Chief Federal Prosecutor Kurt Rebmann said last week that Conrad's case was the worst instance of high treason his office ever dealt with.

''There has been no treason case of an even remotely comparable weight,'' he said.

The judge found Conrad guilty of ''high treason in a particularly serious case'' and sentenced him to life imprisonment, the maximum penalty under West German law.

Conrad was arrested in West Germany in August 1988 and formally indicted one year later for selling top secret nuclear and other military plans to the Hungarian and Czechoslovakian secret services over a 10-year period.

Conrad joined the army in 1965 and was transferred to the 8th Infantry Division in Bad Kreuznach in 1980.

He eventually rose to the rank of sergeant first class and worked as a document custodian - a position that gave him access to key documents on U.S. installations and strategy.

Some of the documents he was accused of selling were coded ''cosmic secret'' and related to U.S. missile bases and a NATO pipeline system.

Conrad has lived in West Germany with his German wife and their son since he retired from the army in September 1985.

Because he was a civilian at the time of his arrest, he was tried by a West German court rather than a U.S. military court.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 6) UPI - Acting Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir wrestled Wednesday for support from potential government partners who indicated the Likud leader had dragged out negotiations in hopes of forming another Likud-Labor coalition.

The last-minute haggling with right-wing and religious parties centered on the distribution of Cabinet portfolios and ministry positions and freedom in voting on such issues as electoral reform.

Shamir must notify President Chaim Herzog by Friday whether he can form a government, which then would be presented to the Israeli Parliament for a vote of confidence.

On Monday, Shamir said he had 61 to 65 votes in the 120-member Knesset and would present his new government next week. In addition to his 40-member Likud faction, his support comes from religious and right-wing parties.

One of the Knesset's religious parties, the ultra-Orthodox Agudat Israel, announced Wednesday it would vote against a Shamir-led government. But at least one member has indicated he would support Shamir, apparently providing the margin of victory if no Likud supporters defect.

Despite an atmosphere of optimism following agreements among several smaller parties favoring Shamir, a Likud-led coalition is not necessarily ensured in the often quickly changing Israeli political scene.

Ehud Olmert, minister for minority affairs and a Likud negotiating team member, denied rumors of talks with the center-left Labor Party to form another ''national unity'' Likud-Labor coalition. Analysts maintained opposition within Labor and Likud also likely would rule out a Likud-Labor coalition.

But Yisrael Medad, spokesman for the right-wing Tehiya Party, said he believed Shamir still hoped for a coalition with Labor.

Right-wing and religious parties said they provided Shamir with every opportunity to form a Likud-led coalition, reducing their demands as his Friday deadline approached. A new government could last until the next scheduled elections in 1992 or new elections could be called by the Knesset.

Israel's nearly three-month-old political crisis began when Shamir rejected a U.S. proposal for talks between Israel and Palestinians and fired Labor leader Shimon Peres from the Cabinet as finance minister.

Apparently believing they would be able to form a narrow government without Likud, Labor officials successfully orchestrated a vote of no confidence against Shamir two days later. But Peres's attempts to create a government failed and Shamir was handed the mandate.

Shamir has remained head of a transitional government since the political collapse, retaining several portfolios once held by Labor ministers, including the defense ministry.

''I have no doubt that the negotiations will continue until the last minute, just as I have no doubt that at the last minute coalition agreements will be signed,'' said Knesset member David Magen, a Likud negotiating team member.

But the Ma'ariv newspaper in its lead editorial sounded a less than optimistic note.

''It is said that Mr. Shamir does not want to form the government that he is able to form and is not able to form the government that he wants to form,'' Ma'ariv said.

''That is to say, we do not know what is happening. But it seems to us in light of the process, something good will not come out of it.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - A unique family portrait of Earth and its neighbors taken from deep space, which NASA planned to release Wednesday, shows just ''how insignificant we are,'' an official said.

Scientists Edward Stone of the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, Calif., and Carl Sagan of Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., were to discuss the photo and accompanying portraits during a news conference at NASA headquarters.

The 8-by-10-inch black and white photo, snapped by the Voyager 1 spacecraft Feb. 13 when the probe was nearly 4 billion miles from Earth, shows Earth, Venus, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and the sun as tiny white dots against a vast black background, said spokesman Jurrie van der Woude.

''It shows you how insignificant we are,'' said van der Woude of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena. ''It may not be a photograph that makes you say, 'Wow.' But when you look at it, it's a sobering thought that we're so small.''

The pictures are among more than 60 images taken by the Voyager 1 spacecraft as the hardy probe sailed toward the outer reaches of the solar system, providing a once-in-a-lifetime alien's eye view of Earth's home.

No other photographs have ever been taken of the solar system from that vantage point and no other space probes are planned that could capture such images.

The image, a mosaic constructed from the Voyager images, does not include Pluto because it was out of Voyager's field of view. Mercury and Mars also are missing because they were both too close to the sun as viewed by Voyager.

Voyager 1, launched September 1977 on a mission to explore the outer planets of the solar system, currently is cruising toward the edge of the solar system on an endless space odyssey.

Two television cameras aboard the craft took the priceless pictures over a four-hour period starting at 8:12 p.m. EST Feb. 13. The United States was facing away from the spacecraft at the time the pictures were taken.

The images were stored on magnetic tape and radioed to Earth over an 11-day period starting March 16. It took Voyager 30 minutes to transmit each photo and the signals, traveling at 186,000 miles per second, took more than 5 1/2 hours to complete the trip. Traveling at 65 mph, it would take a motorist some 6,500 years to reach Voyager 1's photo position.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Prosecutors asked a court Wednesday to send former national security adviser John Poindexter to prison for his role in the Iran-Contra scandal, comparing his actions to giving ''a diet of lies'' to Congress.

Poindexter, 53, a former vice admiral, was convicted of lying to Congress and blocking its investigation into the worst scandal of Ronald Reagan's presidency.

''John Poindexter's crimes did violence to this nation's fundamental principles of government,'' the office of independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh said in papers filed in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

The prosecution said Poindexter should be sentenced to prison even though other people convicted in the scandal - notably former White House aide Oliver North and Robert McFarlane, Poindexter's predecessor - were placed on probation and assigned to community service.

''This defendant occupied a position where his judgment was critical and in many instances - if former President Reagan's deposition testimony is any guide - final,'' the prosecution wrote.

Reagan, in videotaped testimony at the Poindexter trial, said he authorized the missile sale to Iran. But Reagan also testified that he always told his aides to obey the law, adding that he never knew about the diversion and questioned whether there ever was one.

Poindexter's lawyer, Richard Beckler, could not be reached immediately for comment.

Walsh argued in favor of incarceration for Poindexter, the highest-ranking Reagan adinistration official convicted in the scheme to sell weapons to Iran and send the profits to the U.S.-backed Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

At the time Congress had banned U.S. aid to the Contras.

The prosecution said: ''The sentence imposed must be adequate to punish the defendant for his criminal conduct and to warn other high-ranking public officials that criminal violations of the public trust will result in more than mere loss of public employment. For these reasons, the government respectfully requests that the court sentence (Poindexter) to a period of incarceration.''

Poindexter, who graduated at the top of his U.S. Naval Academy class, resigned from the national security adviser's job in 1986 as the Iran-Contra affair began to unravel. A jury convicted him of five felony counts of lying to and obstructing Congress.

Prosecutors pointed out that North was a subordinate acting on the decision of his superiors.

''John Poindexter was precisely one of those superiors. There can be no serious argument in this case that the defendant is entitled to leniency because he was a mere subordinate,'' the prosection wrote.

For his part, McFarlane pleaded guilty to four misdemeanor couts and cooperated with the government's investigation, Walsh's office said.

''Such cooperation traditionally weighs heavily in favor of leniency at sentencing,'' the papers said.

Prosecutors argued, ''As in many areas of our national life, the Constitution, reinforced by a number of statutes, commits foreign policy and national security affairs to a system of government by co-equal branches.

''... If, as occurred in this case, high-ranking officials of one branch of government feel free to feed the other branch a diet of lies, then the constitutional system will surely sicken and eventually die.''

(JUNE 6) UPI - Engineers at Cape Canaveral are conducting a fuel-loading test on the shuttle Columbia this morning in hopes of discovering an elusive hydrogen leak. NASA technicians are pumping frigid liquid hydrogen into the shuttle's main engine fuel lines to duplicate conditions that were present when the leak showed up last week. The leak has delayed Columbia's launch indefinitely.

South Korean President Roh visits the Oval Office this morning for a meeting with President Bush. The two leaders are expected to discuss Roh's Monday meeting with Soviet President Gorbachev ... which ended 42 years of diplomatic silence between Moscow and Seoul. Roh said earlier that he's grateful for U-S help in warming South Korean ties with the Soviet Union.

A West German court today sentenced a retired U-S Army sergeant to life in prison for selling military secrets to the former communist governments of Hungary and Czechoslovakia. The German judge said 42-year-old Clyde Lee Conrad received more than one-Million 300-thousand dollars for delivering secrets between 1975 and '85. Conrad was a document custodian with U-S forces.

Reports from the Soviet news agency Tass says the Soviet Interior Ministry is sending more troops to the republic of Kirghizia to stem ethnic bloodshed that has claimed at least 32 lives in two days of violence. A Soviet newspaper says the violence, which began Monday over a land dispute in Kirghizia's second largest city of Osh... has spread to the republic's capital and other towns.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 6) UPI - Engineers pumped frigid liquid hydrogen back aboard the shuttle Columbia Wednesday, confirming the presence of an elusive leak in a critical fuel line fitting that threatens to delay launch until early August.

While the exact location of the leak was not immediately clear, the 2 1/2-hour fueling test confirmed that it only shows up when supercold liquid hydrogen is pumped through a critical ''quick disconnect'' fitting where the ship's 17-inch-wide fuel line enters the belly of the orbiter.

The test results appeared to eliminate any possibility of a problem that can be corrected at the launch pad, making it virtually certain Columbia will be hauled back to its hangar Sunday for extensive repairs that could delay launch until after a July flight by the shuttle Atlantis.

''There's no chance it can be fixed at the pad,'' said a NASA official who requested anonymity. ''Their last hope before the test was that it was in (a different area). That was the only thing that could have saved them, because that could be fixed at the pad.''

An official decision on hauling Columbia back to the Vehicle Assembly Building where it can be removed from its external tank for repairs could come as early as Thursday when shuttle program director Robert Crippen holds a news conference to discuss the results of the fueling test and NASA's launch plans.

Sources said the earliest Columbia could be rolled back to the Vehicle Assembly Building is next Thursday.

''There is a feeling among the test team that we have some very good high-fidelity data to make a determination, after the data analysis, about where this leak may be coming from,'' said NASA spokesman George Diller.

''The data analysis will begin immediately so that some decisions can be made, hopefully by (Thursday), on where the problem is and what will be involved to fix it and what that may mean in terms of launch of Columbia.''

The leak is located somewhere in the area where the shuttle's primary 17-inch-wide fuel line butts up against the belly of the orbiter.

A critical seal in the 17-inch quick disconnect fitting is one suspect. Another is problems with internal ''shaft seals'' near giant valves that close just before the external tank is jettisoned in space.

Yet a third possibility involves the alignment of the external tank. The giant fuel tank's shuttle attachment struts were not machined properly and as a result, the tank is 200-thousandths of an inch out of perfect alignment. The specification is 90-thousandths of an inch.

''The rumors floating around now are that the tank misalignment caused the problem,'' said an engineer who asked not to be named. ''This tank was so far out of alignment compared to what's allowable, they're afraid it could have warped the 17-inch disconnect on the orbiter side.''

If the problem is traced to the tank side of the fitting, engineers could simply replace the rust-colored tank. But if it is traced to internal shuttle mechanisms, Columbia could be faced with an even longer launch delay.

In any case, sources say NASA managers likely will delay Columbia's 10-day astronomy mission until at least early August in order to launch the shuttle Atlantis around July 11 on a secret military mission.

Columbia's 10-day astronomy mission originally was scheduled for launch May 30, but the 36th shuttle flight was put on hold when hydrogen gas spewed into the ship's engine compartment during fuel loading.

Extensive room-temperature tests to pinpoint the leak using helium in place of hydrogen were unsuccessful. NASA managers ordered Wednesday's fueling test in the belief the problem only shows up in the presence of supercold liquid hydrogen, which chills the fuel lines and seals to around minus 420 degrees.

That is precisely what happened Wednesday. As soon as the temperature of the 17-inch disconnect fitting dropped to ''cryogenic'' temperatures sensors began detecting a buildup of hydrogen gas in the shuttle's engine compartment and in a cavity where the fuel line line enters the belly of the orbiter.

A spokesman said readings higher than 40,000 parts per million - a 4 percent concentration - of hydrogen were detected in and around the cavity.

Engineers cannot fix the quick disconnect fitting without first unhooking Columbia from its external tank. And that can be done only using a giant overhead crane in the Vehicle Assembly Building 3 1/2 miles from the launch pad.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - A mouse study indicates hormone injections may help treat a rare inherited disorder that makes humans unable to sweat properly, researchers reported Wednesday.

About one out of 10,000 babies in the United States is born with a genetic defect that causes them to have very few or no sweat glands, no hair and dental abnormalities.

The syndrome, called hypohidrotic ectodermal dysplasia, is not fatal with appropriate medical care but can lead to overheating in babies with the syndrome.

Normal people have about 2 million sweat glands throughout the body. The fluid released by the sweat glands through pores in the skin removes wastes and also helps control body temperature.

In experiments involving a type of mutant mouse with a genetic defect that causes a lack of sweat glands similar to the human disorder, scientists from University of Guelph in Ontario said they found injecting a hormone called epidermal growth factor shortly after birth made the mice develop sweat glands, although fewer than in normal mice.

The hormone treatment consisted of a month of daily injections that started at birth. The treated mice were able to produce sweat, although less than normal mice, for up to two weeks after treatment stopped, researchers said.

In a study published in the journal Nature, Stan Blecher and his colleagues said their findings provide experimental support for the hypothesis that the growth hormone plays an important role in the development of sweat glands, teeth and hair.

In addition, because scientists believe the defective mouse gene to be equivalent to the defective human gene, the Canadian researchers said their results indicate the hormone should be studied as a possible therapy for babies with the sweating disorder.

''Reversal of the trait in the mouse homologue (version) of the disease indicates that an important genetically determined congenital defect in humans may become treatable,'' they wrote.

SAN JOSE, CA (JUNE 6) UPI - Computer retailer Businessland Inc. announced a long-awaited deal Wednesday to sell personal computers in Japan through a $20 million joint venture with five major Japanese electronics manufacturers and distributors.

The agreement is unusual in that it indicates a willingness by Japanese companies to help fund the entry of an American retailer into Japan's market, Businessland said.

Businessland, the largest U.S. retailer of computers to businesses, will hold a 54 percent equity stake in the venture, to be called Businessland Japan Co. Ltd.

Softbank Corp., Japan's largest distributor of computer software and peripherals, will hold a 26 percent share. Manufacturers Canon Inc., Fujitsu Ltd., Sony Corp. and Toshiba Corp. will hold 5 percent each.

''The structure of our joint-venture relationship allows us to maintain the necessary control to serve international customers while assuring that Businessland Japan becomes accepted in the Japanese business community,'' said Reizo Harada, president of the joint venture.

Harada previously managed Japanese operations for Sun Microsystems Inc., theMountain View, Calif., manufacturer of computer workstations.

Businessland Japan will initially sell products made by Canon, Fujitsu, IBM, NCR, NEC, Sony and Toshiba.

For the time being, the venture will not sell Apple computers - one of Businessland's best-selling product lines in the United States. Nor will it sell the Next computer workstation developed by Steven Jobs, co-founder of Apple Computer Inc.

Businessland said it was particularly attracted by the large market in Japan for computer networks, in which personal computers are linked together so users can share information.

Businessland predicted the Japanese market for computer products would grow from $4 billion in 1988 to $13 billion by 1993.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - A Senate committee approved a plan Wednesday to break a ''circle of poison'' by banning the export of pesticides not allowed for use by U.S. farmers, despite charges the action is misguided and destined to fail.

The Agriculture Committee vote means the legislation will be folded into the five-year farm policy law that is being written this year. Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said the plan would ensure the safety of imported foods.

''Circle of poison'' is shorthand for what proponents see as a shortcoming of current regulations. Pesticides can be exported, even if banned in the United States, and could be used on food crops shipped to U.S. grocery stores.

Imports account for one-fourth of the 134 billion pounds of fruits and vegetables consumed annually by Americans. Critics say food inspections are not an adequate safeguard against excessive or illegal residues in imported foods.

''I feel strongly we need to establish the same standards for domestic and foreign production of food,'' Leahy said.

Republicans on the committee argued the legislation was a paternalistic attempt to impose U.S. standards on other nations and could be easily circumvented. Sens. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., and Kit Bond, R-Mo., said manufacturers simply could move factories overseas.

''This entire section of the bill is entirely misguided,'' said Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash.

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, the only Democrat other than Leahy to speak on the issue, called the plan ''a moderate proposal'' to prevent uncaring use of dangerous chemicals.

''If it's banned, it ought to be banned from coming back into this country '' Harkin said.

The administration opposed the legislation and said it should be considered as part of a food safety bill or a reform of pesticide regulations.

The committee approved the legislation on a voice vote following a relatively brief discussion of a revised draft written by staff workers.

Under the legislation, foods would be banned from importation if they are treated with pesticides that U.S. farmers cannot use.

Pesticides could not be exported if they cannot be used in the United States or if no U.S. tolerance level has been set for them in foods.

In addition, hazardous chemicals could not be shipped to a nation that does not want them, will not buy them from another supplier and will not make them itself. Countries would be asked annuanlly about new chemicals.

Exceptions to the ban would be allowed in cases of research, disease control and famine.

The revisions to the bill included a provision to relax the grading standards used on U.S.-grown fruits and vegetables to allow more cosmetic blemishes on produce. The change was intended to reduce the use of pesticides.

Dan Haley, the head of the Agricultural Marketing Service, said it would cost $53 million to change the standards.

(JUNE 6) UPI - Authorities say two men are being held today in Medford, New York, for their handling of 20 tons of fireworks with an estimated value of one-Million dollars. Antonio Mattino and John Beckman are charged with several felony and misdemeanor counts. The fireworks cache ranges from one-and-a-half-inch firecrackers to foot-long mortar shells.

Police in Mineola, New York, say they arrested a man who's suspected of pulling off five bank heists, one grocery store holdup and an attempted bank robbery during a three-week period. Authorities say 28-year-old Christopher LaPara is awaiting arraignment today after his arrest last night outside a motel in Queens. The robberies netted the suspect at least 95-hundred dollars.

Marilyn Quayle told a National Press Club luncheon that the 1988 presidential campaign was- quoting here- ''an ugly chapter in journalism and an ugly chapter in my life.'' Mrs. Quayle complained yesterday that- in her words- ''It hurt reading stories or seeing reports about a man bearing almost NO resemblance to the one I love deeply.''

Carol Van DeHoef was reunited with her family for the first time in 55 years thanks to a message she placed in a jar beside her mother's grave last month in Mondamin, Iowa. Her brother, Ray Henson of Omaha, answered the note. All eight children of Martha Bell Henson and Frank Henson lived near Mondamin... but were separated after their mother died in 1935. Ray says he'd found all his siblings but Carol. The family held a reunion yesterday in Omaha.

LONDON (JUNE 6) UPI - Stock prices closed lower in one of the slowest trading sessions in recent weeks Wednesday on the London International stock exchange as brokers focused their attentions on a famous horse race rather than economic concerns.

The closely-watched blue chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which managed an 1.1-point gain on Tuesday, fell 21.6 points to 2,358.5. The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 12.9 points to 1,881.0.

An estimated 310 million shares changed hands, well below the 490 million shares traded on Tuesday.

Market analysts, noting the thin volume, said many instuitutional players left the market shortly after the opening to attend The Derby at Epsom Downs, one of the premier sporting events of the British calendar.

Quest for Fame, a 7-to-1 shot owned by Prince Khalid Abdullah of Saudi Arabia, won the 211th running of the race.

Analysts said the market, which opened sharply lower following Tuesday's drop in New York, was depressed amid speculation of a $168.5 million sell-off being planned by a major securities house and Wall Street's weak performance.

Analysts said with just two trading days to go to the end of the current trading account, market markers were driving prices lower to attract buyers.

On the trading floor, among the most widely traded stocks, Ladbroke, a leisure company, gained 8 cents to $5.12 amid expectations the Derby race will produce excellent results for the company's betting chain.

Bass fell 43 cents to $18.76 after the beverage company announced a new venture into the hotels business.

British Telecom fell 12 cents to $4.60 amid worries its employees would be selling their shares.

Eurotunnel fell 27 cents to $8.28 as refinancing proposals were not finalised.

One bright spark was Securicor A, which 48 cents to $11.63 on speculation that mobile phone company Cellnet will be floated.

Elsewhere in Europe, stock prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange closed broadly lower in active trading.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which climbed 19.74 points Tuesday fell 1.5 percent or 27.67 points to 1,849.02.

Market watchers said prices pulled back amid unconfirmed rumors about possible military movements in the Soviet Union.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - The Bush administration has turned down US West Inc.'s request for a license to build a fiber optic network in the Soviet Union, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

US West, a regional telecommunications company based in Englewood, a Denver suburb, said it will appeal the decision.

''We will ask for a review,'' said US West spokesman Ed Mattick. ''We think it is important that U.S. companies participate in the network, which is going to be built with or without U.S. involvement.''

The administration's move was coordinated with the British government in order to bar Soviet access to a technology deemed strategically sensitive, according to a report in Wednesday's Washington Post.

The government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher denied Cable & Wireless a British telecommunications company, permission to compete for the fiber optic network construction in the Soviet Union.

The Commerce Department's Bureau of Export Administration said that fiber optic technology is considered strategically sensitive ''because of its usefulness to the military in coordinating troop movements and in the deployment and use of weapons.''

US West heads a consortium of seven companies from six countries that wants to build a $500 million fiber network that would span the Soviet Union from Japan to West Europe. Giant British Telecom is a member of the group.

The U.S. and British move came on the eve of a Paris meeting of the Coordinating Committee on Multilateral Export Controls, a 17-nation group that monitors the sale of Western technology to communist countries.

It is expected that the COCOM meeting will greatly liberalize the export of Western technology to Central and East European nations.

The Soviet Union's access to Western technolgy would be improved, and the country would enjoy a trade status similar to China's.

According to published reports, South Korean companies are interested in building the fiber optic network for the Soviets. South Korea is not a member of COCOM.

(JUNE 6) UPI - The following are highlights of the primaries held Tuesday in nine states:

California - Former San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein beat Attorney General John Van de Kamp and won the Democratic gubernatorial nomination - the first time a woman will be a major party's choice for governor in the Golden State.

Sen. Pete Wilson won the Republican gubernatorial nod. The fall race to replace retiring GOP Gov. George Deukmejian is expected to be very expensive and could be the hottest contest in the country. Voters also ended a decade-old tax revolt and agreed to raise the gasoline tax from 9 cents to 18 cents. They also voted to raise the state's constitutional spending cap and authorize the sale of nearly $3 billion in bonds to pay for improvements in California's transportation system.

North Carolina - Former Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt easily captured the Democratic Senate nomination - the first black to be nominated to any major post in the state's history. He will face conservative Republican Sen. Jesse Helms in November in a race that could attract considerable out-of-state liberal money.

Iowa - Republican Gov. Terry Branstad was unopposed and will face Democratic winner Don Avenson, an abortion-rights candidate. Abortion was a key issue in the Democratic primary and will likely be a critical issue in the general election campaign. In the state's hot Senate race, neither incumbent Democrat Tom Harkin nor GOP challenger Tom Tauke had any primary opposition.

Alabama - Republican Gov. Guy Hunt easily defeated token opposition. Democrats Paul Hubbert and Don Siegelman will be in a runoff for the right to challenge him. Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., breezed to a nomination for a third term. His Republican opponent, Bill Cabiniss, was unopposed.

New Jersey - Democratic Sen. Bill Bradley easily defeated token opposition and won nomination to a third term. His Republican opponent, Christine Whitman, had no opponent.

New Mexico - Republican Sen. Pete Domenici and his Democratic challenger, Tom Benavides, had no opposition. In the race to replace Republican Gov. Garrey Carruthers, former two-term Gov. Bruce King won the Democratic nomination and Frank Bond, a Sante Fe attorney, won the GOP nod.

Montana - Sen. Max Baucus, a Democrat, had little trouble beating minor opposition. Lt. Gov. Allen Kolstad defeated three other Republicans for the right to challenge Baucus.

Mississippi - Republican Sen. Thad Cochran had no opposition. There is no Democratic candidate.

South Dakota - There was no opposition for any of the major candidates: Republican Sen. Larry Pressler, his Democratic challenger, Ted Muenster, Republican Gov. George Mickelson or Democrat Bob Samuelson.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - A national coalition urged Congress Wednesday to revoke a 20-year-old law that exempts competing newspapers from antitrust regulations if one is in danger of financial failure.

Citizens for an Independent Press said the practice of Joint Operating Agreements - which allows two papers to merge their business operations while remaining editorially independent - has only been successful in creating monopolies.

The Newspaper Preservation Act included JOAs in 1970 with the intent of protecting daily newspapers from market forces to preserve a variety of editorial voices in communities.

The law has strong support from the American Newspaper and Publishers Association, but the coalition said Wednesday it has only helped a small portion of the newspaper industry by allowing certain papers to set their prices jointly without fear of the effects upon circulation or advertising sales.

The group also said JOAs are not a guarantee against failure, noting that the Miami News shut down in 1988 despite an agreement with the Miami Herald, as did the St. Louis Globe-Democrat in 1986.

"After two decades of piling up monopoly profits at the expense of their communities throughout the country ... we want government to help us wipe out the 'crybaby press' public relief bill," said Bruce Brugman, a member of the coalition's advisory board who has opposed the law since its enactment.

The most recent JOA was approved this year between the York Daily Record and the York Dispatch in York, Pa. "Small businesses and individual advertisers have been hit the hardest by this JOA," said Julie Swope, a coalition member and York resident.

Another JOA criticized by the group was that between the Detroit Free Press and the Detroit News. The agreement was approved last year and upheld by the Supreme Court after being challenged by Michigan Citizens for an Independent Press.

Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Mich., who plans to introduce legislation that would abolish the Newspaper Preservation Act and JOAs, said such an arrangement has had a negative effect on newspaper coverage in Detroit.

"The space devoted to news has diminished due to joint editions on weekends and holidays," Pursell said. "Even the weekday editions appear to be shorter on news." Pursell said JOAs help create an "unholy alliance" between the press and the federal government.

"How can a newspaper, which is supposed to be free from government intervention under the First Amendment, fulfill its role as the watchdog of government when the government is party to the granting of the paper's monopoly status?" Pursell said.

In addition to Detroit and York, Pa., other cities whose newspapers have JOAs are Birmingham, Ala.; Tucson, Ariz.; San Francisco; Honolulu; Evansville, Ind.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Shreveport, La.; Albuquerque, N.M.; Lincoln, Neb.; Cincinnati; Tulsa, Okla.; Pittsburgh; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Knoxville, Tenn; Nashville, Tenn.; El Paso, Tex.; Salt Lake City; Seattle; Charleston, W. Va.; and Madison, Wisc.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - President Bush is ''most upset'' that a Secret Service agent shoved his senior adviser on Soviet affairs when she was lined up in the receiving line in San Francisco to say farewell to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, a spokesman said Wednesday.

Condoleezza Rice was shoved by the agent and told to get behind the rope with the lesser VIP's, even though she wore a pin designating that she was a member of the U.S. delegation.

''The president is aware of it and most upset about it,'' White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters. ''It should not have happened. The Secret Service is reviewing it.''

The agency spokesman said ''we're looking into it. We have to talk to a number of people. There are two sides to every story.''

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (JUNE 6) UPI - Former Communist Party chief Milos Jakes and four other former hard-line leaders were rounded up and questioned Wednesday about their roles in the suppression of the 1968 Prague Spring reform movement, an Interior Ministry spokesman said.

The detention of Jakes, who was released later in the day along with three of the others, comes only a few days before Czechoslovakia's June 8-9 scheduled Parliamentary elections.

A source said the investigation centers around the activities of Vasil Bilak, the party's former chief ideologist and the man suspected of inviting the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact countries to invade Czechoslovakia in August 1968 to crush the reform movement. They said he was questioned about his role in the invasion and alleged criminal activities.

Bilak, who was arrested in the Slovak capital of Bratislava, remained in custody Wednesday night but Jakes and the other three leaders were released after being questioned in Prague, ministry spokesman Ivan Mandelev said at a news conference.

Deputy Czechoslvak Interior Minister Andrej Samel told the official CTK news agency that the detentions were ordered by Federal Prosecutor Tibor Boehm, who is attempting to determine who is responsible for the invasion. But Mandelev denied the report, saying the Interior Ministry had ordered the move.

Although the so-called Prague Spring crackdown occurred 22 years ago, Czechoslovakia is determined to unravel the events surrounding the invasion before it can put it to rest.

Alexander Dubcek, the Communist Party chief in 1968 who led the reform movement, traveled to Moscow last month to ask Soviet authorities to turn over documents relating to the invasion, a request the Soviets declined.

Dubcek, who lived for more than 20 years in virtual obscurity after the invasion, was elevated to president of the new Czechoslovak Parliament following last fall's Velvet Revolution that toppled the Communist regime without bloodshed.

CTK said Jakes, who was deposed as the Communist Party's General Secretary following the November revolution, was brought by car to the Interior Ministry for questioning.

Detained with Jakes in Prague were Rudolf Hegenbart, former head of the hated StB secret police, Michal Stefanak, former head of the party's State Administration Department, and Josef Lennart, former secretary of the party's Central Committee, according to CTK.

Mandelev would not reveal who questioned the former leaders, the nature of the interrogation or how long it lasted. He also refused to say whether others were included in the roundup.

''We cannot tell you about the interrogation because we don't know the results of the questioning of Bilak,'' he said, adding the investigation concerned ''a very complex amount of different criminal activity.''

He said, however, that Stefanak refused to answer questions because he had taken an oath of secrecy while in office.

Bilak, the party's chief ideologist from 1968 to 1988, was one of the first to be stripped of his membership by the Communist Party in the wake of the November revolution and was expelled from the party last February.

So far, the only former Communist leader jailed in Czechoslovakia is an ex-party boss suspected of ordering police to beat students during ademonstration last November.

Czechoslovaks will go to the polls for the first free elections in over 40 years June 8-9 to elect a new Parliament. Civic Forum, the party that led the revolution and organized the coalition government that has been running Czechoslovakia since then, faces the Christian Democratic Party, a revamped Communist Party and an environmentally orientated Green Party.

PARIS (JUNE 6) UPI - A year after he was involved in a near-fatal auto accident, Thomas Muster reached again for a share of glory by fighting his way into the semifinals of the French Open.

Muster, the seventh seed, withstood the bullet serve of Goran Ivanisevic for a 6-2, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3 victory Wednesday, propelling him to a semifinal showdown against fellow southpaw Andres Gomez.

Gomez, loser of only one set thus far in the tournament, crushed French qualifier Thierry Champion, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4, to qualify for his first-ever semifinal berth in a Grand Slam event.

Andre Agassi will face Jonas Svensson in Friday's other semifinal.

In the women's semifinals on Thursday, it will be top seed Steffi Graf against Jana Novotna and No. 2 Monica Seles facing Jennifer Capriati.

In April 1989, a day before he was to play Ivan Lendl in the final of the Lipton Players Championships, Muster was struck by a drunk driver in Miami pinning him under a car and severing ligaments in his left knee. The car's wheels missed Muster's head by inches, and he also was fortunate he didn't crack his head against the curb.

Following surgery, Muster attended last year's French Open on crutches, serving as a commentator for Austrian TV.

The 22-year-old blond said Wednesday that during his six-month recovery, ''it was a wish to get to the semis once. I worked hard to get this far. I worked hard while I was injured. All my preparation has paid off. I am very happy it has worked out like this.''

A disputed call enabled Muster to achieve the decisive break in the sixth game of the fourth set. After a backhand by Muster was called long, a linesman examined the mark made by the ball and reversed his decision.

That brought the score to 30-30 and Ivanisevic double-faulted, only his third of the day, on break point. Following the call, the 18-year-old Yugoslav lost six of the next seven points, falling behind 5-2.

''The ball was good, but I let it go by before the official made his call '' Ivanisevic said. ''After the double-fault, I was finished. I wasn't 100 percent fit to play today and I was cramping a little.''

Ivanisevic, who upset Boris Becker in the opening round, delivered 16 aces against Muster.

Muster banged himself on the shin during the third set, causing some bleeding. The trainer examined the shin and told Muster it was only a bruise.

Muster said his accident last year has changed his attitude to tennis.

''I learned there are more important things in life than losing or winning a match,'' he explained. ''I enjoy every shot I make. If I win it is great and if I lose, then in my mind I am just happy to be alive.

''It is still in my mind, and that helps sometimes.''

Both quarterfinals were played on a windy, cool, overcast day, with occasional drops of rain falling on Roland Garros Stadium.

Gomez, following a walkover in his previous match, had little difficulty against Champion, ranked No. 191 in the world.

The 30-year-old left-hander from Ecuador broke service on his first opportunity in each set and maintained the advantage.

''To play him in the quarterfinals of the French was too good an opportunity to let go by, and after 10 or 12 years of waiting, there was no way I wasn't going to do it,'' Gomez said.

As a clay-court specialist, Gomez believes the French Open represents his best opportunity to capture a Grand Slam. But in 10 previous appearances at Roland Garros he had failed to go beyond the quarterfinals.

''I deserve better than that,'' he said. ''I didn't come here to get into the quarterfinals or the semifinals, I came here to win the tournament.''

Gomez has lost only one set in this championship and the walkover, when Magnus Gustafsson was forced to withdraw with a leg injury, allowed him four days of rest.

''This year I'm fresh,'' he said. ''I play every match in less than two hours. My head is clear and everything seems to be clicking at the right time.

''It's a moment I've been waiting for for 12 years. I thought I had a good chance this year. I felt good coming here. I had a little luck in the draw and the top two seeds went out in the first round.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Sunlight appears to control the amount of methane released into the atmosphere by bogs, swamps and other wetlands, a researcher reported Wednesday.

Methane is one of the so-called greenhouse gases, which act like the glass windows of a greenhouse to trap heat in Earth's atmosphere and prevent it from escaping back into space. Many scientists think increased human production of greenhouse gases will aggravate the greenhouse effect and cause global warming.

A study of a Danish wetland found methane emissions were anywhere from 1.5 times to nearly four times greater during darkness than during daylight - a difference attributed to sunlight increasing oxygen's destruction of methane before it enters the atmosphere.

The new findings should help scientists gain a better understanding of the greenhouse process by getting more accurate measurements of methane levels in the atmosphere, the researchers said.

Rice paddies, cattle and other agriculture-related sources are the major producers of methane in the atmosphere. But about one-quarter of atmospheric methane is generated by natural wetlands and little is known about what regulates such emissions.

In a study published in the scientific journal Nature, Gary King of Denmark's University of Arhus examined how light affected methane emissions of wetland peat in the laboratory and in the field.

''In all cases, the response of methane emission to changes in light regimes was rapid (about 20 minutes) and repeatable,'' wrote King, noting the ''rapidity and stability of the response'' indicate light-enhanced oxidation is responsible for the methane shifts, not changes in gas production.

Past studies have shown light increases the penetration of dissolved oxygen into peat, the researcher added.

The greatest swings between methane production in light and dark conditions were found in peat samples covered with a thick mat of algae. In some cases, emission in the dark was nearly four times higher than emission under light.

''Light regimes may have an important role in determining the magnitude of emissions from one of the principal sources of atmospheric methane,'' King said. ''Failure to consider the sensitivity of methane oxidation to ... light regimes can result in inaccurate estimates of wetland methane emissions.''

Another team's study, which has been submitted to the journal of Applied Enviromental Microbiology, has found similar light-related methane production patterns in peat taken from Everglades National Park in Florida the researcher said.

LONDON (JUNE 6) UPI - The pantheon of illustrious people adorning Britain's banknotes is to be changed for a new crew, and all paper money will now have an newer image of Queen Elizabeth II, the Bank of England said Wednesday.

The Bank said Buckingham Palace approved the upgraded portrait of the British monarch, which is to be put into circulation on Thursday with the introduction of new 5 pound notes.

It said the new blue ''fiver'' will be the first in a plan to gradually replace over four years all of Britain's $25.2 billion in paper currency with the new series.

A spokeswoman said the bank changes its 1.16 billion notes about every 20 years and that counterfeiters would find the new notes more of a challenge because they will have difficult color mixes, intricate designs and silver threads.

All portraits will be larger and more recognizable and the denominations will be bolder for people with poor eyesight. A reduction in note size of 15 to 22 percent will also save production costs for the currency, which is made from cotton pulp.

But despite the bank's explanations, its plans aroused some criticism.

The 5 pound note was embellished with the duke of Wellington, the ''Iron Duke'' who trounced Napoleon at Waterloo in 1815. He is to be replaced with George Stevenson, the inventor famed for building the world's first steam train, the Rocket.

The Guardian said some critics regarded Stevenson as ''little more than a charlatan who plagiarized the idea for a steam engine.'' It also said the older and less flattering royal portrait made the queen look as if ''she had fared none too favorably in a couple of rounds with Mike Tyson.''

Florence Nightingale, the lady with the lamp who tended British soldiers during the 1854-56 Crimean war, will no longer appear on the 10 pound note. She is to be succeeded by Charles Dickens.

William Shakespeare is being ousted from the 20 pound note for Michael Faraday, a scientist who made many breakthroughs in the field of electricity.

But the greatest opprobrium was reserved for the bank's decision to replace Architect Christopher Wren on the 50 pound note with a picture of John Houblon, the first governor of the Bank of England. The Guardian called the decision ''an uncharacteristic spot of self-indulgence.''

''Our criteria is that the people should be dead, and dominant in their field,'' the spokeswoman said. ''The 50 pound note will be released in 1994, will be the bank's 300th anniversary, so rather self-indulgently we are giving ourselves a birthday present.''

The official said old tattered notes will be gradually replaced with the new designs and that the nation's money supply will remain constant, with no economic impact to the plan. But the bank expects some public resistance.

''People are resistant to change, particulary in areas of their life that have great familiarity,'' the official said. ''I have no doubt when these new ones are eventually withdrawn, there will also be opposition.''

#90157u1532 06/06/1990 ~United Press International

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - The Air Force disclosed Wednesday that its B-2 stealth bomber has the radar signature of an insect, a thousand times smaller than the B-1B looks to search radars.

In a detailed briefing for a Senate Armed Services subcommitee, officials presented their clearest arguments yet for the costly bomber.

But they also stumbled with committee members when they could not immediately produce a breakdown of the revised 1991 spending plan and conceded that Air Force estimates for the bomber do not square with those offered by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney. The gap, however, is only about $1 billion.

The B-2 was designed to be virtually invisible to radar, and even though it can be detected, it can only be found at much closer ranges than the B-1B or B-52 show up. Its advantage lies in its ability to slip undetected around radars to reach heavily defended targets.

Gen. Larry Welch, the Air Force chief of staff, and Air Force Secretary Donald Rice gave the panel a lengthy rationale for the plane and a set of charts showing what the radar cross-section of a variety of planes and objects is. It did not list the B-2, a product of Northrop Corp. of Los Angeles.

Radar cross-section is a measure of reflectivity. For instance, a jumbo jet appears on military search radars the same size as a reflective object covering 100 square meters. Cutting radar signature by a factor of 100 cuts the radar coverage to 1/10th the original value.

The B-52 has a radar cross-section of about 100 square meters and the B-1B's is about 1 square meter. The chart, after listing figures for ships and typical planes, listed the figures for small birds and insects. It put the radar cross section of the blue-winged locust at 0.001 square meter, the worker honeybee at 0.0001 square meter and the alfalfa caterpillar butterfly at 0.000063 square meter.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., asked Welch where the 172-foot wide, 370,000-pound B-2 fits in the charts.

''It is in the insect category,'' Welch said.

Gore played a guessing game, asking if it were in the area of the locust's size.

''We've carried it as far as we can,'' said Welch. ''It's well down the charts.''

Cheney recently cut the B-2 program back from 132 planes to 75, reducing the cost to an estimated $61.1 billion. Welch and Rice said Air Force figures add to about $62 billion and they and Cheney's office are working to reconcile the differences.

Subcommittee Chairman James Exon, D-Neb., a B-2 supporter, was one of several members who expressed frustration at the lack of specific figures and performance data as senators work on their version of the 1991 defense budget.

Welch and Rice said killing the program at 15 planes will mean an investment of $35.4 billion, some $26.7 billion of which has already been appropriated. Buying 60 more planes, they said, would run the total program cost up by another $25.7 billion. It would consume 1.1 percent of the defense budget over the program's life, well below the 1.6 percent for the B-1B.

Rice argued the B-2 could be used in a conventional war. He said the various components have undergone more than 550,000 hours of actual and computerized testing. Because there is no replacement on the drawing boards, he said, killing the plane would eventually eliminate the bomber leg of the so-called triad of planes and land and sea missiles.

The plane will start making test flights this fall against radars similar to those used by Soviet air defense units. Welch and Rice said they have a very high level of confidence the plane will do well.

Although the B-2 can be found by the types of radars used in the Navy's Aegis ship defense system, Welch said it was immaterial because the Soviet Union could not afford to build thousands of new radar sites to protect its most important targets. And the two officials said the $61 billion that would be invested in the B-2 essentially negates about $400 billion the Soviet Union has invested over the years in air defenses.

Even though radars could find the B-2, they said, the subsequent ability to track the plane, deliver targeting information to attack fighters or missiles was lacking, and in just 15 minutes after a faint trace was found on radar the plane would be 150 miles away.

Welch said the plane is so transparent to radar that a Soviet attack fighter stood a better chance of stumbling across a B-2 accidentally than finding it on radar.

DURBAN, SOUTH AFRICA (JUNE 6) UPI - President Frederik de Klerk called Wednesday a joint session of Parliament at which he is expected to end a four-year-old state of emergency as Durban residents voted in an election that will signal how South Africans are responding to his racial reforms.

His expected request to end the emergency is seen as a bid to draw black leaders into power-sharing negotiations. De Klerk set Thursday as the day for legislators to convene but did not disclose the meeting's purpose.

"We do confirm a joint sitting tomorrow at 2:15 (p.m.) but that's all," presidential spokesman Kobus Pieterse said. "We don't know what will be the exact contents of his address."

More than 25 percent of Durban's 20,333 voters cast their ballots by noon in the Indian Ocean port city's Umlazi district, where the ruling National Party was pitted against the official opposition right-wing Conservative Party and the liberal Democratic Party.

A mixture of the government's most critical constituency - middle class and blue collar voters - will decided whether to unseat the ruling party, which has held Umlazi since 1977.

Voting began slowly, with government and opposition supporters clashing repeatedly by shouting challenges and insults between party tables. At one point, a Democratic Party supporter and a Conservative reportedly flew at each other and wrestled on the ground before being parted.

First results were expected shortly after the four polling booths close at 9 p.m. (4 p.m. EDT). The by-election was forced by the resignation of ruling party Member of Paliament Con Botha, who recently became administrator of Natal province.

The Conservatives gained ground in September's general election, which brought de Klerk to power on a platform of apartheid reform. Although the Nationalists are expected to retain the seat, a loss would confirm white discontent with government moves to strike a deal with the black majority. De Klerk has denied there is a right-wing backlash to his reforms.

Conservative leader Andries Treurnicht contends the Nationalist Party, which has governed since 1948, has turned its back on whites. He has challenged the Nationalists to hold a general election immediately, a vote Treurnicht says his own party would win comfortably.

The Nationalist Party holds 102 of the all-white House of Assembly's 178 seats, down from 130 before the Conservatives shaved substantial support in the last general election. The Conservatives hold 41 seats and the Democrats 34.

Nationalist candidate Piet Matthee said the main issue facing voters was whether to choose the "dead-end road" of the Conservatives or de Klerk's "road of negotiation."

Conservative contender Francis Hitchcock claimed whites feel "betrayed" and said the government had sown "uncertainty and confusion" over its intentions.

The Democratic Party has been branded a spoiler for splitting votes for reform, but has rejected the charge, saying the Nationlist brand of change is merely "reactionary reform" resulting from black pressure.

Since becoming president in September, de Klerk has legalized black opposition groups, including the African National Congress, freed Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners, suspended the death penalty and vowed to bring blacks into government.

Mandela, who is on a 45-day tour of 14 nations in Africa, Europe, and North America, has said de Klerk's reforms are insufficient. He said he will urge the nations his visits to retain economic sanctions against South Africa.

De Klerk's announcement on a special session followed a Cabinet meeting Wednesday amid widespread expectation that the emergency laws imposed on June 12, 1986, and up for renewal at midnight Friday would either be formally lifted or allowed to lapse.

Government sources quoted in the Afrikaans and English language press have been quoted saying in recent days that the emergency would be lifted, meeting a major demand of the African National Congress that de Klerk normalize the country's political climate.

Any extension of the emergency would be regarded as a major setback to de Klerk's efforts to negotiate a peaceful settlement to the country's protracted racial crisis.

Mandela was quoted Tuesday in the Botswanan capital of Gaborone saying he expected "a major announcement" from de Klerk during the black leaders overseas trip and that he hoped it concern the emergency.

Intended to curb uprisings in black townships that left some 3,500 dead between 1984 and mid-1986, the emergency gave police sweeping powers of detention without charge and clamped down on the press coverage of the worst sustained period of political unrest since the National Party won power in 1948.

(JUNE 6) UPI - Authorities in Northern Ireland say a retired police officer was killed and two women were wounded when a suspected I-R-A booby-trap car-bomb exploded in Belfast. Police say a Czechoslovak-made plastic explosive was attached to the policemen's car. The policeman's wife, who was in the car, was seriously wounded. So far, NO group has claimed responsibility, but police believe the attack was carried out by the outlawed Irish Repubulican Army.

Secretary of State Baker today called for strengthening of the 35-nation Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe. The body includes the super-powers and the East and West bloc nations of Europe. Baker outlined a series of proposals including one to have ministers meet annually and that their senior officials meet twice a year. The body is taking on new importance in light of the democratic reforms sweeping East Europe.

EAST BERLIN (JUNE 6) UPI - The owners of small and medium-sized businesses in East Germany called Wednesday for protest strikes because they fear crippling competition from West German companies will follow the economic union of the two countries.

Entrepreneurs in the sector - known as the Mittelstand - said they would strike on the Baltic island of Ruegen on June 12 and would increase the industrial action if the government continued to ignore their demands.

The entrepreneurs fear that their outdated companies will be overpowered by West Germany companies when the two Germanys unite their currencies and economies on July 1.

The proposed strike is backed by the East Berlin Trade and Inudstry Council, the East German Business Association and the Association of Self-Employed.

''About 50 percent of small enterprises will not survive this summer,'' said Klaus Noack, spokesman for the Association of Self-Employed. ''This means a loss of about 350,000 jobs.''

The Berliner Zeitung daily said that orders for goods from East German firms had fallen dramatically for the second half of 1990 and that many family-owned businesses would probably be ruined by competition from big West German retail chains.

East German Economics Minister Gerhard Pohl believes only 30 percent of East Germany's businesses will be able to survive on their own once economic union with West Germany is implemented.

He said that about half of the companies in the country could rapidly become competitive, given sufficient investment.

In an interview with the Thueringer Zeitung newspaper, Pohl said he expected positive developments in East Germany's small and medium-size entrepreneurial sector following unification.

He said the Ministry of Economics had received more than 100,000 requests for authorization to open new businesses.

Pohl said in the interview, distributed by the East German news agency ADN that it was essential to speed up the transformation of state-owned firms into joint stock companies. He said that by the end of May, 460 state-owned or cooperative companies had registered as private companies.

But he warned that only about 30 percent of East Germany's firms would be in a position to survive without assistance once economic, currency and social union with West Germany is introduced July 1.

The union entails the introduction of the West German currency and economic system in the formerly Communist East Germany.

A West German economic expert, Rudolf Hickel made similar predictions in an interview with the Frankfurter Rundschau daily.

The economics professor said that between 50 and 70 percent of East German companies will collapse because of the pressure of international competition. He said this will lead to a strong increase in unemployment.

Hickel expressed disappointment at what he said was an insufficient level of West German investment in East Germamy.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - U.S. Chief of Protocol Joseph Reed said Wednesday that Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich ''behaved very badly'' when he kept the state's two senators out of a luncheon honoring Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Reed, talking to reporters outside the White House, said Sens. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., and Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., other members of Minnesota's congressional delegation and the mayors of the Twin Cities - Donald Fraser of Minneapolis and Jim Scheibel of St. Paul - were barred from the luncheon Sunday at the governor's mansion.

The lawmakers and mayors, who represented both political parties, were shunted to an adjoining house to wait until the luncheon was over. To make amends, Reed said he arranged for Gorbachev to meet with the delegation afterward.

Boschwitz had flown to Minneapolis from Washington on the same plane with the Soviet president and had a chance to confer with him privately. Durenberger, who also was invited to make the Aeroflot trip, had a previous commitment in Minneapolis, but was on hand at the airport when the Soviet leader arrived.

''They showed up at the mansion and were turned away,'' said Reed, adding that he was helpless to change the situation since he was only a guest, ''not the host.''

''As far as I'm concerned he reneged on the understanding that the two senators would be invited to the luncheon,'' Reed said.

He acknowledged space was limited in the mansion and said that 50 guests attended the luncheon.

On Tuesday, Reed said he tried to telephone Perpich to discuss the matter, but only got a recording giving the governor's office hours.

''In my view I was very understanding about space considerations in the executive mansion, but it seemed to me that he had indicated he would have them at the luncheon.''

Reporters asked Reed if Gorbachev understood the meaning of the snub.

''No doubt,'' Reed replied.

LANSING, MI (JUNE 6) UPI - The retired doctor who helped a terminally ill woman end her life with his ''suicide machine'' met with a state senator and his staff in early 1988 in an attempt to make the organs of executed prisoners available for transplant, the lawmaker and his former assistant said Wednesday.

The former aide to Sen. Jack Welborn, R-Kalamazoo, also said that Dr. Jack Kevorkian wanted executions, if made legal in Michigan, to be done by lethal injection so that healthy body parts would not be damaged.

The transplant would have taken place only with the consent of the prisoner under Kevorkian's plan, the aide said.

On Feb. 10, 1988, Welborn sponsored a resolution in the Senate to place a question on the ballot to legalize the death penalty in Michigan. Shortly after that, Kevorkian, 62, of Royal Oak, reportedly contacted his office several times by letter and once by telephone and requested the meeting. Neither the aide nor Welborn could remember the date of the meeting.

The Welborn death penalty measure never made it to the ballot and capital punishment remains outlawed in Michigan.

At the time of the meeting, Kevorkian had not yet invented the device that intravenously transmitted a lethal dose of potassium chloride to Alzheimers victim Janet Adkins, 54, of Portland, Ore.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Stanley Stahl, the New York real estate investor battling for control of Apple Bancorp Inc., has returned to court with new charges against an Apple shareholders rights plan that he claims is having ''discriminatory and draconian'' effects on the company, documents released Wednesday showed.

Such effects led Stahl on Tuesday to expand a legal complaint against Apple in the Delaware chancery court for New Castle County, located in Wilmington, Del. Although Apple is headquartered in New York, it is officially incorporated in Delaware.

A copy of the amended complaint was contained in a report, released Wednesday, that Stahl filed earlier with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Apple Bancorp, also based in New York, is a holding company for Apple Bank which has 33 branches and assets of $3.9 billion.

The amended complaint brings to five the number of charges Stahl has made against Apple Bancorp and its management.

Stahl on April 12 first filed two complaints against Apple. The court denied one of the complaints - a request for preliminary relief based on the allegation that the company's annual meeting had been unfairly delayed - and is still considering the second complaint, which protests a hasty amendment by Apple management to its shareholders' rights plan.

Stahl decided to amend the filing because ''the facts are different now in light of this delay (of the annual meeting),'' said Robert Hasday, a lawyer with the New York law firm Shea & Gould, which is representing Stahl.

In addition to his original complaints, Stahl now alleges that the Apple shareholder agreement denies fundamental stockholders franchise rights and represents a breach of management's fiduciary duty.

He also says Apple management has further breached its fiduciary duty by refusing to supply him with confidential information, made available to other outside parties, unless he abandons his tender offer and proxy contest.

Stahl has offered to buy all outstanding shares of Apple Bancorp if Apple shareholders approve his proposal to add nine new seats to Apple's existing 12-seat board and elects his slate of 13 nominees to the board.

The final complaint says some of the bylaws are unreasonable and inequitable because they require notice of director nominations and other stockholder proposals by November 30, 1989, even though Apple Bancorp's 1990 annual meeting, scheduled for May, was postponed, and may not take place until September.

Stahl says in the court filing that ''the (Apple) Board owes fiduciary duties to Apple and all Apple stockholders (including Stahl) not to react unreasonably or contrary to the best interests of Apple stockholders in response to a perceived threat to Apple.''

''Under the precedents of this court and the Delaware Supreme Court, any response by the Board to the Stahl tender offer which 'tilts the playing field' must do so in a manner calculated to provide greater value for the Apple stockholder,'' Stahl's petition said.

Stahl wants the Delaware court to remove the impediments he says are breaching his fundamental stockholder rights, stop the directors from continuing to act in the manner described in his filing, and hold the directors liable for breaches of their fiduciary duty.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - The Senate voted Wednesday to allow AIDS victims to be barred from jobs that require them to handle food.

Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) was among the bill's opponents. ''If Ryan White (who died of AIDS earlier this year) was still alive and he wanted to go to work for Burger King, this amendment would say no,'' said Kennedy.

The Senate ordered its negotiators on the Americans with Disabilities Act to agree to a House-passed amendment that would permit employers to move AIDS sufferers from direct contact with food to other duties without loss of pay.

Although the provision was primarily intended for restaurants, it could also cover supermarkets and food preparation on airliners and luxury cruises.

The Senate approved the instructions, proposed by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. by voice vote after refusing 53-40 to kill the order to the negotiators.

Senate instructions to its negotiators are rare and although no records have been kept, Senate historians could recall no time when negotiators were told to adopt a House provision.

The instructions are not binding. But they put heavy pressure on the Senate negotiators to agree to the House provision.

The Senate and House versions of the Americans with Disabilities Act are remarkably similiar in other respects and the negotiatiors are expected to reach agreement quickly. President Bush has indicated he is eager to sign the final product.

The legislation would give disabled persons the protection against discrimination in jobs and access to public accommodations, the same protections given on the basis of race, sex, religon or national origin in the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

Other laws already ban discrimation against disabled in federally financed programs and in housing.

Both bills deny some of the anti-discrimination guarantees to persons with contagious diseases who pose a ''direct threat'' to the health or safety of others. Tuberculosis and hepatitis were cited as examples.

The House-passed amendment, aimed directly at AIDS victims or carriers of the HIV virus, would also allow the transfer of persons with communicable and infectious diseases that people ''perceive'' can be transmitted through the handling of food.

Helms said that although the public has been told AIDS cannot be spread by food, drink or casual contact, people will not go to a restaurant if they knew the chef has AIDS.

PARIS (JUNE 6) UPI - A meeting to decide on easing restrictions on sensitive high-technology exports to Eastern European countries but not to the Soviet Union began in Paris Wednesday with the United States ready to soften restrictions on several of the nations, delegates said.

Representatives from the 17-nation Coordinating Committee for Multilateral Export Controls, set up at the height of the Cold War and composed of most NATO members as well as Australia and Japan, were to meet over two days.

In keeping with tradition, the group's meetings are taking place at an undisclosed location in Paris.

Hungary, Poland and Czechoslovakia were cited as the nations the United States favors easing trade restrictions on following their moves to establish democratically elected governments and market economies, the delegates said.

Washington was also reported to have agreed that restrictions on exporting some sensitive technology to East Germany be loosened once German monetary and economic unity is in place next month.

The United States, however, is insisting the Cocom countries have the right to carry out inspections to insure that sensitive material imported by East Germany is not diverted to the Soviet Union.

The U.S. position marks a fundamental change from Washington's past insistence that high-technology products, especially in the computer, telecommunications and machine tool industries, be kept from Eastern Europeancountries.

Sources said the United States continued to insist that the Soviet Union should not benefit from the preferential treatment Washington is willing to grant several of the region's former Communist regimes.

Experts have drawn up 30 categories of products that could be removed from the so-called not-for-export list, with another 15 categories under study, the sources said.

Some European countries, including France and West Germany, have charged in the past that Washington is using Cocom to protect U.S. industry from tough foreign competiton.

SOFIA, BULGARIA (JUNE 6) UPI - The communist government and its chief democratic rival, apparently burying the hatchet at the close of a bitter campaign, issued a joint appeal for calm Wednesday as the nation prepared for its first free elections in 44 years.

The appeal, published in most Bulgarian newspapers, comes a day before an estimated 500,000 people from both parties are expected to stage simultaneous mass rallies in the capital.

Both sides have expressed alarm over the escalation of political violence in the country, including a mob attack last week on the leader of the main opposition group, the Union of Democratic Forces.

''The appeal, the first of its kind, ... called for fair treatment of political opponents and designated the days between June 7 and 17 as days of sobriety,'' the official news agency BTA said.

Bulgarians will go to the polls June 10 to elect a 400-seat Grand National Asssembly in the first democratic elections since World War II. A runoff election is scheduled for June 17.

BTA said the leaders of the Communist Party and UDF surprised their own supporters with the joint declaration calling for ''tolerance, prudence, calm and goodwill'' in the final days of the campaign.

The UDF and other major opposition groups refused last month to sign a similar declaration, which they dismissed it as an attempt by the government to score propaganda points.

''The BSP (communists) gambled on fear of violence as a vote-getting method. The fear of violence, however, has bred violence,'' the UDF said in a statement Tuesday. ''The ambition to stay in power prevailed over sound reason.''

The ruling Bulgarian Socialist Party dropped the word ''communist'' from its name in April to further distance itself from its totalitarian past. Since the peaceful overthrow of hard-line party leader Todor Zhivkov in November, the party has renounced its guaranteed leading role in the government, legalized the opposition and scheduled multiparty elections.

Although the latest official polls predict the communists will capture most of the seats in the new Parliament, independent observers say the race is wide open.

Both sides are talking openly about the possibility of a coalition government, but the UDF has all but ruled out a coalition with the communists.

RALEIGH, NC (JUNE 6) UPI - Republican Sen. Jesse Helms can paste any label he likes on his opponents, Democrat Harvey Gantt said Wednesday, just as long as Gantt gets the label ''senator'' in November.

Gantt, 47, became North Carolina's first black candidate for senator by easily defeating Michael Easley in a Tuesday runoff, 57-43 percent. Gantt faces Helms, who is seeking a fourth term, in the general election.

''When he tries to tag me a 'liberal,' I'm going to talk about issues - like education, a clean environment, affordable health care. Those issues are Jesse-proof,'' said Gantt, a former two-term mayor of Charlotte. ''If talking about those issues makes me a liberal, then so be it. You can call me whatever you want.''

Easley apeared at the news conference to show his support for Gantt and to ask Democrats in North Carolina to unify in the challenge against Helms.

''I said at the start of this race I wanted a clean, issue-oriented, positive campaign, and we've had that,'' Easley said. ''The people of North Carolina have won something because of that. And because the people have won, Harvey Gantt will win in November.''

Gantt said he is not afraid of Helms using the same tactics employed successfully in 1984 against former Gov. Jim Hunt.

Polls indicated Helms was running 20 percentage points behind Hunt in that race, but Helms erased that deficit by labeling the moderate governor ''a Mondale liberal'' in relentless television and radio ads.

''I'll wait until he gets nasty before I worry about that,'' Gantt said.

According to a poll last week by the Greensboro News & Record, Gantt and Helms appeared to be in a dead heat, 44 percent for Gantt and 43 percent for Helms.

Gantt said Wednesday his race should not be an issue. Helms has a record of opposing various civil rights measures and affirmative action programs and voted against making the birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. a national holiday.

''It (race) has never been an issue in any race I've run. It certainly will not be an issue in our case,'' Gantt told reporters. ''If race is brought up, I'll respond to it in a way that will set the record straight. I really think people want to talk about issues.''

Gantt said he did not anticipate the wide margin of victory in the primary runoff. Gantt and Easley finished first and second, respectively, in a six-candidate primary election May 8.

''I didn't feel it (the results) would be that wide a margin. I would have been satisfied with 50 percent,'' Gantt said. ''To get that kind of vote was tremendous. I feel a certain humility.

''I want to savor this victory for at least a few hours,'' he said. ''Then we've really got a tough race ahead. There is no question that Jesse Helms is formidable.

''We've got five months to think about it and work on it. I plan to work on my messsage and talk about the issues that Democrats will rally to.''

Lawrence Davis, chairman of the Democratic Party in North Carolina, said Democrats must avoid a repeat of 1984's mistakes, when bitter feelings after a gubnernatorial runoff election between now-Secretary of State Rufus L. Edmisten and former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox led eroded party support and allowed a Republican sweep of top offices in North Carolina.

''This is the way it ought to be - unity after a tough race,'' said Edmisten as he watched Gantt and Easley at the news conference. ''Harvey Gantt is a mainstream Democrat, and he'll get the votes of all of Easley's supporters.''

NEW YORK (JUNE 6) UPI - The stock market drifted at lower levels late Wednesday in moderately active trading, pressured by profit taking after the rally to record highs Monday.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 10.19 Tuesday, was down 11.65 to 2913.35 at 3 p.m. EDT.

Declines led advances 814-597 among the 1,970 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Volume at 3 p.m. amounted to about 140,000,000 shares compared with 170,250,000 in the same period Tuesday.

Prices were narrowly mixed in active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Analysts said the market was unable to shake off profit taking after the market's rally to all-time highs in the Dow industrials and other major market indexes Monday. The blue-chip index has hit 10 record highs in the last four weeks.

The Dow industrials were off about 10 points in early trading and regained most of that loss, but the attempt at a recovery fizzled. Prices extended their declines even further and oil issues, which were lower after the sharp drop in oil prices Tuesday, lengthened their losses even as oil prices turned slightly higher on the day.

Analysts said they expected buying interest to remain in check since many investors feel that after the recent record highs the market will stage more of a pullback. Players are waiting for prices to fall further before committing more money to the market, they said.

On the trading floor as of 3 p.m. EDT, Union Carbide was the most active issue, higher.

Philip Morris followed, up slightly. Abbott Laboratories was third, up sharply. The former chairman has asked a judge to force the company to pay him $21,700 in dividends and remove restrictions preventing him from selling 51,600 shares of Abbott stock.

Upjohn was also active, down sharply after rallying Tuesday on continued merger speculation.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T was down, IBM was up slightly, extending Tuesday's gains which came on the heels of news of a price cut of up to 10 percent on some Personal System-2 models, and Eastman Kodak was up sharply in active trading. Oil components dragged the average down. Chevron, Exxon and Texaco were lower.

Among oil issues not in the 30 Dow industrials, Mobil, Amoco and Royal Dutch Petroleum fell.

Elsewhere, Campbell Soup tumbled after surging Tuesday when three dissident members of the founding Dorrance family, who hold about 17 percent of the company's stock, formed a voting trust. They reaffirmed their belief that a sale of the company would be the best course for shareholders.

Hasbro led the Amex issues, up slightly.

LIMA, PERU (JUNE 6) UPI - A bomb exploded in downtown Lima Wednesday despite an estimated 80,000 police officers and 150,000 soldiers being placed on alert to discourage violence before this weekend's runoff presidential elections.

Police said the bomb, believed placed by ultra-leftist Shining Path rebels exploded early Wednesday next to the Lima Town Hall just one block from the presidential palace.

No casualties were reported in the blast that blew out windows and damaged doorways.

The attack came just 12 hours after a car bomb exploded Tuesday night in the same square some 100 yards from the presidential palace, seriously wounding a woman and damaging nearby businesses, police said.

Another bomb blast, believed related to the car bomb attack, toppled a high tension electrical tower Tuesday night in Huachipa, 6 miles east of Lima, plunging wide areas of the capital into darkness.

Earlier Tuesday, a suspected leftist guerrilla shot and killed a parliamentary deputy from the ruling Apra Party, Juan Claudio Espinoza Mendoza.

Police said they believe the attacks were in retaliation to a government seizure Monday of five Shining Path hideouts, including what Interior Minister Agustin Mantilla called the ''nerve center'' of the rebel group, a large house in an exclusive Lima neighborhood that housed the group archives.

Monday, President Alan Garcia and Mantilla announced police had arrested 31 people in the raids in a major setback for the rebel organization.

A spokesman for the Military High Command said more than 200,000 security forces were placed on alert to protect voters and businesses prior to the June 10 runoff election, closely contested by independent candidate Alberto Fujimori and novelist Mario Vargas Llosa of a rightist coalition.

An estimated 19,000 people have been killed in political violence in Peru since Shining Path made its first attack 10 years ago in its ongoing effort to establish a Maoist regime in the Central American country.

(JUNE 6) UPI - Arms experts say the super-powers likely will remain well armed for the time being, with 25-thousand warheads apiece. Reagan administration arms negotiator Paul Nitze says a U-S-Soviet deal signed last week is ''insubstantial.'' It cuts each side's long-range nuclear arsenal to 46-hundred warheads. Those cutbacks would be offset by a weapons modernization programs.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Soviet trade officials urged U.S. business executives Wednesday to seek congressional support for the controversial trade pact signed last week by President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

''This agreement should be supported,'' Yuriy N. Chumakov, deputy minister of the Soveit Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations, said at a briefing for trade and business executives.

''This kind of trade agreement is only the first step to further the cause of U.S.-Soviet trade relationships,'' he said. ''I believe this is only the beginning and other agreements will follow.''

Chumakov's remarks came during a post-summit briefing for U.S. trade and business executives sponsored by the Soviet Office of Trade Representation and the Washington International Trade Association.

Robert Ruzanov, the Soviet trade representative in the United States, said the agreement will help speed the economic reforms taking place in the Soviet Union.

''If our two presidents can sign it, I hope your political leaders would show goodwill, understand the importance of it and approve,'' he said.

Bush told Gorbachev he would not send the signed agreement to Congress until the Soviet Union codifies laws easing emigration. The Soviets cannot be granted most-favored-nation trading status until it allows the free emigration of citizens.

Congressional leaders also told the Soviet leader that they would not be receptive to the agreement as long as the Soviet Union continues the use of economic sanctions to stem Lithuania's bid for freedom.

Chumakov said the ongoing economic crisis gripping his country has forced the Soviet parliament to postpone consideration of the emigration laws, which may not be approved until the fall session.

''No one should see this as some kind of political ploy. It is not,'' he said.

William Verity, former commerce secretary in the Reagan administration, also urged Congress to move expeditiously on the trade agreement.

''I think the Soviet economy is desperate. There are at a poimnt where they can say we need your help,'' he said.

Verity also said the Soviets want to receive most-favored nation status, which would provide the lowest available tariffs, for reasons other than commerce.

''Most-favored-nation status is far more important to the Soviets as a matter of prestige than from a practical point of view,'' he said. ''It is far more important to them that they be treated like our other trading partners.''

The trade pact, which has yet to be published, offers a number of new agreements to normalize trade between the two nations, which have not had a trade agreement since their military alliance ended in 1945.

There is considerable room for growth in U.S.-Soviet commerce. Last year, trade between the countries totaled about $5.6 billion, up from $3.5 billion the year before, but still a mere fraction of U.S. trade with other nations.

Businessmen who expected to hear details of the agreement came away empty-handed after the briefing. Soviet trade officials offered little new information about what kinds of businesses and investments they hope to attract.

SEATTLE (JUNE 6) UPI - People suffering from lower back aches have a better chance of permanently relieving their pain with exercise than with electrical nerve stimulation treatment, researchers reported Wednesday.

A study of 145 back pain sufferers in San Antonio, Texas, showed the use of transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulation (TENS) ''was no more effective than a placebo and that TENS combined with exercise was no better than exercise alone,'' said Dr. Richard A. Deyo.

Americans spend $13 billion each year on a variety of treatments for chronic lower back pain, many of them covered by both private and public insurance programs including TENS treatments, said Deyo, an associate professor at the University of Washington.

Deyo, who also is director of health services research at the Seattle Veterans Affairs Medical Center, noted the Veterans Administration spent nearly $2 million on TENS units in 1986.

He and colleagues provided intense, four-week therapy sessions at the University of Texas Health Science Center for 145 people recruited by newspaper ads between April 1985 and November 1987.

A quarter of the patients were treated with daily nerve stimulation from TENS units, while another quarter were provided with stimulation treatments and required to perform 12 stretching exercises. A third group was treated with non-working TENS units and the remainder received sham nerve stimulation treatment while also being required to perform stretching exercises.

All four study groups reported significant improvement after two and four weeks of participation, but two months after the treatments ended they again complained of lower back pain, the researchers said in The New England Journal of Medicine.

''There were no clinically important or statistically significant differences in any outcome between the subjects receiving true TENS and those receiving sham TENS,'' they added.

''By contrast, the analysis of the effects of exercise showed an advantage of exercise in several outcomes,'' the study said, including ''significantly higher activity levels, greater improvement on the scale of pain, and significant reduction in the reported frequency of pain.''

While long-term exercise may provide more relief for an aching back than an expensive medical treatment, Deyo acknowledged other studies have shown thatel ectrical nerve stimulation may have short-term effectiveness by raising ''the level of self-produced opiate-like substances called endorphins in the spinal fluid.''

''Advocates have long recognized a placebo effect of TENS, but our results suggest that for chronic back pain, this may be its only effect,'' the researchers concluded.

NEW YORK (JUNE 6) UPI - White men commit the most suicides in the United States, although the country as a whole has one of world's lowest rates of self-inflicted death, a researcher said Wednesday.

Suicide is the eighth leading cause of death in this country, where more than 30,000 people kill themselves each year, said a report in the current issue of Statistical Bulletin, published by the Metropolitan Life Insurane Co.

The report was issued as doctors and medical ethicists grapple with the ramifications of Monday's suicide of a 54-year-old Oregon woman who despaired because she had Alzheimer's disease.

The woman, Janet Adkins, killed herself in Michigan with a lethal injection from a ''suicide machine'' invented by a doctor.

Because of the stigma attached to suicide, experts believe the frequency of such deaths is vastly under-reported.

American men committed 79 percent of the country's suicides, or 24,329 in 1987, the most recent year final data was available, demographer Stanley Kranczer wrote in the newly released report.

Ninety-two percent of all suicides were committed by whites, while blacks accounted for six percent and the remaining 2 percent were across all other races, Kranczer said.

The study found suicide rates have been fairly steady, though they have climbed slightly for men to 24.3 per 100,000 in 1987, compared to 21.4 per 100,000 between 1960-1963.

Hungary by far had the world's highest rate of suicide, nearly triple that of the United States, followed by Finland, Austria, Denmark, Switzerland and France, said the report, using data from the World Health Organization.

Northern Ireland reported the lowest rates, followed by Italy, England, Portugal, Holland, Ireland and Scotland, among European countries; Singapore, Hong Kong and New Zealand were below U.S. rates and Australia was about even.

''While the number of suicides in these countries pales when compared with heart and cancer mortality, virtually every such death is considered preventable,'' Kranczer wrote.

''There is a lot of speculation about why'' rates vary, Kranczer said in an interview.

''Rates may be lower where the church plays a dominant role,'' because religious taboos may discourage suicides and coroners may not report them on death certificates, he said.

The long-standing difference between men and women, whose suicide rate is about one-fourth that for men, remains unexplained.

RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL (JUNE 6) UPI - A Brazilian airliner with 41 people aboard crashed a mile from the runway of a small Amazon port city Wednesday, killing at least 17 passengers, an airline spokesman said.

Odacil Saquetti, spokesman for the Transportes Aereos Regionais da Bacia Amazonica (TABA), said there were 38 passengers and three crew members on board the Fokker FH227 turboprop when it crashed shortly before landing in Altamira, a port on the Xingu River.

Saquetti said the airline and the Aeronautics Ministry were investigating the cause of the crash.

He said the pilot was among the 17 people who died in the crash.

Some of the survivors were being treated in the two hospitals in Altamira while others were flown to Belem by air force planes.

The plane crashed while landing on a stopover in Altamira, part of a flight that was to take it from Belem to Cuiaba, the capital of the state of Mato Grosso in west-central Brazil.

Airplanes and helicopters were sent to Altamira to help the rescue effort.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows Silk, Silk Silk International Inc. and four of its operating subsidiaries filed for Chapter 11 protection on Jan. 31, 1990.

Subsequent to the Chapter 11 filing, the company was unable to raise sufficient funds to continue to operate and the board of directors authorized the conversion of the Chapter 11 petition to a Chapter 7 filing under which the company will seek, through the assistance of a court appointed trustee, to liquidate its assets.

The company reports it is unlikely that all of its creditors will be paid in full as the company's indebtedness is believed to be substantially greater than its assets. Silk Silk Silk anticipates that the liquidation of the company will be concluded during the summer of 1990.

NEW YORK (JUNE 6) UPI - Prices were lower at the close of the New York Stock Exchange Wednesday in moderate trading, again pressured by profit taking after rallying to all-time highs Monday.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 10.19 Tuesday, lost 13.84 to 2911.16, according to an unofficial tally.

Declines led advances 871-620 among the 1,996 issues crossing the NYSE tape at 4 p.m. EDT. Volume amounted to about 165,000,000 shares, compared with 199,720,000 traded Tuesday.

Prices were narrowly mixed in active trading of American Stock Exchange issues.

Analysts said the market was unable to shake off profit taking after the rally to all-time highs in the Dow industrials and other major market indexes Monday. The blue-chip index has hit 10 record highs in the last four weeks.

The Dow industrials were off about 10 points in early trading and regained most of that loss, but the attempt at a recovery fizzled. Prices extended their declines even further and oil issues, which were lower after the sharp drop in oil prices Tuesday, lengthened their losses even as oil prices turned slightly higher on the day.

Analysts said they expected buying interest to remain in check since many investors feel that after the recent record highs the market will stage more of a pullback. Players are waiting for prices to fall further before committing more money to the market, they said.

On the trading floor as of 3 p.m. EDT, Union Carbide was the most active issue, higher.

Philip Morris followed, up slightly. Abbott Laboratories was third, up sharply. The former chairman has asked a judge to force the company to pay him $21,700 in dividends and remove restrictions preventing him from selling 51,600 shares of Abbott stock.

Upjohn was also active, down sharply after rallying Tuesday on continued merger speculation.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T was down, IBM was up slightly, extending Tuesday's gains which came on the heels of news of a price cut of up to 10 percent on some Personal System-2 models, and Eastman Kodak was up sharply in active trading. Oil components dragged the average down. Chevron, Exxon and Texaco were lower.

Among oil issues not in the 30 Dow industrials, Mobil, Amoco and Royal Dutch Petroleum fell.

Elsewhere, Campbell Soup tumbled after surging Tuesday when three dissident members of the founding Dorrance family, who hold about 17 percent of the company's stock, formed a voting trust. They reaffirmed their belief that a sale of the company would be the best course for shareholders.

Hasbro led the Amex issues, up slightly.

BUCHANAN, LIBERIA (JUNE 6) UPI - Liberian rebels spearheading an offensive toward the capital of Monrovia said Wednesday they captured Robertsfield International Airport and that government troops had killed a senior aide to rebel leader Charles Taylor.

The rebels also occupied part of the vast Bridgestone/Firestone rubber plantation for a second day, including the region around the rubber factory and offices. But company officials at their headquarters in Akron, Ohio, said they were not worried about the safety of company workers.

''They (rebels) are just on their way to Monrovia. It's like they're going through a forest. ... There is no damage to the facility or the workers,'' Bridgestone/Firestone spokesman Trevor Hoskins said.

He said the company's on-site manager had reported quiet Tuesday night and Wednesday.

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater declined to say whether the United States had offered safe passage out of Liberia for besieged President Samuel Doe.

He did say the United States had contact with Doe through diplomatic channels ''urging a resolution of the present situation.''

''We've asked both sides to find a way out of this,'' Fitzwater said. The State Department said Tuesday efforts at negotiation had failed.

Doe, a former master sergeant, seized power in a coup in 1980. Taylor's rebels, estimated at about 4,000 men, accuse Doe's government of corruption, brutality and ruining the economy of the West African nation.

Four U.S. ships were anchored off the Liberian coast to rescue U.S. and other Western nationals if they are unable to get out by air. About 1,100 to 1,200 U.S. business people, missionaries and their families live in Liberia.

The No. 2 man in the rebel forces, Samuel Dokie, told reporters at the rebel-held port of Buchanan, ''We are in complete control of Robertsfield. The National Patriotic Liberation Front have closed the airport to all international flights.''

Reporters in Buchanan could not immediately visit the facility.

The rebels mounted a full-scale assault on the airport 35 miles southeast of Monrovia Wednesday after an initial assault Tuesday night, rebel sources said.

Hoskins said a only small group of rebels occupied the Bridgestone/Firestone plantation, the largest rubber plantation in the world. It is situated about a mile from the Robertsfield Airport.

Rebels said they had captured the Bridgestone/Firestone company town at Harbel and nearby Owensgrove.

Hoskins said the rebels told company officials in Liberia they had no intention of harming the facility or the plantation's approximately 100,000 employees and dependents.

A visit to the 188-square-mile plantation Wednesday showed there were no government troops there.

Forty bodies lay in the streets of Buchanan. Two-thirds of them were civilians, many from Doe's Khran tribe or the Mandingo tribe.

Rebels found and displayed to reporters the body of Elmer Johnson, a former U.S. Army sergeant who took part in the U.S. invasion of Grenada in 1983 before becoming chief military advisor to Liberian rebel leader Charles Taylor, a former civil servant.

Johnson, 33, a Liberian who served in the U.S. Army for six years, was in a convoy of 30 rebels that was ambushed by government troops Sunday 2 miles outside Buchanan, which is situated 80 miles south of Monrovia.

Johnson had been shot in the head after apparently being made to kneel by the roadside for ''execution'' by government troops. His body still was lying in the roadside where he was killed.

Rebel troops credited Johnson with holding the rebel force together and instilling discipline in the field as well as attempting to stop looting by rebel troops. But they say there are other experienced leaders in their force to continue the war.

''Our victories prove that we are winning'' Dokie said. ''Elmer Johnson's death is a propaganda victory for Doe. But it happened while his soldiers were running away from Buchanan after we had taken the city.

''Elmer's death is a great loss. But it is not the end and we will continue the struggle. We already have other military commanders in the field who are taking over from Elmer.

''The battle is just beginning. Doe and his collaborators will have to pay very dearly when we reach Monrovia.''

Johnson reportedly took part in a coup attempt against Doe in 1985 that the government suppressed violently.

Doe is believed to have flown to his home town in the east of the country Saturday. The rebels say his mansion is surrounded by 1,000 of his remaining troops. A U.S. official in Monrovia said government troops were deserting by the score.

Bodies littered the streets of Buchanan. Dogs roamed among the shattered glass and melted tin roofs of its shacks as rebel troops ambled through the city looting shops of beer and Coca-Cola.

Scores of civilians have been killed by both sides in the last two weeks of heavy fighting for Buchanan.

PARIS (JUNE 6) UPI - Black leader Nelson Mandela got a red-carpet welcome Wednesday from French first lady Danielle Mitterrand at the start of a six-week tour of Europe and the United States to try to persuade the West to maintain sanctions against Pretoria.

Mandela, 71, the vice president of the African National Congress, was greeted in the rain by Mrs. Mitterrand in the Pavilion of Honour at the airport, an honor normally reserved for heads of state.

President Francois Mitterrand is to receive the South African on the Liberty and Human Rights Esplanade across the River Seine from the Eiffel Tower Wednesday night in a nationally televised ceremony to include speeches by both men as well as poetry and song.

Security is tight for the anti-apartheid leader's visit in the French capital, where ANC representative Dulcie September was assassinated two years ago, presumably by South African-hired hitmen. About 100 police officers stood watch as Mandela arrived at the airport.

In an interview Wednesday with the left-wing Paris daily Liberation,

Mandela said foreign government should keep economic sanctions against South Africa even though the country has made some progress in race relations in recent months.

''Our people still don't have the right to vote. The police and the army shoot and kill our people just as they have done during the past 40 years. I still cannot live in the neighborhood of my choice,'' he said.

''As long as the government has not begun fundamental and irreversible changes sanctions should be maintained,'' Mandela added.

The European Economic Community is scheduled to dicuss whether to keep sanctions against the white-minority South African government at meeting in Dublin June 25 to 26.

South African President Frederik de Klerk recently ended a European tour during which he tried to persuade leaders to end sanctions.

Mandela left Botswana Tuesday on his international tour optimistic de Klerk would soon lift a nationwide state of emergency that is almost four years old.

''It is a decision that the government should take, and I hope it will understand the need because, from the point of view of violence in the country, it has been totally inefficient,'' Mandela told Liberation. ''There is more violence today than when (the emergency) was imposed.''

The state of emergency led to a severe tightening of economic sanctions against Pretoria in 1986 by the European Community, Canada and the United States.

Mandela is scheduled to be Mitterrand's guest at a luncheon at the Elysee Palace Thursday and is to meet with Prime Minister Michel Rocard and former Prime Minister Jacques Chirac during his 36-hour French visit.

The ANC leader, who spent 27 years in South African jails before de Klerk ordered him freed in February, also plans to meet Pope John Paul II at the Vatican and to travel through the United States, where his schedule includes a ticker-tape parade in New York in his honor and an address to a joint session of Congress. He is to talk with President Bush at the White House June 25.

He also plans to attend a meeting of the Organization of African Unity in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, before returning to Johannesburg.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Speaker Thomas Foley marked his first year as House leader Wednesday, saying relationships between the two parties have improved since the stormy days that saw his predecessor, Jim Wright, driven from office by ethics charges.

Foley, D-Wash., was sworn in as the 49th speaker of the House last June 6, following Wright's resignation from the post. Wright, D-Texas, later resigned from Congress rather than fight charges that his financial dealings violated House rules.

Foley's elevation to the top congressional leadership post ended the turmoil that had effectively brought the House to a standstill for several weeks as the House ethics committee brought charges against Wright and prepared for a trial-like disciplinary hearing.

At the same time that Wright was deciding to quit, the Democratic leadership suffered additional upheaval when Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., the assistant Democratic leader, suddenly announced his resignation from the House rather than face an ethics investigation of his finances.

Foley is widely credited with improving the working relationship between the two parties since taking over as speaker.

''A year ago we were pretty well stopped,'' said Democratic leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo. ''There was a very partisan, hostile atmosphere.'' He said Foley has ''gotten the House back to work.''

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine, in brief remarks to the Senate, commended Foley for having ''his willingness to work with members from both parties.''

Foley, 61, asked to evaluate his first year, told reporters, ''It's been a successful year.'' But said he ''can't take exclusive credit for the many things that happened in the House''

''We have established and continue to benefit from the improved relationships of comity and trust between the parties, between the members '' he said.

''I'm very pleased with the progress of the session so far. It's going pretty much according to schedule.'' Foley cited House passage of bills dealing with ethics reform, child care, clean air, family leave and others.

''In the field of family life I think child care and family leave are going to mark this Congress as one of the most important in passing legislation affecting American families since the early 1960s,'' he said.

Foley said his major disappointment was House passage last year of President Bush's plan to cut capital gains taxes. However, the bill did not pass the Senate and Foley said the tax cut will not become law ''unless it's part of some broader legislation,'' an apparent reference to a potential budget agreement with the administration.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - The thaw in the Cold War has warmed relations between Moscow and Seoul and even holds a faint promise of detente on the Korean Peninsula.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev agreed in his San Francisco meeting with Roh Tae Woo to deliver an important message from the South Korean president to Kim Il Sung, the communist dictator of North Korea.

That message, according to a high-ranking South Korean official, assures Kim that the South does not seek military superiority over the North and urges him to meet with Roh.

Roh reported Wednesday on his discussion with Gorbachev to President Bush, who said it was appropriate that Monday's ''very important meeting'' took place in the United States.

A South Korean diplomat, briefing just after the White House meeting, said Roh sent word to Pyongyang through Gorbachev that South Korea, which is booming economically, is willing to help the hermit regime to its north open up to the world.

But the official acknowledged the Roh-Gorbachev meeting made Pyongyang ''very angry.'' He said China, North Korea's longtime ally which is beleaguered by internal problems, so far has not reponded to it. The diplomat said that until Korean unification can be achieved the governments in Seoul and Pyongyang ''should co-exist.'' Ultimately, he opined, a unified and democratic Korea could serve as a ''buffer between conflicting forces.''

''Between China and Japan?'' he was asked.

''Maybe,'' the diplomat replied without elaborating.

Meantime, two huge armies still confront each other at the tense border separating the two Koreas.

The United States, which maintains 43,000 troops in South Korea, recently has engaged in limited dialogue with North Korea, which has been firmly allied with China since the Korean War.

The Soviet Union, since participating in the 1988 Seoul Olympics, has established increasingly closer trade relations with South Korea, while maintaining its strong economic and military ties with North Korea.

U.S. officials believe improved relations between Moscow and Seoul could result in an accelerated withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea.

Seoul has agreed to U.S. plans to withdraw 7,000 of its troops from South Korea by the end of 1993, but opposes further reductions until North Korea and its Soviet and Chinese backers respond in kind.

While Roh has openly courted formal diplomatic ties with Moscow and sought detente with the North, the 78-year-old Kim has remained inflexible.

Moscow, for its part, has reacted with reserve to speculation that it might soon establish diplomatic relations with Seoul.

After his meeting Monday with Gorbachev, Roh said ''normal bilateral relations'' will come, but he did not say when.

Gorbachev said only that relations ''may arise as bilateral ties develop and in the context of the general improvement of the political situation in the region and on the Korean Peninsula.''

If that seemed fuzzily inconclusive, the optimistic South Korean diplomat explained, the Russians are just trying to avoid alarming their allies in Pyongyang.

NEW YORK (JUNE 6) UPI - The exclusive Texas-based Sakowitz retail chain will be liquidated after failing to attract any buyers at a bankruptcy court auction Wednesday, drawing to a close the posh stores' 88-year reign.

Neither a private investment group that had withdrawn an earlier offer nor former chairman Robert Sakowitz made bids for the chain's stock or assets at the auction before U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Tina Brozman in New York.

Hit hard by the downturn in the domestic oil industry, the five Sakowitz stores in Texas will hold going-out-of-business sales, perhaps as early as the end of the week, said Sakowitz bankruptcy attorney Sheldon Hirshon.

Sakowitz' sixth remaining store, located in Cincinnati, will remain open indefinitely, Hirshon said.

The Sakowitz stores are 80 percent owned by L.J. Hooker Corp., an Australian conglomerate in its own bankruptcy proceedings in New York. Hooker, which filed for protection from creditors last year, put Sakowitz on the sale block in 1989.

Hooker, which is under the supervision of a provisional liquidator in Australia, made a foray into U.S. retailing in the 1980s with the acquisitions of Sakowitz, B. Altman & Co. and Bonwit Teller.

Both Altman's and Bonwit Teller were liquidated within the last six months.

The Sakowitz stores in Texas - four in Houston and one in Dallas - have been losing approximately $100,000 a week, Hirshon said.

In its heyday, Sakowitz had 18 stores in three states, featured in-house European couturier boutiques, published a fashion magazine and introduced such top designers as Yves St. Laurent, Halston and Mary McFadden, said Robert Sakowitz, whose grandfather founded the chain.

Sakowitz said he had been talking to potential investors in hopes of rescuing the struggling stores but ran out of time to line up financing.

Talks with the private investment group, Sakowitz Acquisition Partners, continued right up until the auction began, Hirshon said.

The group made a $4.5 million offer for the chain but withdrew the bid in May because of disputes over language in the sale document.

Faced with a depressed Texas economy and increased competition, the Sakowitz chain was been forced to file for bankruptcy protection twice in the last five years. It emerged from a 1985 bankruptcy filing when it was bought by Hooker in 1987. The chain filed a second time for protection from creditors in May.

The five Texas stores have approximately $16 million in inventory, Hirshon said.

Buxbaum, Ginsberg & Associates of Encino, Calif., which will act as liquidating agent, guaranteed a return of 55 cents on the dollar to Sakowitz for its remaining merchandise. The funds will go to Sakowitz' creditors.

Sakowitz owes its parent about $7.8 million in intercorporate debt, Hirshon said.

The liquidation sales will end July 31.

The Cincinatti store is located in the Forest Fair Mall, which is owned by Hooker. The store will remain open while negotiations continue with the Bank of Nova Scotia, the mall's secured lender, which Hirshon said does not want to see the Sakowitz store darkened.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - The House voted overwhelmingly Wednesday against easing restrictions on exports of technology to the Soviet Union as long as it continues its crackdown on Lithuania or if it restricts Jewish emigration.

The House linked the question of Soviet behavior to a bill that would make it easier for U.S. companies to export equipment of strategic importance, such as computers and telecommunications systems, to Eastern Europe.

By a 390-24 vote, it approved an amendment that would prohibit any easing of restrictions for the Soviets until they begin negotiations with Lithuania on independence and end economic coercion against the breakaway Baltic republic.

The amendment also contained a resolution - which would not have the force of law but would send the Soviets a signal - that the restrictions also should remain in place if the Soviets move to slow Jewish emigration.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev said after his summit with President Bush that he has been urged to take such a step in response to complaints form Arab leaders that Soviet Jews are settling in Israel-occupied territories.

Gorbachev's remarks Sunday were called ''an ominous threat'' by Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., who attached the Jewish emigration language to an amendment dealing with Lithuania proposed by Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill.

Levine said only a handful of Soviet Jews are settling in the territories and the Arab leaders really want to stop any Soviet Jews from going to Israel.

Levine added, however, that the resolution should not be interpreted as a reversal of current U.S. policy of opposing the settlement of Soviet Jews in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Rep. Bill Frenzel, D-Minn., opposed the amendment, saying its purposes were ''noble'' but that it did not belong in a bill whose intent was to help U.S. companies gain a larger share of world trade.

''This is not a foreign aid bill,'' he said. ''This is part of an expanding U.S. policy to give us better ability to trade.''

Although the bill was passed unanimously May 3 by the House Foreign Affairs Committee, House members considered proposing dozens of amendments meaning debate could be lenghty.

Advocates of the bill said it was needed to help U.S. companies compete in Eastern Europe's emerging market for high technology and to enable the region to develop the economic strength it needs to sustain democratic governments.

But opponents warned that the legislation would make it too easy to export equipment that could damage U.S. national security and would undercut the Bush administration as it negotiates export controls with other Western countries.

Much of the debate focused on whether national security - at a time of a diminishing Eastern bloc threat - is more dependent on keeping technology from potential enemies or on developing economic strength through increased trade.

A case in point was a dispute over fiber-optic telecommunications equipment, in which voices are transmitted as bursts of light. U.S. companies want to market the systems, but the administration says they would make it harder to spy on telephone communications in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

The U.S. and British governments Tuesday both prevented telephone companies from building a fiber-optic communications line across the Soviet Union.

COPENHAGEN, DENMARK (JUNE 6) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker called Wednesday for strengthening the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, which include the superpowers along with East and West bloc nations.

Baker made his proposal on the second day of the Conference on the Human Dimension, part of the the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe provided for under the 1975 Helsinki Final Act.

The Helsinki process has gained new importance as a forum for dealing with the swiftly changing situation in Europe, including the pending unification of Germany. Many nations have called on it to to strengthen the monitoring of the progress of democracy in Eastern Europe.

''The United States favors regular consultations among signatory states,''

Baker said in his speech, proposing that ministers should meet annually and their senior officials twice per year. ''We (also) support the holding of CSCE review conferences on a more frequent basis.''

Baker said he envisaged a major role for the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe in dispute management and in the fostering of ''military openness and transparency.''

Baker called for adoption of the principle of free and fair elections, political pluralism and the rule of law.

''We seek confirmation of the Bonn principles of Economic Cooperation (that) make clear our mutual commitment to the supportive relationship between political and economic liberty,'' Baker said.

''Specifically, 35 nations will endeavor to achieve or maintain the free flow of trade and capital, market economies with prices based on supply and demand and protection for all property including private property and intellectual property,'' he said.

Denmark's foreign minister, Uffe Ellemann-Jensen, called Tuesday for the setting up of a permanent secretariat for the forum as a European version of the United Nations.

Baker cautioned, however, that U.S. policy in supporting moves toward a permanent European forum would be that proposals result in stronger trans-Atlantic dialogue and consultation, reinforce fundamental democratic values and complement rather than duplicate roles assigned to existing institutions.

''As we leave the Cold War behind us, we confront again many age-old national, religious and ethnic conflicts that have so sorrowed our common civilization,'' Baker said.

He stressed the importance of NATO in the new order.

''CSCE, NATO the EC and other democratic institutions of Europe must now play a greater part in deepening and broadening European unity,'' he said. ''(NATO is therefore) the ultimate guardian of democracy and prosperity.''

Presidents Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev could not agree last week on a compromise on the military future of a united Germany and left the task to their foreign ministers. While the United States and NATO maintain that Germany should remain within the Western alliance, the Soviet Union says such an alliance would create a security imbalance in Europe.

The Soviets and West Germany announced Thursday that negotiations on German unification would be held in Brest, a Byelorussian city near the Polish border where the Soviet Union signed a World War I treaty that led to the loss of much of its territory.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and his West German counterpart Hans-Dietrich Gensher are scheduled to meet in Brest June 11.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - The White House Wednesday backed the right of a top aide, Ronald Kaufman, to serve as a commentator at a Democratic Party convention in Massachusetts and said he was doing it on his own time and at his own expense.

Officials also noted that Kaufman, whom state Democrats accused of disrupting the convention, has denied the allegations against him.

The White House defended Kaufman in the controversy that erupted last weekend when an endorsement convention in Springfield, Mass., was unexpectedly disrupted by picketing police who have been without a contract for 13 months.

White House deputy press secretary Alixe Glen said Kaufman serves as a Republican National committeeman for the state and was present as a consultant, or commentator, to several television stations in the area.

''He was also there on his own time and paid his own way,'' Glen said.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said earlier that President Bush was aware of the controversy but that no inquiry was under way at the White House.

As to why the White House deputy, in charge of political hiring under personnel director Chase Untermeyer, was in the convention city in the first place, Fitzwater also said, ''He was serving as a commentator to the media outlets in the Boston area. ... That's his description to me of what he was doing there.''

Fitzwater compared Kaufman's function to one served by prominent Democrats on the national scene, and Glen noted that James Roosevelt, the party's legal counsel who has leveled some of the charges against Kaufman, had served in a similar capacity at the Republican state convention in March.

''It was totally appropriate for Ron to do this,'' Glen said, ''and he's stated he had nothing to do with the picket.''

Democrats in Massachusetts, however, said Kaufman had a hand in the union decision to change an original informational picket to a ''job action'' that faithful Democrats would not cross. Bay State Democrats have promised a civil rights lawsuit against the police and Kaufman.

Kaufman has denied any role in the picket line but is not so fondly remembered by Democrats in the state as the author of the Bush campaign's effective environmental attack on Gov. Michael Dukakis's environmental record with the Boston Harbor, and a high-profile endorsement of Bush in 1988 by the same police union involved in the weekend picket incident.

NEW YORK (JUNE 6) UPI - The dollar was mired in a narrow trading range against major foreign currencies Wednesday, going virtually nowhere in lackluster trading ahead of key economic data due out next week.

In late New York trading, the dollar was changing hands at 1.6880 marks, up fractionally from 1.6850 late Tuesday. The dollar was quoted at 152.60 yen, up from 152.40 late Tuesday.

Other dollar rates: 1.4367 Swiss francs, up from 1.4275; 5.690 French francs, up from 5.680; and 1,242 Italian lire, up from 1,240.

The British pound edged up to $1.6875 against $1.6870.

Analysts said a dirth of economic news this week is causing investors to sit tight, making for a dull market.

''Most of the movement Wednesday was sideways,'' said Barclays Bank PLC's Bob Hatcher.

Analysts said the Canadian dollar garnered most of the attention during the day as the market became more optimistic that talks between Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and the premiers of Canada's 10 provinces would result in an agreement that will prevent secession by Quebec.

Many investors began reducing the size of long U.S. dollar positions taken against the Canadian unit last week, when an accord appeared in doubt.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at $1.1701 against the Canadian currency, compared with Tuesday's $1.1745.

Analysts said most investors are prepared to sit on the sidelines until two major indicators, the Producer Price Index and Consumer Price Index, are released next week.

In Europe, the U.S. dollar closed down against all the major European currencies Wednesday after a quiet day on the foreign exchange markets, dealers said.

''The markets are just waiting for trade and other important figures due late next week,'' said Nigel Rendell, international economist with James Capel Co.

In Frankfurt, the dollar fell to 1.6885 deutsche marks from 1.6930 at the close Tuesday.

The dollar slipped in Paris to 5.6835 francs against 5.7230 and in Brussels to 34.73 Belgian francs from 34.91 Tuesday.

The dollar lost ground in both London and Milan.

In London, the pound closed at $1.6870 compared to $1.6840 Tuesday in light trading as investors were distracted by the Derby, the most important event in the British horse racing calendar.

The dollar closed lower in Milan at 1,240 lire from 1,247.40 at the previous night's close.

Earlier in Tokyo, the U.S. dollar strengthened slightly against the yen, gaining on a last minute rally spurred by reports that the Federal Reserve Board would leave interest rates alone for the time being.

The dollar closed at 152.60 yen, up from 152.43 on Tuesday.

Gold was higher in Zurich at $360 an ounce compared with $358 but was down in London at $357.25 an ounce from $358.75 at the previous day's close.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $356.75 an ounce, off from $359.20 Tuesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled June spot contract gold at $357.40 an ounce, down from $359.80.

Silver was unchanged from the previous day's close in Zurich at $5.10 an ounce but was lower in London at $5.08 an ounce, compared to Tuesday's $5.09.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.045 an ounce, down from $5.075. Comex June spot silver ended at $5.035, off from Tuesday's close of $5.065.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Vice President Dan Quayle warned against ''political exploitation of the environment'' Wednesday in an attack on environmentalists who have urged tougher controls on industry.

In remarks to members of the American Paper Institute and the National Forest Products Association, Quayle suggested some environmental groups were taking advantage of growing public concern over the environment to press for ''unnecessary'' regulation of industry.

Quayle defended President Bush's commitment to ''balanced'' policies that took into account the economic impact of pollution controls as well as their environmental benefits.

''Our economic competitiveness demands that we must not allow the physical exploitation of our resources and our environment,'' he said.

''But there is a different type of environmental exploitation that we have to guard against, different from careless timber harvests or blatant pollution or irresponsible waste disposal.

''Today, we are faced with ever-increasing political exploitation of the environment,'' Quayle said. ''This type of exploitation can have consequences ever bit as dire as the physical waste of our resources.

''Our future competitiveness demands that true environmentalists and responsible leaders not allow the well-intentioned concerns of the American public to be manipulated and exploited as a means to re-establish unnecessary regulatory, economic and social controls.''

Quayle argued the severe pollution in Eastern Europe showed that ''centrally planned, highly regulated economies'' were most prone to environmental degradation, in part because they were not successful enough to generate the money needed for effective pollution control.

''We, as Americans, are indeed fortunate that our prosperity affords us the opportunity to improve the land our children will inherit,'' he said.

''Preserving our environment is imperative,'' Quayle added. ''Protecting jobs and enhancing competitiveness is critical. These goals are complementary, not incompatible.''

Quayle appeared at a luncheon where several paper companies received awards for innovative efforts to reduce air and water pollution, increase recycling and save energy.

A Secret Service spokesman identified the man as Mwenea Sikuzote, 52, St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

The incident occurred shortly before 2 p.m. EDT as Quayle was leaving the Hart Building, where he attended a lunch with senators. Sikuzote, standing nearby on the sidewalk outside the office building, threw papers at Quayle Secret Service spokesman Rich Adams said.

Adams said he did not know what the papers were and said Quayle was not injured in the incident. The vice president proceeded to his car and left the area, Adams said.

Sikuzote was arrested and charged under the federal law barring assault on the president or presidenial staff. If convicted, Sikuzote could be sentenced to up to 10 years in prison, $10,000 fine, or both.

A staff member in Quayle's office said the man shouted at Quayle to take the papers as he threw them.

(JUNE 6) UPI - South Korean President Roh Tae-woo told reporters today that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev promised to try to ease North-South tensions in the Korean peninsula. Roh made the comment in response to questions following a 45-minute meeting with President Bush in the Oval Office. Roh met this week with Gorbachev in San Francisco.

Soviet officials say a dispute over 79 acres of land spread to the capital and other areas of the central Asia republic of Kirghizia today. The Soviet Parliament head told his colleagues in Moscow that 40 people were killed and more than 200 wounded in three days of fighting in Kirghizia, two-thousand miles southeast of Moscow, near China. He says more Interior Ministry troops went to the area from neighboring republics, but authorities have been unable to stop the violence.

Canada's 10 provincial premiers are meeting for a fourth day today in Ottawa, trying to keep Quebec part of Canada. They are discussing a constitutional amendment that recognizes the French-speaking province of Quebec as a ''distinct society'' and grants the province powers to promote and preserve its French language and culture.

The judge in the drug and perjury trial of Mayor Marion Barry today set a time limit on questioning of potential jurors because he said the jury selection was ''way behind schedule.'' U-S District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson told attorneys for Barry and the government that they would each have only five minutes for verbal questioning of each prospective panelist.

PARIS (JUNE 6) UPI - The French government Wednesday approved a controversial plan to ban all cigarette advertising and most publicity for alcoholic beverages within three years.

The proposal, originally announced March 28, was approved at the weekly Council of Ministers meeting and was almost certain to be approved by the Socialist-controlled National Assembly before the end of the spring session.

The legislation would prohibit all direct or indirect cigarette advertising and forbid cigarette makers from sponsoring sporting events or other competitions as of Jan. 1, 1993.

Advertising for alcoholic beverages would be banned on the same date, except in the print press. However, publication in the young people's magazines would be banned.

Opponents of the legislation have argued that prohibiting cigarette and alcoholic beverage-makers from sponsoring sporting events will mean the end of many professional teams.

TIRRENIA, ITALY (JUNE 6) UPI - Desmond Armstrong is one of the most recognizable players on the U.S. World Cup team because he is one of the squad's best performers.

He also is black and remembers when being black and playing soccer was not always a happy combination.

''It was really kind of hard at first,'' said Armstrong, recalling the days when he chose to pursue soccer rather than the traditional American sports of football, basketball and baseball. ''I was called an 'Oreo cookie' - you know, someone who is black on the outside and white on the inside.

''I was playing a sport that traditionally did not involve many blacks in the U.S. It's something I had to deal with. It did bother me, but I think it also made me stronger. Because I have been successful at this game, that experience has made me the confident, strong individual I am.''

Armstrong, born in Washington, D.C., moved to middle-class Columbia, Md., when he was 14.

''It was the American dream for my family,'' he said. ''We wanted to be upwardly mobile. We had a nice home and we wanted a nicer home. Until we moved to Maryland, I didn't know what soccer was, but if we hadn't moved, I might not be where or what I am today.''

Armstrong actually was playing basketball when a friend's father saw Armstrong and asked him to try soccer.

''That first year, I was dismal,'' he said. ''But I started picking the game up and by the time I was in high school, I was a respected athlete.''

He progressed in the U.S. program, earning a spot on three U.S. Olympic Festival teams. In 1987, helped a Fairfax, Va., team win the U.S. Soccer Federation's National Amateur Cup.

He also played for the U.S. Olympic team at Seoul and capped his University of Maryland collegiate career by being named to the All-Atlantic Coast Conference team for the third straight year.

He now is on the first U.S. soccer team to qualify for the World Cup since 1950. The Americans, who are given little chance of advancing, play their opening match Sunday against Czechoslovakia.

Armstrong is the team's top defender and one of the fastest players on the squad. He also has been able to overcome the criticism he received as a teen and along with Jimmy Banks - the only other black on the U.S. team - is encouraging blacks to pursue soccer.

''We are role models, sometimes whether we want to be or not,'' Armstrong said. ''It's very difficult to tell young blacks that soccer can be a very educational and athletically-satisfying sport when they turn on the TV and see Michael Jordan and the Detroit Pistons.

''They see the traditional American sports as their ticket out. Everyone is always looking for the quick fix - that's why so many people play the lottery.

''My message is soccer is a way to see the world and play a fast, exciting game. It's hard work getting that message out. I don't know if or when soccer in America will reach the level of interest that it does here in Europe.''

Banks, also a defender, said he did not receive the same treatment as Armstrong. They two met nearly 10 years ago at the U.S. Olympic training facility and have become best friends.

''When I was a kid, some of my friends would play a little soccer,'' said Banks, who grew up in Milwaukee. ''It wasn't until high school that I was the only one left still playing. Some people would see me practicing by myself and look at me funny, but I really didn't go through anything like he did.''

Both players have had success in the U.S. indoor leagues. Armstrong played for the Baltimore Blast of the MISL last year until he suffered a broken leg, and Banks has played with Milwaukee of the American Indoor Soccer Association.

''This team really believes it can advance to the next round,'' Armstrong said. ''If we do that, then there is the possibility some of us could play in the top leagues over here, so there is a lot of incentive.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - The Wolf Creek nuclear plant in Burlington, Kan., was the most cost-effective nuclear power station in the country in 1989, the Utility Data Institute reported Wednesday.

Wolf Creek, jointly owned by Kansas Gas & Electric Co., Kansas Power and Light Co., and Kansas Electric Power Cooperative, generated more than 9.7 million net megawatthours of electricity last year at a cost of $9.33 per net megawatthour, said UDI, a Washington information services company.

Wolf Creek's total electricity output was the second highest of any nuclear plant ever, following the 10 million net megawatthours generated by the Palos Verde No. 3 plant in 1988.

Following Wolf Creek among the top nuclear performers were:

-Prairie Island, Red Wing, Minn., Northern States Power Co., $10.40 per net megawatt hour.

-Maine Yankee, Wicasset, Maine, operated by Maine Yankee Atomic Power Co., $10.90 per net megawatt hour.

-Byron, Byron, Ill., owned and operated by Commonwealth Edison Co., $13.57 per net megawatt hour.

-St. Lucie, Ft. Pierce, Fla., operated by Florida Power & Light Co., $13.80 per net megawatt hour.

UDI said all six of the nuclear power plants owned and operated by Commonwealth Edison and the three nuclear plants operated by Duke Power Co. of Charlotte, N.C., were among the top 25 performers in terms of cost.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - A historic but ''humbling'' photograph of the solar system taken from deep space and released Wednesday shows Earth and its planetary neighbors as mere pinpoints of light in the ''velvet blackness of space.''

''Astronomy has always been said to be a humbling experience,'' said astronomer Carl Sagan of Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y. ''I think this picture underscores that point.''

The 8-by-10-inch black-and-white photograh was taken Feb. 13 by Voyager 1 as the nuclear-powered space probe soared out of the solar system on an endless odyssey after completing a revolutionary exploration of the solar system.

The photograph, dubbed the ''picture of the century'' by some astronomers, is a mosaic made up of 60 images taken by Voyager nearly 40 billion miles from Earth, and is probably the last image it will ever take.

In the mosaic, which cost about $200,000 to produce, Earth, Venus, Saturn, Neptune and Jupiter appear as tiny points of light arranged around a much larger white sun.

Because of a coincidental technical fluke, Earth appears to be in the midst of a huge sunbeam. Mercury, Mars and Pluto, on the other hand, were not visible from Voyager 1's perspective.

''On that blue dot, that's where everyone you know and everyone you ever heard of and every human being who ever lived lived out their lives,'' Sagan said at a news conference at NASA headquarters.

''It's a very small stage in a great cosmic arena. And again just speaking for myself I think this perspective underscores our responsibility to preserve and cherish that blue dot, the only home we have,'' he said.

No other photographs have ever been taken of the solar system from that far away and no other space probes are planned that could capture such images, said project scientist Edward Stone.

''This was Voyager's last light,'' said Stone, a scientist from the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, Calif.

Voyager 1 and its companion space probe, Voyager 2, are sailing into deep space, searching for the boundary of the solar system where the million-mile-per-hour solar wind interacts with dust and gas in the interstellar medium.

Launched in 1977, the Voyagers produced many new discoveries but failed to find any evidence of extraterrestrial life.

''There is no evidence - not a smidgen of evidence - suggesting life anywhere else. And for me, that underscores the rarity and preciousness of the Earth and the life upon it,'' Sagan said.

''The portrait of the planets that has now been taken is, it seems to me, in the same tradition as the extraordinary photographs of the whole Earth taken by the Apollo astronauts on their way to the moon, which for the first time gave everyone a sense of the Earth as a small blue-and-white world set in the velvet blackness of space,'' he said.

''For many people, it underlines the vulnerability and fragility of the Earth. It seems to me this portrait of the solar system has some similar feeling.''

Two television cameras aboard the craft took the pictures over a four-hour period starting at 8:12 p.m. EST Feb. 13. The United States was facing away from the spacecraft at the time the pictures were taken.

The images were stored on magnetic tape and radioed to Earth over an 11-day period starting March 16. It took Voyager 30 minutes to transmit each photo and the signals, traveling at 186,000 miles per second, took more than 5 1/2 hours to complete the trip.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - President Bush reaffirmed Wednesday strong U.S. backing for South Korean President Roh Tae-woo's policy of improving relations with Moscow, and reiterated U.S. hopes to improve contacts with North Korea, a White House spokesman said.

Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said that after a 45-minute meeting with Bush in the Oval Office, Roh promised to try to ease North-South tensions in the Korean peninsula.

Responding to questions afterward, Roh said ''of course'' when asked if his meeting with Mikhail Gorbachev in San Francisco Monday resulted in a promise by the Soviet leader to help ease tensions between North and South Korea and to spur the Pyongyang government to initiate democratic reforms.

''Yes, definitely, it will help to ease tensions in the peninsula of Korea '' Roh said.

In a reprise after the meeting, Fitzwater told reporters Bush and Roh discussed the Washington summit, North Korean problems, and bilateral security and trade issues.

Fitzwater said Bush congratulated Roh ''on his historic meeting'' with Gorbachev and ''reiterated strong U.S. support for President Roh's policies aimed at expanding relations with socialist states.''

''The United States seeks a reciprocal process of improved relations with both the Republic of Korea and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea '' Fitzwater said. ''... The United States reaffirms that it is not a threat to North Korean security and we seek to improve relations with that country.''

''However,'' Fitzwater said, ''the pace and scope of any improvement will depend importantly on North Korea's actions. In this regard, both presidents agreed on the importance of close U.S.-Republic of Korea consultations and the importance of North Korea fulfilling its obligations under the Non-proliferation Treaty to conclude and implement a nuclear weapons agreement.''

Roh, asked if a warming of relations could lead to a further withdrawal of American troops from Korea, replied that if ''a meaningful peace takes place, we can talk about further reductions of forces.''

On the question of reunifying Korea - the only remaining country partitioned as a result of Cold War divisions - Roh said: ''The problem is the opening and reform in North Korea. President Gorbachev agreed to continue efforts along that line.''

Roh said he and Bush discussed ''various issues of interest to our countries, especially our meeting with Gorbachev,'' including the possibility of improved relations between the two Koreas.

Roh said his meeting with Gorbachev, which ended 42 years of diplomatic silence between Moscow and Seoul, was important ''so we can melt down the Cold War.''

During a picture-taking session at the start of their meeting, Bush said, ''I think it was very appropriate that the meeting took place in the United States. I think it was a very important meeting.''

Roh emerged from his hour-long meeting with Gorbachev saying he was convinced South Korean-Soviet diplomatic relations are moving toward normalization.

''We have endured some extreme hardships in relation to the Soviet Union during our recent history, but the last couple of years have seen genuine warming of ties and we want to put the past behind us and move forward in friendship,'' Roh said in a statement released by the South Korean Embassy.

The Soviets have strong economic and military ties to North Korea while the United States has no relations with the communist government.

Relations between Moscow and Seoul were cool during the Korean War, the warming point occurring 35 years later when the Soviets participated in the 1988 Summer Olympics in the South Korean capital.

Trade had been conducted through third-party countries, but direct links gradually formed after the Olympics. Seoul and Moscow set up trade offices in April 1989 and later established consular departments.

U.S. officials seek improved relations between Moscow and Seoul, which could result in an accelerated withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea.

The United States plans to withdraw 7,000 troops from the 43,000 now stationed in Korea by the end of 1993. Seoul accepts the reduction, but opposes further cuts unless corresponding moves are made by North Korea.

NEW YORK (JUNE 6) UPI - Stocks closed lower Wednesday in moderate trading, unable to fight off profit takers after the market's broad-based rally Monday.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 10.19 Tuesday, fell 13.35 to close at 2911.65.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.78 to 199.15 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index slumped 1.68 to 364.96. The price of an average share lost 15 cents.

Declines led advances 868-628 among the 2,005 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 164,020,000 shares, versus 199,720,000 shares traded Tuesday.

For the second day in a row, the market was unable to shake off profit taking after rallying to all-time highs in the Dow industrials and other major indexes Monday. The blue-chip index has hit 10 record highs in the last four weeks.

''It was just a classic case of profit taking,'' said Michael Metz, analyst at Oppenheimer & Co. ''There was no new external news. New entrants into the market and profit takers are just evenly matched, for now.''

The Dow fell about 10 points in early trading before regaining most of that loss, but the recovery attempt ran out of steam. Prices extended their declines even further and oil issues, which were lower after Tuesday's sharp drop in oil prices, continued to weaken even as oil prices turned slightly higher on the day.

''The drop in oil prices has hurt the oils and oil-service sector stocks '' Metz said.

Analysts said they expected buying interest to remain in check since many investors expect more of a pullback after the record highs, making stocks available at lower prices. Metz said investors may get their wish in the next few days.

''My guess is we're spinning our wheels here. The next move should be a correction beginning in the next few days - not a serious crack, but the short term bias should be downward,'' said Metz.

''It will be cushioned, though, by the enormous number of inves who haven't spent their money,'' he predicted. ''They'll be nibbling at the market as it retreats.''

On the trading floor, Union Carbide was the most active issue, up 1 to 21.

Philip Morris followed, up 3/8 to 44 7/8. Eastman Kodak was third, up 1 7/8 to 41 7/8. The company said its policy is not to comment on unusual market activity or rumors.

Abbott Laboratories was fourth, up 7/8 to 38 3/4. The company's former chairman has asked a judge to force Abbott to pay him $21,700 in dividends and remove restrictions preventing him from selling 51,600 shares of stock.

Upjohn was fifth, down 1 1/4 to 42 after rallying Tuesday on continued merger speculation.

Among other blue chips, AT&T lost 1/2 to 42 3/4 and IBM eased 1/8 to 120 5/8. Oil components dragged the average down, as Chevron fell 7/8 to 69 1/2, Exxon lost 3/8 to 47 7/8 and Texaco fell 1 1/2 to 57 7/8.

Among oil issues not in the 30 Dow industrials, Mobil fell 1 to 62 1/8, Amoco lost 3/4 to 52 and Royal Dutch Petroleum fell 1 to 75 1/4.

Elsewhere, Campbell Soup tumbled 3 1/8 to 56 7/8 after surging Tuesday, when three dissident members of the founding Dorrance family, who hold about 17 percent of the company's stock, formed a voting trust and reaffirmed their belief that a sale of the company would be the best course for shareholders.

TransTechnology sank 1 7/8 to 7 7/8 after saying earnings for the fiscal year ended in March were worse than expected, with anticipated losses for the fiscal fourth quarter and the year.

And NCH tumbled 4 1/2 to 58 3/4. Late Tuesday, the company reported that earnings for the quarter ended in April fell 3.7 percent from year-earlier levels. Some analysts said they felt the market overreacted to the news.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 198,158,240 shares, compared with 241,395,950 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

The Amex Market Value index rose 0.78 to close at 364.19. The price of an average share gained 2 cents. Advances led declines 291-285 among the 843 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 16,575,000 shares, compared with 15,792,150 traded Tuesday.

Hasbro led the Amex issues, off 1/8 to 20 3/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index closed up 0.35 to 464.96.

NEW YORK (JUNE 6) UPI - Embattled Donald Trump, who is struggling to save his empire from a cash crunch, received some kind words of support

Wednesday from an unlikely source - his estranged wife Ivana.

Ivana Trump, separated from Donald since a February marital spat involving actress/model Marla Maples, the alleged ''other woman,'' issued a statement through her lawyer saying she fully backs the mogul as he confronts his financial woes.

''Donald and I are partners in marriage and in business,'' Mrs. Trump said. ''I will stand beside him through thick or thin and for better or worse.''

The statement of support from Mrs. Trump - who is still president of Trump's Plaza Hotel - came amid reports that Trump was feuding with his younger brother.

Trump, who has acknowledged he has been trying to resolve a cash shortage, was sued Tuesday by bond holders in two Trump casinos who charged that he neglected the Trump Castle and Trump Plaza in Atlantic City, N.J., in favor of his glitzy new Taj Mahal, billed as the world's largest casino.

The class-action suit charges breach of contract, fraud and violation of Securities and Exchange Commission regulations.

Trump has not denied that he may be forced to give up chunks of his business empire, which includes three Atlantic City casinos, prime Manhattan real estate and the Trump Shuttle airline linking Boston, New York and Washington.

Bankers owed some $2 billion by Trump are reportedly pressing for the sale of some assets, for management changes at Trump's principal holding company and for a much more conservative operating style.

The New York Post reported Wednesday that a feud between Trump and his younger brother Robert over management at the Taj Mahal may have contributed to the real estate mogul's financial crisis.

The 41-year-old Robert, known as the ''nice'' Trump, quit his job as the Taj's chief executive officer after Donald humiliated him in front of several Trump organization executives in April, the Post reported.

But Dan Klores, a Trump spokesman, denied that there was any ''bad blood'' between the two brothers.

''There is no feud,'' Klores said. ''Donald and his brother are very close they always have been. Robert Trump was brought in to oversee the completion of the Taj Mahal. He did a terrific job. Like in any pressure situation, they probably had their differences, but they're brothers.''

The Post said Robert Trump is the brother bankers prefer to conduct business with because he is less excitable.

The younger Trump confirmed to the Post that there was a clash between brothers when the Taj, billed as the world's largest casino, opened in April, but also spoke fondly of Donald.

Citing a witness who was present during the alleged feud, the Post said Donald Trump had been ''cursing, ranting and raving'' and leveled charged of incompetence at his brother.

The witness told the newspaper: ''Robert really got roughed up. ... He cleared out his desk and said 'sayonara' and went back to New York.''

Robert Trump is currently working as an executive at Trump headquarters in New York.

The class-action suit against Trump was filed by Peter Suyvesant, Ltd., described in court papers only as ''a corporation.'' It said it had purchased bonds in Trump limited partnerships that own the Trump Castle and Trump Plaza in Atlantic City.

The lawsuit sought ''compensatory'' damages but did not name a specific dollar figure. Named as defendants were Donald Trump, his brother, Robert, 14 Trump associates, and the Trump corporations and partnerships that own the two casinos.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Army helicopter pilots and senior Army officials said Wednesday night vision goggles enabled the service to hold down military and civilian casualities in the Panama invasion.

They testified to the Investigations Subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee which for several years has examined problems with the goggles, including high accident rates for night flights made with the pilots wearing the light amplification devices.

Chief Warrant Officer Larry Mann, who flew Blackhawk helicopters from Fort Amador during the invasion, told the panel that ''the night felt like a blanket of security'' during flight operations.

''The night vision was like a training flight except people were shooting at you,'' he said.

And Capt. Tim Jones, who was in command of an air attack company during the initial hours and whose helicopter crashed out of control in the Panama Canal, killing his copilot after straying into random anti-aircraft fire, also testified.

''We were at the wrong place at the wrong time,'' said Jones. ''... If it had been daytime, I shudder to think what the results would have been if they (Panamanian forces) had been able to see us as well as the 20-plus other helicopters that came into that area.''

Jones said a single Panamanian anti-aircraft gunner seemed to be randomly firing around in a circle or seeking the noise of attacking helicopters but could not see the U.S. forces because of the darkness.

Both pilots testified that training changes ordered after the subcommittee issued a critical report on the goggles has made the night flights safer.

Maj. Gen. Rudophy Ostovich III, commander of the Army's Aviation Center and School at Fort Rucker, Ala., said the nighttime accident rate appears to be falling off now and could reach a level nearly equal to the daytime rate.

''We own the night,'' said Maj. Gen. William Forster, head of the Army's combat requirements headquarters. ''... It's an absolutely phenominal advantage that we have over anyone else.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Public and private schools should compete for students, just as businesses vie for customers, so parents and children have greater educational choices that could lead to higher achievement, researchers propose in a new book released Wednesday.

The idea of school choice has been heralded mainly by conservatives, but now a book published by a liberal Washington ''think-tank,'' the Brookings Institution, is embracing the philosophy as a means of overhauling the nation's schools, which have shown marked dips in student achievement.

''Politics, Markets and America's Schools'' was written by John Chubb, a Brookings senior fellow, and Stanford University political scientist Terry Moe.

The authors' prescription for educational reform is to create an entirely new system of education based on free enterprise, in which public and private schools compete for students in the open-market and students can choose a school regardless of geographical boundaries.

''This fits in with our thinking like a glove,'' said Education Undersecretary Ted Sanders. ''We really applaud the study's conclusions that we need more choice and more control at the school level.''

But Gary Watts of the National Education Association, a teachers' union and professional organization, said the concept is ''not a sensible idea. It's very radical.''

Under the authors' scenario, students would be free to attend any accredited public or private school in the state, regardless of school district. Schools would set their own ''tuition'' and make their own admissions decisions, subject only to non-discrimination laws.

A ''school choice office,'' using a pool of tax-supported funds, would send schools a check for each enrolled student. Schools would receive additional funds for children with the greatest needs.

The authors also said school management should be shifted from school boards and administrators, which they say have created an ''overly political and bureaucratic'' system, and towards parents, students and schools themselves.

''The government needs to let teachers teach and principals lead. It needs to support public schools, but it does not need to run them,'' the authors said.

Watts of the National Education Association said the plan could not be implemented and would create a ''mindboggling'' number of lawsuits.

''I disagree with their contention that deregulation, all by itself, is sufficient to cause schools to differentiate and improve. Did it improve the airline industry? No,'' he said.

Chubb said conservative economist Milton Friedman first suggested the idea of school choice in 1960 and it was later picked up by President Lyndon Johnson as part of his Great Society policy of empowering the poor.

As to whether the idea will finally take off, Chubb was not altogether optimistic: ''The status quo tends to have a great deal of influence.''

Chubb and Moe's survey of principals, teachers and students found:

-Most students achieve more in an effectively organized school.

-All things being equal, schools that are more successful in promoting student achievement do not have higher per pupil expenditures, higher teacher salaries, smaller classes, tougher graduation requirements or heavier homework loads.

-The school qualities that really matter for student achievement are a clear sense of purpose, strong leadership by principals, high levels of professionalism among teachers and high academic expectations of all students.

-All things being equal, private schools have more effective organizations than public schools.

''The reason is not that they have special students or parents,'' the authors said, ''but rather that the processes of competition and choice discourage bureaucratization and promote school autonomy.''

Chubb's appointment last year as a White House educational adviser reportedly was nixed by Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos. The position remains vacant.

ANCHORAGE, AK (JUNE 6) UPI - Subsidized mail service to remote Alaskan villages means the Postal Service is unlikely to venture into a tempting new area opening adjacent to Alaska - the Soviet Far East, the United States Postmaster General said Wednesday.

The already significant subsidy for mail deliveries to dozens of remote Alaskan villages ''does inhibit us from doing something bold and dramatic and costly'' like expanding mail service across the Bering Strait, Postmaster General Anthony Frank said.

Mail between neighboring Alaska and the Soviet Far East towns must travel all the way around the world, via New York or Washington and Moscow, instead of making the short hop across the Bering Strait.

Postal services in the other 49 states pay for a growing subsidy for rural Alaska mail deliveries, but the money-losing system drew reluctant support from the visiting postmaster general before he left the state Wednesday.

Frank said that might change next year with the anticipated beginning of regular air service, thanks to the Bush-Gorbachev summit agreement establishing new air routes linking Anchorage to Khabarovsk and Magadan in the Soviet Far East, as well as other cities in both countries.

Although a small airline, Bering Air in Nome, flies charters to Provideniya on the Soviet side of the Bering Strait, Frank said regularly scheduled air service must precede mail service. Despite a growing number of exchanges, joint business ventures and various flights between Alaska and the Soviet Far East, Frank said mail service cannot be justified.

''It's the chicken and the egg problem,'' he said. ''We don't have the volume to provide the service. But if you provide the service, you get the volume.''

Establishing mail service across the Bering Strait now would do little more than subsidize planes carrying passengers back and forth, Frank said. He said that occurs in Alaska now and so he is wary of any other similar ventures that offer more ways to deliver the mail at a loss.

Frank said he supports continuing the Alaska bush subsidy, but said in an interview, ''Can't you call it something besides subsidy?''

The so-called bypass mail system, unique to Alaska, lets shippers bypass the post office by delivering groceries and other goods directly to airlines that fly mail planes to rural Alaska at an annual cost of $150 million but which generates revenues of only $80 million, Frank said. The

The bypass mail program lets bush communities, accessible only by air, get perishable foods and other commodities as priority mail at lower parcel post rates. The Postal Service finances the program with revenues from operations outside of Alaska, Frank said.

''This doesn't come from taxes. We don't have a reserve. But it's in the interest of the Lower 48 to make sure we're one country for mail,'' he said.

Last year, 72 million pounds of bypass mail were shipped from Anchorage and Fairbanks to rural Alaska communities.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Five senators, including president pro tem Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., circulated a letter Wednesday urging President Bush to consider initiating bilateral discussions with the Baltic republics on trade, aviation and maritime agreements.

They said the start of discussions at ''the earliest possible time'' would ''enhance our 50-year policy of supporting independence for the people of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.''

The senators also urged Bush not to submit to Congress a trade agreement with the Soviet Union until the economic embargo on Lithuania is lifted and negotiations on independence begin.

They asked Bush to attach a statement to agreements with the Soviet Union reached at the summit - trade, maritime, aviation and student exchange - to make certain they do not affect the legal independence of the Baltic republics recognized by the United States since 1940.

Byrd and Sens. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., Donald Riegle D-Mich., and Alan Dixon, D-Ill., asked their colleagues to sign the letter before it is sent to the White House.

The letter noted that 50 years ago President Franklin D. Roosevelt declared he would not recognize the forcible seizure by the Soviet Union of the three Baltic republics.

''We are very concerned that, unless certain precautions are taken, the recently proposed U.S.-Soviet trade, maritime, aviation and student exchange agreements may violate the long-standing U.S. non-recognition policy,'' the senators said.

They expressed fear that the agreements ''may imply'' either in fact or in law ''recognition of the Soviet incorporatoion of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.''

To prevent such an interpretation, they asked Bush to attach a statement to all the agreements that they do not affect the legal independence of the Baltic nations ''nor do these agreements imply any Soviet right to speak in international forums or conclude international agreements on behalf of the Baltic states.

''Moreover, any such statement should clearly object to any implied right of the U.S.S.R. to exercise any form of authority over the Republicas of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.''

The letter noted that the United States still recognized all bilateral agreements with the three countries, including the 1926 trade agreement that granted them most-favored-nation trade status.

Trade controls were place on the three Baltic republics in 1952 when the United States terminated most-favored-nation status for the Soviet Union so the Soviets could not exploit the Baltic's separate most-favored-nation status.

The senators said the Baltic republics offer a ''unique economic and political channel between the Soviet Union and the West. Thus, strong U.S. support for the independent Baltic governments would encourage, rather than threaten, Soviet stability and efforts at perestroika.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - Saying the Palestine Liberation Organization has been ''allowed to get away with murder,'' five senators demanded Wednesday that the United States end its contacts with the PLO.

The action comes in the wake of a May 30 failed seaborn attack against Israel during which four Arab guerrillas were killed and 12 were captured by Israeli forces.

The Palestine Liberation Front, a faction of the PLO led by Abul Abbas, has claimed responsibility for the attack, but Abbas has said he acted without the knowledge of the PLO.

Five senators said they would introduce a resolution stating that the United States should end its dialogue with the PLO until its leader, Yasser Arafat, comdemns last week's attack and expels Abbas from the PLO's executive committee.

The non-binding, sense-of-the-Senate resolution was to have been introduced late Wednesday or Thursday.

Earlier Wednesday, the PLO leadership, gathering in Baghdad, Iraq, called for the continuation of the dialogue with the United States despite the failed raid.

''The administration of our country, in my view, has no recourse but to fulfill its own commitment to peace in the Middle East by breaking off the dialogue (with the PLO),'' said Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn. ''It seems to me that Arafat, in being accepted in so many of the capitals of the world by so many of the governments of the world, has literally been allowed to get away with murder and it's time for that to stop.''

MONTECATINI, ITALY (JUNE 6) UPI - Czechoslovakia World Cup Coach Josef Venglos, whose team begins play this weekend against the United States, Wednesday said he was not about to underestimate an opponent widely considered one of the weakest in the tournament.

''They are a very good team,'' Venglos said. ''We respect their players and their coach. (U.S. Coach) Bob Gansler has done a good job. The game will be important for both teams. We hope the best team should win.

''We know all their players. They are a balanced team. We shall see how they adapt under the situation.''

Czechoslovakia arrived in Montecatini late Tuesday and will train in the mountain resort community 20 miles west of Florence.

Sunday's game will be critical for both teams. The U.S., playing in its first World Cup since 1950, is given little chance of advancing to the second round. But the U.S. players are emphasizing that a strong start is vital if there is to be any chance.

Czechoslovakia is favored to beat the U.S., but has not been playing well of late. It has lost its only four international games this year, losing at home to Egypt and falling to Spain, England and West Germany on the road.

''Always, if you are playing and the team is not winning, it is not very good,'' Venglos said. ''But we played very strong opposition (on the road). Spain, England and Germany have experience and a very strong teams. But we lost to Egypt, too. In (soccer) football, you have to be ready for all. I hope from now on, we will change our ways.''

Czechoslovakia's strategy in the first round requires a win over the U.S., setting up a battle with Austria that likely will determine the second Group A berth in the second round. They play their final first-round match against powerful Italy.

The hopes of the Czechoslovakian team have been boosted by the return of standouts Lubos Kubik and Ivo Knoflicek.

Both players left Czechoslovakia before the political upheaval last fall, playing for teams in Western Europe. But after the Communist government was ousted, both were invited to rejoin the national team for the World Cup.

''It is not really different,'' Venglos said. ''The social adaption to the team was not a difficult one. We didn't have any problems with any of the players.''

Kubik is vital to Czechoslovakia's success. He has been moved from defense to midfield in order to take advantage of his offensive skills. He also will be in familiar surroundings with two games in Florence, where he plays for Fiorentina in the Italian league.

On defense, Czechoslovakia will rely on the consistent play of Michal Bilek, who was Czechoslovakia's player of the year in 1989.

Czechoslovakia is making its eighth World Cup appearance, losing to Italy in overtime in the 1934 title game and to Brazil in the 1962 championship match.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - One hundred House members signed a letter Wednesday asking the House Armed Services Committee to kill a pet Army project, the next generation of helicopter called the LHX.

The members signed a letter to Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., written by LHX opponent Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., saying with the military threat declining Congress must challenge all new weapons and eliminate those that are not necessary.

The LHX is a $42 billion project due to move into full scale development later this year, with a rising level of spending.

''It is not needed. We cannot afford it and there are cheaper alternatives to do the job,'' said the letter.

COPENHAGEN, DENMARK (JUNE 6) UPI - A cloud drifting near the Soviet Union Wednesday that sparked unfounded rumors of a possible nuclear accident turned out to be nothing more than ''a puffy white elephant,'' an officer at a Finnish meteorological institute said.

The Finns sent up a plane to investigate the 93-mile-wide cloud and to take samples to determine if it was radioactive after reports out of the Netherlands that there was something odd about the natural formation, according to the officer, stationed in Copenhagen, and the Finnish Embassy in Washington.

''This is a perfectly normal cloud and no different from any other cloud one would expect to see in this area at this time of year,'' said Jouko Korhonen, the duty officer at Finland's Meteorology Institute. ''The cloud is now splitting up ... (and) when it hits the northern Soviet Union, it will begin to snow.''

He said in a telephone interview that Finland had reacted only because Dutch meteorologists monitoring the cloud when it was over the Barents Sea north of the Soviet Union ''thought it was odd. We didn't. These sort of clouds are perfectly normal in the area.''

''But when a Dutch newspaper got hold of the story, we felt we had to do something to allay any fears,'' Korhonen said. ''It has all grown into rather a puffy white elephant.''

In Moscow, the Soviet Meteorology Center denied rumors of any nuclear accident.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 6) UPI - Despite signs the U.S. economy is slowing, there is no evidence of fundamental deterioration that would require action to lower interest rates, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Wednesday.

''The signs of the economy at this stage are really quite ambiguous,'' Greenspan said at the close of the International Monetary Conference, noting that although inflation has eased, the unemployment rate remains steady.

''There are no indications of building up of inventories or cumulative layoffs in any of the data we see,'' he said.

The prospect of lower interest rates, sparked by weakening economic indicators and sluggish new job growth, helped push the stock market to record highs earlier this week.

Greenspan and central bankers from Japan, England, France and Canada spoke to reporters at the close of the three-day monetary conference in San Francisco.

Sweeping economic changes in Eastern Europe dominated discussions at the annual conference of top banking excecutives from 22 countries.

Central bankers said that it was too early to forecast the monetary effects of a reunified Germany but that reunification need not drive up global interest rates if handled properly.

''I'm very confident in the ability of the Bundesbank and German authorities to conduct in a very stable and anti-inflationary way all this process,'' said Jacques de Larosiere, a governor of the Banque de France.

Most bankers are ''reasonably optimistic'' German reunification will proceed smoothly, said Robin Leigh-Pemberton, a Bank of England governor.

''The immediate effect on interest rates may be neutral,'' he said.

German reunification has worried some bankers because of the prospect of increased inflation.

''It will depend to a very significant extent on whether or not unification has one, an effect in Germany, and whether of not that effect is on real interest rates or increased inflationary expectations which are embodied in interest rates,'' Greenspan said.

''To the extent that it is the latter, it is quite possible for it to be absorbed by currency rates.''

Commercial bankers said during the conference that the global supply of capital may not be sufficient to fund the huge cost of development needed in Eastern Europe.

Takeshi Ohta, deputy governor for international relations for the Bank of Japan, said a commitment of public money in Eastern Europe may be needed as a ''catalyst'' to spur private lending.

As in Third World countries, authorities in Eastern Europe will have to commit to true economic reforms to attract capital from the West, de Larosiere said.

He held out Mexico as an example of economic reform that has worked to attract foreign investment, citing the lowering of tariffs, the opening of its markets and the deregulation of the banking industry.

''I think we should be pushing the countries about to compete for savings to develop their economies to do the types of policies I have been witnessing in Mexico,'' he said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - The Defense Department announced $4 billion in arms sales to Saudi Arabia Wednesday that include 1,117 Light Armored Vehicles, 2,000 anti-tank missiles and upgrades for its AWACS early-warning radar planes.

This is in addition to the pending proposal to sell Saudi Arabia 315 advanced M1A2 Abrams battle tanks, 30 recovery vehicles, 175 trucks and other support equipment for $3.1 billion that was announced last November.

The Pentagon announced three new arms sales to Saudi Arabia Wednesday.

A $3.4 billion contract will provide the Saudi Arabian National Guard with 1,117 LAVs, which are similar to armored personnel carriers, 2,000 TOW anti-tank missiles, 116 TOW launchers, 27 155mm howitzer cannon, design and construction of ranges and maintenance facilities, ammunition and training.

''The sale of this equipment and support will not affect the basic military balance in the region,'' the Pentagon said in a statement.

Congress now has 30 days to consider the package and possibly veto the sales. If Congress does nothing, the sales will go through automatically.

However, Pentagon spokesman Navy Lt. Cmdr. Ken Satterfield said the Pentagon does not expect Congress to object to these three new sales.

Sales to Arab governments in the Middle East, however, usually come under closer scrutiny by Congress because of the United States' close ties to Israel and the Israeli concerns about being attacked by well-armed Arab nations.

Prime contractors in the deal are General Motors of Canada Ltd., London, Ontario, Canada, for the LAVs and the Hughes Aircraft Corp., Missile System Group, Tombstone, Ariz., for the TOWs.

A separate $600 million contract will provide for the modification of its five Airborne Warning and Control System or AWACS E-3 early-warning radar planes and eight tanker KE-3 aircraft.

The Pentagon said this will provide for ''an effective air defense command and control network, capable of countering all potential threats in the (Persian) Gulf region.''

''Additionally, it is essential that common configuration with U.S. aircraft be preserved in order to ensure future maintenance and supply support. Finally, the modification program ensures inter-operability between Saudi and U.S. forces, should this be necessary,'' it said.

Prime contractor for this sale will be the Boeing Aircraft Co., Seattle.

The third and much smaller, $26 million contract will provide 12 recovery vehicles with weapons and equipment, including 50-caliber machines guns. Prime contractor is Bowen-McLaughlin York Corp., Combat Systems Division, York, Pa.

KALAPANA, HI (JUNE 6) UPI - Searing lava from the Kilauea Volcano breached a crusted barrier Wednesday and flowed into the Kalapana Store and Drive-Inn, incinerating the structure after its elderly owner bid a sad farewell with cake and pastry.

The store and drive-inn was the last of three main structures that made up the remote Kalapana Village, located on the southeast coast of the island of Hawaii.

''A small breakout occurred this morning and the Kalapana Store and Drive-Inn was destroyed,'' Harry Kim, Civil Defense administrator, said. Lava had earlier moved to within 5 feet of the store before hardening last week, Kim said.

The Star of the Sea Catholic Church, also known as the painted church due its paintings of biblical scenes on its interior walls, was moved out of harm's way last month.

The parishoners of the Mauna Kea Congregational Church, located across the street from the painted church, declined to follow their neighbor's example and their church burned during the weekend.

The three buildings provided the social center for people living in widely spaced rural housing areas along the southeast coast of Hawaii.

Owner Walter Yamaguchi, 82, said he and his clerk visited his store on Tuesday.

''We walked through the store, took pictures in front of my 7-Up neon sign and I stood in front of the store and had my picture taken,'' Yamaguchi said.

''I had one big table left. We sat there and had cake and pastry. Then we went up the main highway about 150 feet and took a picture of the volcano. That was my farewell, I think.''

Last month as lava approached Kalapana Village, Yamaguchi made a traditional offering of a bottle of liquor wrapped in a ti leaf to the ancient Hawaiian fire goddess Pele.

The offering seemed ot have worked as nearby houses, the church, and pavilions on church grounds burned but the store remained untouched.

All that remained in the village Wednesday were a couple of tiny houses and canoe sheds, said Kim.

The store was the 161st structure to be incinerated since the eruption began in January 1983. In that period, Kilauea has caused more than $61 million damage to houses, roads, and property.

Civil defense officials were still watching the situation very carefully as some 650,000 cubic feet of lava still spewed daily from the Kupaianaha Vent 7 miles upslope.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell wants to end an apparent stalling campaign by opponents of the asssault-weapon ban that's included in an anti-crime bill.

That ban on nine military-style assault weapons is the most divisive part of the new anti-crime package.

Yesterday, the Senate fell six votes short of the 60 needed to limit debate on the bill. Today, Mitchell threatened to dump the bill unless the Senate votes tomorrow to limit debate, and force a final vote.

Also holding up passage of the bill is a staggering backlog of 246 amendments.

Republican Trent Lott of Mississippi says he doesn't understand why Mitchell is trying to force cloture now. Lott also denies accusations by the bill's sponsors that it's being delayed ''because of the gun issue.''

The anti-crime package also includes an expanded federal death penalty, and a process for speeding the execution of death-row inmates.

President Bush met with South Korean President Roh Tae-woo today at the White House. Roh said the two discussed ''various issues,'' including his meeting two days ago with Mikhail Gorbachev .

Following today's meeting with Bush, Roh answered questions about his talks on Monday with the Soviet leader in San Francisco. Roh said Gorbachev promised to try to ease tensions between North and South Korea.

The South Korean leader said Gorbachev indicated that he might try to get North Korea to institute democratic reforms, which Roh says are necessary in order to re-unite the two Koreas. North Korea is a Soviet satellite.

Roh also hinted that a warming of relations between the two Koreas might lead to further withdrawal of American troops from the peninsula.

Also today, Bush met with Greek Prime Minister Constantine Mitsotakis, who was elected in April. He's the first Greek prime minister to visit the White House in 26 years.

The Donoghue Organization, of Holliston, Mass., said average seven-day simple yields dropped to 7.67 percent, from 7.68 percent, and 30-day simple yields rose to 7.69 percent from 7.68.

The average maturity of fund portfolios was 44 days, up from 43 days.

The Bank Rate Monitor, of North Palm Beach, Fla., gave average rates as follows: money market deposit accounts, 6.03 percent, unchanged; Super-Now accounts, 4.98 percent, down from 4.99; six-month certificates of deposit, 7.73 percent, down from 7.75; one-year CDs, 7.88 percent, down from 7.9; 2 1/2-year CDs, 7.89 percent, down from 7.91; and five-year CDs, 7.95 percent, down from 7.98 percent.

The average rate for a one-year, adjustable-rate mortgage was 8.51 percent down from 8.54 percent.

The average rate on a 15-year, fixed-rate mortgage fell in the latest week to 9.79 percent from 9.95, while the average rate for a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage was 9.95 percent, down from 10.13.

The average rate for a four-year automobile loan was 12.27 percent, down from 12.29.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - With Defense Secretary Richard Cheney sitting in, White House and congressional budget negotiators agreed Wednesday to study a possible 25 percent, five-year reduction of American military forces.

A nine-member subcommittee, which includes Cheney, was designated to study the possible one-quarter cut in military capability and report to the larger negotiating group in about a week.

Cheney said after budget negotiators ended their second meeting of the day that the 25 percent figure ''seems like a reasonable number to look at'' given the reduced Soviet military threat.

He said he has already been looking at ''significant reductions in force structure'' of about the same amount.

The defense secretary said the subcommittee would try to determine how a 25 percent reduction of U.S. military capability - fewer troops, tanks, planes and ships - would compare to military cuts in budget plans passed by the House and the Senate Budget committees.

The Democratic-sponsored budget proposals call for much deeper military cuts for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 than does the spending plan proposed by President Bush.

House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri, chairman of the budget summit, said the Bush administration's agreement to study a 25 percent force reduction is not necessarily an sign the president will accept a reduction greater than the 2 percent cut he proposed.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., said the subcommittee also would study the impact of a 25 percent cut in military dollars in addition to force structure, as well as cuts of 15 percent and 35 percent.

Sasser expressed disappointment that Cheney did not come to his first budget summit session with lower military spending proposals than the administration previously endorsed.

''Secretary Cheney had nothing new to say today,'' said Sasser, who has backed much deeper Pentagon spending cuts than Bush seems willing to accept.

''The administration seems to be holding strong that the defense budget should not be cut,'' Sasser said. ''I was hopeful that Secretary of Defense Cheney would come in today and acknowledge the serious deficit problem that we have. ... That has not been the case so far.''

Cheney replied later that ''it's far too soon to surface any new numbers. We've got our proposals. They (Democrats) have their proposals. Now we're talking.''

Negotiators are trying to slash what could be a fiscal 1991 deficit of $200 billion to the $64 billion level required in by Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law. Failure to do so would result in severe, automatic, across-the-board spending cuts split between military and domestic programs.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - The Wolf Creek nuclear plant in Burlington, Kan., was the most cost-effective nuclear power station in the country in 1989, the Utility Data Institute reported Wednesday.

Wolf Creek, jointly owned by Kansas Gas & Electric Co., Kansas Power and Light Co., and Kansas Electric Power Cooperative, generated more than 9.7 million net megawatt hours of electricity last year at a cost of $9.33 per net megawatt hour, said UDI, a Washington information services company.

Wolf Creek's total electricity output was the second highest of any nuclear plant ever, following the 10 million net megawatt hours generated by the Palos Verde No. 3 plant in 1988.

Following Wolf Creek among the top nuclear performers were:

-Prairie Island, Red Wing, Minn., Northern States Power Co., $10.40 per net megawatt hour.

-Maine Yankee, Wicasset, Maine, operated by Maine Yankee Atomic Power Co., $10.90 per net megawatt hour.

-Byron, Byron, Ill., owned and operated by Commonwealth Edison Co., $13.57 per net megawatt hour.

-St. Lucie, Ft. Pierce, Fla., operated by Florida Power & Light Co., $13.80 per net megawatt hour.

UDI said all six of the nuclear power plants owned and operated by Commonwealth Edison and the three nuclear plants operated by Duke Power Co. of Charlotte, N.C., were among the top 25 performers in terms of cost.

(JUNE 6) UPI - Prosecutors are urging a prison term for John Poindexter, comparing his actions in the Iran-Contra scandal to giving ''a diet of lies'' to Congress.

In papers filed today, independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh urged a federal court in Washington to send the former national security adviser to jail when he is sentenced on Monday.

Walsh says Poindexter should go to jail, even though others convicted in the scandal were given probation or ordered to do community service.

Walsh says the highest-ranking Reagan administration official convicted in the affair should go to prison to punish him for his crimes. But Walsh also says it's important to warn other public officials that violating the public trust will mean more than just losing public employment.

Poindexter was convicted of lying to Congress and blocking its investigation into the worst scandal of Ronald Reagan's presidency.

Poindexter's attorney could NOT be immediately reached for comment.

Iran says the ball is in Washington's court when it comes to obtaining the release of Western hostages- including six Americans- held in Lebanon.

Tehran says it is serious about wanting to put an end to the hostage situation... but that the United States is making it ''difficult.''

Iranian President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani told a news conference today in Tehran that the door is open if- in his words- ''the United States wants it.''

Rafsanjani says Iran's current policy is to help the release of all hostages. But he adds that Washington is hindering such efforts with what he called an ''irresponsible attitude.''

Rafsanjani also says Iran hoped that the recent release of two U-S hostages would be followed by the release of Moslem prisoners held in Kuwait and Israel.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - The judge in the drug and perjury trial of Mayor Marion Barry set a time limit Wednesday on questioning of potential jurors because jury selection was ''way behind schedule.''

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson told defense lawyers and federal prosecutors that they would each have only five minutes for oral questioning of each prospective panelist.

During the morning session, Jackson noted that only a dozen of about 250 potential jurors had been questioned orally, and told the attorneys that ''we are way, way behind schedule.'' All 250 jury candidates had filled out questionnaires on Monday.

By the end of Wednesday's session, 19 more potential jurors were questioned. Three of those were dismissed because of defense objections. Five others who were not questioned were excused for personal reasons.

Jury selection is being conducted alphabetically. The court did not get through last names starting with the letter C Wednesday.

One of the prospective jurors, a federal employee, said she believes Barry used cocaine. ''If the evidence does not show that, then I'll change my stance,'' she said. She was later dismissed by the judge.

Another potential juror said of the widely publicized allegations against Barry: ''There must be some truth to it.'' He remained in the jury pool.

Several respondents said race was a factor in the case. Barry is black and U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens, who headed the probe, is white.

''I think (race) is involved in anything, not only in this case - anything '' said a former Marine, who is black. ''Race is a factor.''

Asked if he believed Barry would have been indicted had he been white, the man answered: ''He should be - I'm not saying he would be.'' He also remained in the jury pool.

All of those questioned may yet be challenged by defense or prosecution lawyers in picking the final 12 jurors and six alternates. Jury selection is expected to go into next week.

Jackson also said Anita Bonds, manager of Barry's suspended campaign for re-election, could not be called as a defense witness if she was to continue to work on Barry's defense team. Defense lawyer R. Kenneth Mundy withdrew Bonds as a possible witness.

Barry was arrested Jan. 18 at the downtown Vista International Hotel after he was videotaped allegedly smoking crack in a sting to which he was lured by a former girlfriend. The mayor has acknowledged taking the drug but said the FBI could have killed him by allowing him to smoke the potent form of cocaine.

The jury will be sequestered once it is empaneled. The trial is expected to last at least a month.

Speculation of a possible plea agreement continued Wednesday.

Some prominent local Democrats, including Jesse Jackson and Walter Fauntroy, the district's non-voting delegate to Congress, reportedly have been trying to establish contact with Republican leaders in Congress and the Bush administration, asking that they urge Stephens to reach a plea agreement with Barry.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater denied that any administration officials were seeking to influence Stephens. ''We checked with everyone we could, and could find no indications (of such contact). We have no involvement with this case, no contact.''

Outside the courthouse, Mundy would not say if plea bargaining was being pursued. ''I have no comment on that,'' he said. ''Perhaps later, but not now.''

Mundy said he had talked ''briefly'' to Jackson, but would not comment further. He said he had not talked to Fauntroy, who is a candidate to succeed Barry.

''We did not invite (Fauntroy's) involvement, and as far as I know he is doing this on his own,'' Mundy said.

Barry, 54, faces three felony counts of perjury, one misdemeanor count of conspiracy and 10 misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession dating back to 1984. If convicted of all charges, he could be sentenced to 26 years in prison and fined more than $1.8 million.

If jailed on a felony conviction, he would be forced to relinquish his office. Barry, who was arrested three days before he planned to announce he campaign for a fourth term as mayor, has not ruled out filing as a candidate in the September Democratic primary.

(JUNE 6) UPI - NASA says tests today confirmed what was already suspected- that there is a leak in the shuttle Columbia's fuel line. Now engineers have to find it.

The space agency pumped frigid liquid hydrogen back aboard the shuttle, which is still sitting on the launch pad at Cape Canaveral.

Today's fueling test confirmed that the leak only shows up when super-cold liquid hydrogen is pumped through a fitting in the fuel line. But the exact location of the leak was NOT immediately clear.

But the results appear to eliminate any possibility of a quick fix at the launch pad. It now seems as if the ship will be hauled back to its hangar to begin major repairs that may delay launch until early August.

But an official decision will NOT be announced until tomorrow at the earliest, when NASA talks to reporters about its launch plans.

In any event, NASA probably will delay Columbia's 10-day astronomy mission until August to launch the shuttle Atlantis on a secret military trip in July.

South African President Frederik de Klerk called a joint session of Parliament for tomorrow, and it's speculated that he will end the country's four-year-old state of emergency.

The expected move is seen as a bid to draw black leaders into power-sharing negotiations. It would meet a major demand of the African National Congress, which has pushed for normalization of South Africa's political climate.

Government leaders have been quoted as saying the emergency laws that were imposed on June 12th, 1986, would be lifted. The state of emergency is up for renewal at midnight Friday.

In the Indian Ocean port city of Durban, voters are going to the polls today to pick a replacement for a ruling party member of Parliament who resigned to become administrator of Natal Province. The election is seen as a test of how South Africans are responding to de Klerk's racial reforms.

BOSTON (JUNE 6) UPI - The New York Yankees, with their worst record since the days before Babe Ruth, Wednesday fired Manager Bucky Dent after less than a year at the job.

In yet another managerial execution that has become standard with the Yankees, Dent was replaced by Stump Merrill, the manager of the Yankees' International League farm club at Columbus.

Merrill's elevation marks the 18th managerial change since George Steinbrenner purchased the Yankees in 1973. He is the 12th individual to manage under the volatile owner.

Steinbrenner promised earlier in the year that Dent would remain his manager for the season. But, as has been the case with other managers in his employ, that promise proved far from binding.

The firing came with the Yankees holding an 18-31 record, the worst in the majors, having lost four straight games and nine of 10. However, they are only 8 1/2 games behind first-place Boston in the weak American League East.

''Our ballclub has its worst record it's ever had,'' said George Bradley, the Yankees' vice president for player personnel and development. ''Bucky was not going to be able to turn it around. That became obvious.''

Dent was promoted from Columbus to replace the fired Dallas Green last Aug. 18. Ironically, he was dismissed in the city where he achieved his greatest glory. In 1978, his three-run homer in the seventh inning propelled the Yankees over the Red Sox in a one-game playoff for the AL East title.

Dent is the second manager to be fired this season, both in New York. The Mets dismissed Davey Johnson two weeks ago and replaced him with Bud Harrelson.

''I worked very, very hard trying to turn this club around,'' Dent said.

Catcher Rick Cerone, a former teammate of Dent's, spoke with him at the team's hotel after the dismissal.

''He's kind of the scapegoat,'' Cerone said. ''I had a talk with him earlier today. He felt he let us down. I said to him, 'It's the other way around. We let you down.'''

Steinbrenner also fired third-base coach Joe Sparks, batting coach Champ Summers and bullpen catcher Gary Tuck.

General Manager Pete Peterson said Merrill received no guarantees to manage the club beyond the 1990 season. He made his managerial debut Wednesday night in Boston, taking over a club expected to hit well this season, but producing no better than a medicore .248 team average.

''It's taken me 14 years to get where I am today,'' Merrill said. ''Believe me, although I feel sad for Bucky, this has to be probably one of the happiest days of my life.''

Merrill, 46, a career minor leaguer who has scouted and coached for the Yankees the past 14 seasons, received a call from Steinbrenner at 1 a.m. Wednesday and was asked to replace Dent.

''I couldn't get here quickly enough,'' Merrill said. ''When you're in my situation - a career minor-leaguer as a player, a no-name - I knew when I came into the business it would take a long period of time.''

Bradley said Steinbrenner will decide whether Dent will remain in the Yankee organization, as have several managers previously fired. The owner was expected to arrive in Boston in time for Thursday night's game.

When Dent took over from Green last year, the Yankees were in sixth place with a 56-65 record. The Yankees went 18-22 the rest of the way to finish fifth. He received a one-year contract extension Sept. 8.

After a 13-year playing career, Dent managed five seasons in the Yankees' minor-league system. At age 38, he was the youngest manager in the AL and second-youngest in the majors behind Philadelphia's Nick Leyva.

''Bucky was as good as anybody,'' first baseman Don Mattingly said. ''At some point, though, (consistency) has to happen for this organization. Somebody has to stay for a while.''

Merrill caught for six years in Philadelphia's farm system. He has won seven titles as a minor-league manager and this season had Columbus in first place in the International League.

''I don't think this will turn the team around overnight,'' designated hitter Steve Balboni said. ''It's going to take the entire club - coaches, players, everbody.''

Added to the Yankees coaching staff was Gene Michael, who had been an advisor to Steinbrenner. He joins Buck Showalter, Mark Connor, Billy Connors, Mike Ferraro and Marc Hill.

(JUNE 6) UPI - The retired doctor who helped a terminally ill woman commit suicide this week once tried to make the organs of executed prisoners available for transplant.

A former aide to state Senator Jack Welborn says Dr. Jack Kevorkian wanted executions to be done by lethal injection so body parts would NOT be damaged.

The aide says Kevorkian contacted Welborn shortly after the Republican lawmaker sponsored a resolution to legalize the death penalty in Michigan.

Under Kevorkian's plan, the transplants would have only taken place with the consent of the prisoner to be executed.

But the issue wound up a moot point. The Welborn death penalty measure never made it to the ballot and capital punishment remains outlawed in Michigan.

Janet Adkins committed suicide near Detroit on Monday with the assistance of Kevorkian, who hooked her to a so-called ''suicide machine'' he created that injected potassium chloride into her veins.

More troubles for Donald Trump.

The real estate mogul has acknowledged that he's been trying to resolve a cash crunch. And now comes word of a feud with his younger brother that might have contributed to his financial crisis.

A newspaper report says Robert Trump quit his job as chief executive officer at Donald's new Taj Mahal casino after Donald humiliated him in front of several Trump organization executives in April.

A Trump spokesman denies there is any ''bad blood'' between the two brothers.

Adding to Trump's troubles is a lawsuit filed against him yesterday by bondholders in two of his casinos. They charge that he neglected the Trump Castle and Trump Plaza in Atlantic City, New Jersey, in favor of the glitzy new Taj Mahal casino.

Trump owes banks some two-BILLION dollars, and the banks reportedly are pressing him for the sale of some assets and management changes.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) UPI - Shearson Lehman Hutton announced Wednesday a long-anticipated reorganization of its businesses and a revival of the historic Lehman Brothers name.

The Lehman Brothers division will be responsible for capital markets and investment banking activities and the Shearson Lehman Brothers division will handle individual investor services and asset management activities, the nation's second-largest brokerage said.

All four businesses previously were under the aegis of Shearson Lehman Hutton. Shearson, which underwent a broad expansion in the 1980s, has been conducting a strategic business review to bolster its earnings, which have plunged with the decline in the securities industry.

''The steps we are announcing today have both strategic and symbolic significance,'' said Howard L. Clark Jr., chairman and chief executive officer. ''Realigning our businesses will help to sharpen our focus on meeting the increasingly sophisticated needs of our clients and also improve management control and accountability.''

Shearson bought the Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb Inc. investment bank in 1984 and integrated it into what then became Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.

The original Lehman Brothers was a commodities house founded in 1850 by two Bavarian brothers in Montgomery, Ala. The firm bought its first seat on the New York Stock Exchange about 30 years later and grew to be one of the most powerful investment banks on Wall Street.

''Changing our name in a way that links it directly to our principal businesses will help to create a clearer identity in the marketplace, building on the diversity of our heritage,'' Clark said.

Shearson said it also will change its name to Shearson Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc.

Shearson is a subsidiary of American Express Co., which recently has infused more than $1 billion in capital into its ailing securities unit and announced plans to acquire all the outstanding Shearson stock it did not already own.

Also as part of its reorganization, Shearson announced in March it would lay off about 2,000 employees and discontinue some businesses.

As a result, the firm took a $630 million charge and reported a $915 million loss last quarter, the worst quarterly result in Wall Street history.

Lehman Brothers will be headed by co-chief executive officers Richard S. Fuld Jr., who also was appointed president, and Sherman R. Lewis Jr., who also was appointed vice chairman and chairman of the division's executive committee.

Fuld, who once was a manager with Lehman Brothers, was president of Sherason's capital markets group. Lewis was president of the investment and merchant banking group.

The Shearson Lehman Brothers division will be headed by Jonathan S. Linen, president and chief executive officer. Linen, who has been an American Express executive for 21 years, was a member of the office of the presidents of American Express Travel Related Services Co. and president and chief executive officer of the Direct Marketing and Travelers Cheques group.

The Boston Co., a wholly owned subsidiary, will remain a separate business Shearson said.

SANTA MONICA, CA (JUNE 6) UPI - Pop superstar Michael Jackson's chest pains were brought on by a usually extremely painful inflammation of his ribs possibly caused by over-exertion or stress, his spokesman said Wednesday.

The Grammy award-winning singer, who remained hospitalized for a third day Wednesday, was expected to be sent home within the next two days.

The cause of Jackson's condition had been a mystery until a battery of tests revealed he was suffering from costochondritis, or a cartilage inflammation that affected the front part of his ribs, said Bob Jones, his spokesman.

Jackson checked himself into St. John's Hospital and Health Center Sunday night after experiencing the chest pains during a dance-exercise session at home. He continued to feel the pains while in the hospital.

The tests, ordered by Jackson's physician, cardiologist Mark Zatskis, revealed no physical abnormalities other than the inflammation, Jones said.

Jackson is expected to receive follow-up treatment after he is released from the hospital, ''probably within 48 hours,'' Jones said.

He said the inflammation can be caused by ''overexertion and stress and is usually extremely painful,'' adding that the performer's condition ''will absolutely not affect his career.''

The clean-living, lean pop star, who shuns alcohol, cigarettes and junk food, has no history of serious health problems. But Jones said the recent deaths of his maternal grandmother and of entertainer Sammy Davis Jr., a close friend, had put Jackson under some stress.

In addition, the excruciatingly shy star has been working on a new album, titled, ''Decade,'' that is eight months overdue and now scheduled to be released in August.

Jackson was visited Wednesday by his brothers, Jackie, Marlon and Randy, and his sister, Rebbie, who briefly greeted fans keeping vigil at the hospital.

One of those at the hospital Wednesday, a man identified as Jackie Lee Adams, 27, was arrested for allegedly making death threats directed at Jackson while being questioned by hospital guards, Police Sgt. John Miehle said.

The guards had asked Adams to leave the hospital grounds when he told them he was going to see Jackson, Miehle said. Adams, who was unarmed, refused and while under further questioning, ''made some threats against Michael's life,'' he said.

Adams was arrested on suspicion of giving false information to a police officer, trespassing and making threats of bodily harm, a felony, Miehle said.

On Monday, a woman who identifies herself as Billy Jean Jackson and is apparenty obsessed with the singer was arrested for allegedly violating a restraining order to stay away from Jackson.

During his stay at the hospital, Jackson has visited his friend, actress Elizabeth Taylor, who has been recovering at St. John's from a near-fatal bout with pneumonia since mid-April.

Jackson ventured from his singing brothers, the Jackson 5, with the Grammy-winning solo album ''Off the Wall'' in 1980. He has recorded only two albums in the past seven years - ''Thriller'' in 1983 and ''Bad'' in 1987. The albums sold a combined 60 million-plus copies, earning him an estimated $100 million.

When sales of ''Thriller'' hit the 24 million mark, the Guinness Book of World Records halted printing of its 1984 edition to include Jackson as history's best-selling solo performer. Seven Top 10 hits emerged from the LP.

ALBANY, N.Y. (JUNE 7) UPI - Following the longest budget delay in New York's history, Moody's Investors Service Wednesday lowered the ratings of the state's general obligation bonds to A from A1.

Moody's, one of the largest bond rating companies in the nation, said the state was particularly hard hit by the economic slowdown hitting the Northeast.

The slowdown is ''particularly apparent in New York, where employment growth has been static and wage and personal income growth has slipped,'' Moody's said in a statement.

Moody's also said revenue sources used to balance the $49.8 billion state budget are ''essentially a collection of minor taxes, many new and consequently difficult to forecast.''

The lowered ratings mean the state will have to pay higher interest rates to attract bond buyers - costs that are ultimately paid by taxpayers.

The ratings effect $4.2 billion in bonds used for a host of projects, secured by the full faith and credit of the state.

''It reflects the financial difficulty the state has faced but also recognizes the weakness in the economy,'' said George Leung, managing director of state ratings for Moody's.

''It reflects the softening in the economy downstate - weakness in financial services and real estate that have contributed to the financial difficulties for the state,'' Leung added.

Dall Forsythe, Gov. Mario Cuomo's budget director, said Moody's move ''was not unexpected, particularly after a six-week delay in enacting a budget.''

Forsythe added: ''We are confident as the fiscal reforms achieve their intended effects, the rating agencies will re-evaluate and restore the state's credit rating.''

He was referring to actions taken by the Legislature to end the state's long-time practice of borrowing money every spring to pay state aid to localities and schools.

Separately, Standard & Poor's Corp., another rating agency, announced it would maintain its ratings on New York state bonds at their current levels.

State Comptroller Edward Regan, however, warned the long-term outlook for the state's fiscal health remained in doubt.

The S&P ratings ''attest to the basic balance of this year's budget,'' Regan said.

''There is no doubt, though, that the existence of a serious structural deficit and gloomy outlook for next year have caused the low long-term ratings,'' he added.

''The state must rid itself of its reliance on dubious revenues and seriously restrain spending if it wishes to improve its ratings.''

Moody's also assigned a MIG-2 rating to $4.1 billion in 1990 tax and revenue anticipation notes expected to be sold Friday.

MIG-2 is the second highest of four ratings Moody's assigns to short-term notes. In the past, the state had been given the highest rating on such notes.

In assigning an MIG-2 rating to this year's borrowing for operations, Moody's noted the ''positive effect of cautious economic assumptions underlying the current budget.''

Only Massachusetts and Louisiana have lower bond ratings than New York state, said Steve Hochman, vice president of state ratings for the investment company.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 7) UPI - Shuwa Investments Corp., a Japanese concern that has invested heavily in ''trophy'' properties in the United States, said Wedesday that it plans to start developing apartments in this country.

''Although commercial real estate investment and development will remain the company's primary focus, we see an opportunity to expand our operations into apartment development,'' said Takaji Kobayashi, president of Shuwa Investments.

Shuwa, which has a $2.7 billion U.S. real estate portfolio, said it has secured a ground lease for an 81,000-square-foot property on Wilshire Boulevard in West Los Angeles with an option to purchase. The company said it plans to build a ''high-quality'' apartment complex on the property, located in the middle of the Wilshire Corridor area, the site of numerous high-priced apartments and condominiums.

Shuwa, which owns the ARCO Plaza in Los Angeles, the Quaker Tower in Chicago and the ITT headquarters building in New York, said the move into apartments is a ''logical expansion'' for the company, since it has developed more than 100 residential and commercial properties in Japan.

Jack Parsell, managing partner at Kenneth Leventhal & Co., said Shuwa's decision reflects the strength of some sectors of the residential real estate market. ''That kind of property can create a lot of value,'' he said.

''Shuwa began in this country as a residential developed 10 years ago, so they've really come full circle with this,'' he said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 6) UPI - One of the world's richest men, Metromedia's John Kluge, Wednesday was awarded $46.6 million in a civil racketeering verdict against his one-time close friend, transportation mogul William Fugazy.

A six-person civil jury deliberated one day before determining Kluge was entitled to $15.5 million. Under the guidelines of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, U.S. District Judge Robert Carter trebled the damages awarded Kluge.

Kluge bought Fugazy Express, a car service company, in 1985 and found it to be ''overvalued by $7 million to $8 million,'' according to Martin Shelton, a Kluge attorney. He said Metromedia pumped $30 million into the service to make it viable.

He charged Fugazy misrepresented the financial condition of the business before salling it.

A spokesperson for Metromedia said both Kluge and the company were ''very gratified by the jury's decision.''

Metromedia is a privately held partnership headed by Kluge with various holdings in telecommunications, robotic painting, computer software, film production and restaurants.

Fugazy said he would appeal the verdict.

''It's an absurd decision,'' Fugazy said. ''It's a personal thing, Kluge and me. Personally, we were the best of friends.''

Kluge and Fugazy were so close at one time that when Kluge converted to Catholicism, Fugazy became his godfather.

Now the two men, who both testified in court, do not speak to each other, Shelton said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) UPI - Spending on newspaper advertising dropped 0.3 percent in the first quarter of 1990 from a year earlier, reflecting a slowdown in the U.S. economy, the Newspaper Advertising Bureau said Wednesday.

Based on preliminary estimates, the NAB said expenditures totaled $7.296 billion in the first three months of the year, with a decline in classified ads placed in newspapers offsetting gains in retail and national advertising.

Spending on classifieds, which had been the newspaper industry's growth arena in the 1980s, fell 6.5 percent to $2.495 billion in the first quarter from year-ago levels, the NAB said.

''This has been a tough period for all advertising media and newspapers are no exception,'' said Craig Standen, the NAB's president.

''The changes we've seen, particularly in classified, reflect a slowing economy,'' he said. ''We expect the slide to stop as the economy stabilizes.''

In retail advertising, the largest newspaper category, expenditures rose 2.7 percent to $3.835 billion in the first quarter from the year-earlier quarter. National advertising, the smallest newspaper category, recorded a gain in spending of 5.4 percent to $965 million in the 1990 quarter.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 6) UPI - The chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts asked Congress Wednesday for reauthorization of the agency without restriction until a special commission reviews its grant-giving procedures.

NEA chairman John Frohnmayer told the interior panel of the Senate Appropriations Committee that the national debate over government funding of controversial artworks ''has been debilitating my agency.''

''I think it extremely important that the level of this debate be cooled and that a rational solution to it be found,'' he said.

Frohnmayer's attempt to sway Congress occurs as pressure mounts from conservative groups to restrict or eliminate the endowment over its funding of art some view as obscene.

The controversy stems largely from the endowment's support of a Robert Mapplethorpe photography exhibit that included homoerotic subjects and another exhibit that showed an Andres Serrano photograph of a crucifix submerged in a bottle of urine.

Last year, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., won congressional approval of a restriction that prohibits ''obscene'' art from receiving NEA grants. But Frohnmayer said judicial confusion over what constitutes obscenity ''has made our task more difficult rather than easier.''

Frohnmayer asked Congress to delay imposing restrictions on the endowment's grant-awards for at least a year. That is when the independent commission is scheduled to complete its investigation.

In the past, the endowment has been authorized on a five-year basis.

''The White House and myself prefer a five-year authorization,'' Frohnmayer said, adding he had administration support to seek authorization for one year or until the commission completes its review.

Frohnmayer said the independent commission would provide ''a rational, logical, clearly determined process by which the endowment can be improved.''

''The dilemma is that on the basis of maybe 20 images in the millions'' presented through NEA grants, ''the arts endowment has been attacked and our very existence has been questioned,'' Frohnmayer said.

Appropriations chairman Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said he favored continuing the NEA with ''no censorship.'' But he added ''taxpayers shouldn't have to subsidize this sort of so-called art.''

Byrd said NEA-backed art shown by Helms on the Senate floor to support his opposition to the agency were correctly characterized as ''filth.''

''I think what we're searching for is some sort of assurance that we're all going to do better,'' Byrd said.

''I can give you that assurance,'' replied Frohnmayer. ''It would be in my view a tremendous tragedy if Congress were to not fund this agency.''

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 6) UPI - In a stunning victory for state telephone regulators, a federal appeals court Wednesday overruled the Federal Communications Commission and restored the power of states to control the burgeoning market in computerized telecommunications.

State regulators now may require the nation's Bell operating companies to set up independent subsidiaries to provide specialized computer services that use the same telephone lines as regular consumer phone service.

The decision goes to the heart of control over the decade-old, multibillion-dollar market in computerized communication services. That includes such services as automatic bank teller machines, electronic mail, voice mail, computerized datebase services, alarm services and electronic meter reading, according to Pacific Telesis spokesman Steve Harris.

The decision may be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Under the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision, the independent Bell subsidiaries may be regulated by individual states.

Mark Fogelman, attorney for the California Public Utilities Commission which led the charge against the FCC preemption of state control said, ''We are delighted with the victory. This is a big win for the states.''

The court overturned an August 1985 FCC decision that held federal law preempted state regulation of intrastate computerized services.

The FCC would have allowed the Bell companies to merge the regulated telephone service - basic consumer telephone services - with specialized, non-regulated computer services.

States feared the Bell companies would use their monopoly control of local telephone exchanges to pass on costs to consumers that should have gone to purchasers of unregulated computerized services.

The state regulators also feared Bell companies would exercise their power over access to local telephone lines to gain an unfair competitive edge by putting their own computerized services on limited telephone line space ahead of independent competitors.

The Bell companies and other telecommunications concerns maintained it would be cheaper and more efficient to offer the services under federal regulation only.

Judge William Norris found the FCC's abrupt 1985 about-face on the issue of regulating computerized services ''arbitrary and capricious'' and therefore a violation of the Administrative Procedure Act.

The ruling pushes the FCC back to an earlier ruling in 1980 that had required Bell companies to set up separate subsidiaries for computerized services.

Norris pointed out that the 1980 FCC decision originally held that the possible unfair charging of consumers for the unregulated costs of computerized services, called ''cross subsidation,'' would be impossible to monitor.

By 1985, the FCC reversed itself and held increased competition in the computerized service market reduced the threat of monopoly abuse. The agency rested its action on the proposal that new accounting procedures would allow for protection of consumers.

Dozens of the nation's leading computer and telecommunications companies joined in the lawsuit, including the MCI Telecommunications Corp., IBM, NyNex Telephone Companies, AT&T, and GTE Telephone Operating Companies.

Joining the California PUC in the attack on the FCC decision were New York state and the Michigan Public Service Commission.

Harris said it is unclear whether all Bell companies will be required to operate separate subsidiaries. ''It will but up to the individual states to decide,'' he said.

Harris said Pacific Telesis, unlike the majority of other Bell companies, supported state regulation.

''State commissioners are closer to the market and understand the needs of markets in their jurisdiction,'' Harris said. He said the preliminary indications from the California PUC are that the state will not require the separate subsidiaries.

ASTORIA, OR (JUNE 6) UPI - Eight Greenpeace demonstrators held the battleship USS New Jersey at bay for nearly three hours Wednesday by dangling on ropes from a bridge across the Columbia River and then were arrested after the ship cruised delicately beneath them.

After the ship passed by, the red-clad protesters climbed back onto the 200-foot-high Astoria-Megler Bridge and were immediately taken into custody on state charges of criminal trespass and federal charges of violating a safety zone around the warship.

Oregon State Police Det. Mike Schacher said they could face 30 days in jail and $500 fines on the state charges and up to five years in prison and $50,000 fines on the federal charges.

''We gave them one last chance to come up,'' Shacher said. ''We warned them that they would be violating the 200-foot safety zone if the ship had to sail underneath them.''

The 844-foot New Jersey, which carries two kinds of cruise missiles capable of delivering nuclear warheads, had been due to sail past Astoria at 11:30 a.m. on a voyage 90 miles up the Columbia where it was to participate in Portland's Rose Festival.

It finally passed Astoria 2:13 p.m. while the demonstrators dangled 40 feet beneath the bridge in a heavy rain storm. The battleship followed a freighter underneath the structure.

The protesters, all members of the environmental group Greenpeace, had lowered themselves underneath the bridge using mountianeering gear at about 9:30 a.m. The were dressed in bright red jump suits to protect them from the rain and carried ''Nuclear-Free Seas'' banners denouncing the New Jersey for having the capability to carry nuclear weapons.

Although the battle ship has missiles capable of delivering nuclear warheads, the Navy will not confirm whether the ship actually carries the warheads.

Schacher said police chose not to remove the demonstrators from the bridge ''due to the possibility of injury, either to us or them.''

''The gear they are using is professional stuff. They know what they're doing,'' he said.

Greenpeace spokeswoman Shannon Fagan said a letter was sent to Rear Adm. Raymond Jones asking the Navy to refrain from bringing the New Jersey and other ships with nuclear capability into Clatsop County at the mouth of the Columbia, which has adopted an ordinance declaring itself a nuclear-free zone. She said the Navy did not respond to the letter.

Fagan also said the demonstrators had to pull themselves up about 20 feet to avoid being hit by the ship's tower.

James Perez, a free-lance photographer watching from a boat nearby, said the New Jersey moved slowly under the demonstrators while a helicopter hovered overhead.

''It slipped right under these people. It was almost at a dead stop,'' Perez said.

A total of 29 Navy, Coast Guard and Canadian naval vessels were traveling up the Columbia and Williamette rivers to participate in the Rose Festival. Many other ships went under the bridge before the protest began.

The New Jersey is the first battleship to visit Portland in 20 years and the largest Navy ship ever to visit for the festival.

The ship, with a crew of 1,775, is so large it must dock at a port terminal away from the downtown area. The bulk of the fleet will tie up at the city's seawall on the Willamette River.

(JUNE 6) UPI - Finland says it is sending up a plane to take a sample of a cloud hundreds of miles long approaching from the Soviet Union. Officials want to know if the cloud is radioactive. In Tokyo, a Japanese news agency says the Soviets have closed some air routes over Siberia, delaying flights between Tokyo and Europe. But in Moscow, there was NO indication of anything unusual.

At least 17 people were killed today when a Brazilian airliner with 41 people aboard crashed shortly before landing at a small port city in Brazil's Amazon region. A spokesman for TABA airlines says the turbo-prop plane went down about one mile from the runway at Altamira today. The pilot was among the 17 people killed. Officials say the plane was making a stop-over at Altamira, en route to a city in west central Brazil. Some survivors were hospitalized in Altamira.

Photos that have been called ''the picture of the century'' were released today showing the Earth and five other planets as pinpoints of light against a black background. The ''family portrait'' of the solar system was taken by the Voyager-1 satellite at a distance of nearly four-BILLION miles from the sun. Officials say they are the last photos that will ever be taken by Voyager, which is now heading out of the solar system.

ANCHORAGE, AK (JUNE 6) UPI - Federal aviation officials Wednesday were investigating whether faulty instruments contributed to the weekend crash of a Boeing 737 approaching a Bering Sea coast community.

The four-person crew was taken by surprise when the plane smashed into a fog-shrouded hill, raising questions about why the aircraft was too low for its approach to the Unalakleet airport, said Robert Benzon, investigator in charge of the accident for the National Transportation Safety Board.

No passengers were aboard the MarkAir jet, which was going to Unalakleet to pick up passengers bound for Anchorage. The Saturday crash injured the two pilots and two flight attendants, one seriously.

NTSB investigators returned from the crash site 7 miles north of Unalakleet to report that when the plane crashed into the 547-foot level of the 720-foot hill.

Although weather was foggy, visibility was within Federal Aviation Administration guidelines, Benzon said.

Cause of the crash has not been determined, but Benzon said, ''We're looking at faulty instruments or crew-related problems that we haven't discerned.''

(JUNE 6) UPI - Rebels in the African country of Liberia say they now control Robertsfield International Airport, and have closed it to all international flights. Sources say rebel troops mounted a full-scale assault on the airport, 35 miles southeast of the capital city, Monrovia, today after an initial assualt last night. Four U-S ships are anchored off the Liberian coast to rescue American and other Western nationals if they canNOT get out by air.

The senators are concerned that the trade agreement might imply U-S recognition of Soviet rule over the Baltic states.

(JUNE 6) UPI - Budget negotiators look at a 25 percent military cut... a four-BILLION-dollar weapons sale to Saudi Arabia... 40 dead in Soviet ethnic unrest... and Liberian rebels claim to control an international airport. U-P-I has it all, next:

White House and congressional budget negotiators met again today to try to cut the budget deficit, and their focus was on military spending.

A subcommittee that includes Defense Secretary Cheney was designated to study a possible 25 percent cut in American military forces over five years. The subcommittee is to report back to the larger negotiating group in about a week.

Cheney was at today's meeting, and afterward said the 25 percent figure- quote- ''seems like a reasonable number to look at''... given the reduced Soviet military threat.

But some Democrats remain UNconvinced. Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser says he's disappointed that Cheney did NOT bring with him proposals for lower military spending than the Bush administration has suggested.

Sasser says- quoting now- ''the administration seems to be holding strong that the defense budget should NOT be cut.''

The Pentagon today announced new arms sales to Saudi Arabia totaling four-BILLION dollars.

The sales include more than 11-hundred Light Armored Vehicles, two-thousand anti-tank missiles... and upgrades for Saudi Arabia's A-WACS early-warning radar planes.

That's in addition to a pending proposal announced last Novemer to sell Saudi Arabia 315 battle tanks, 30 recovery vehicles and other support equipment for three-BILLION dollars.

The Pentagon says the sales announced today ''will NOT affect the basic military balance in the region.''

Congress has 30 days to consider the new sales and possibly veto them. But a Pentagon spokesman says he doesN'T expect a veto.

Sales to Arab governments usually come under close congressional scrutiny because of Israeli fears of being attacked by well-armed Arab nations.

(JUNE 6) UPI - The Soviet Union says ethnic battles rage for a third day in the central Asian republic of Kirghizia.

The official Tass news agency says extra troops rushed to the republic in a futile attempt to stop clashes that have left at least 40 people dead.

The fighting involves the minority Uzbeks and Kirghizians. Tass reports soldiers kept ''rampaging crowds'' apart at Kirghizia's border with the republic of Uzbekistan today.

The clashes began during a dispute over which ethnic group would be allowed to build homes on 79 acres of farmland. But the violence that followed appears to have little to do with the original argument.

Soviet officials say 40 people have been killed and more than 200 wounded in the three days of pitched battles that quickly spread throughout the republic.

Tass says some of the rioters are armed with hunting rifles and other weapons, forcing security forces to open fire during the demonstrations.

The fighting makes Kirghizia the fourth of the Soviet Union's five central Asian republics to be struck by ethnic unrest in the past year.

(JUNE 6) UPI - The National AIDS Commission is puzzled by a Senate vote today that would allow employers to ban people with AIDS from jobs involving handling food.

A spokesman for the commission says the Public Health Service has said there is NO reason why AIDS victims should be barred from food handling. And he says he doesN'T understand why Congress should ignore the advice of government health officials.

Senators approved the proposal by North Carolina Republican Jesse Helms by voice vote. The vote involves a House-passed amendment to the Americans with Disabilities Act that is designed to protect people with disabilities from discrimination.

Helms defended the amendment as a ''matter of staying in business'' for many restaurants, saying the facts doN'T matter so much as people's perceptions.

Perceptions also come into play in another arena- the nation's blood supply.

Scientists say fears triggered by the AIDS epidemic have caused a decline in blood transfusions.

State telephone regulators won a victory today. A federal appeals court in San Francisco overruled the F-C-C and restored the power of states to regulate computerized tele-communication services such as electronic mail. MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Dayton Hudson Corporation today reported that its net retail sales for the four weeks ended June 2, 1990 increased 7.9 percent to $958 million from $888 million a year ago.

Comparable-store sales were up 4.2 percent from the same period a year ago.

Kenneth A. Macke, chairman and chief executive officer of Dayton Hudson, said the Corporation was especially pleased with the sales increases at its Target and Mervyn's divisions. ''The somewhat disappointing results at our department store division reflect an unusually cold and rainy May throughout the Upper Midwest,'' he said. ''We would be happy to have a good warm spell to increase sales of swimsuits and other warm weather items.''

''Our inventories are in good shape and we continue to be on track for solid performance for the year,'' Macke said.

May sales by business segment for the four weeks were as follows:

o Target's total sales rose 10 percent while comparable-store sales were up 5 percent.

o Mervyn's total sales increased 9 percent and comparable-store sales increased 7 percent.

o Dayton Hudson Department Store Company's total and comparable-store sales were down 4 percent.

Sales for the 17 weeks ended June 2, 1990 were $3.91 billion, up 12.0 percent from $3.49 billion in the same period a year ago. Comparable-store sales for the 17 week period were up 6.2 percent compared to the same period last year.

As of June 2, 1990, Dayton Hudson operated 665 stores in 33 states.

ROLLING HILLS ESTATES, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Panatech Research and Development Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS:PNTC) Thursday reported operating income of $301,200, for its fourth quarter ended March 31, 1990, and net income of $101,700, or 2.3 cents per share, on sales of $3,245,300.

For the comparable period ended March 31, 1989, the company reported an operating loss of $229,100, and a net loss of $64,300, or 1.7 cents per share.

Net income for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1990, was $161,900, or 4 cents per share, on sales of $7,812,000. In the prior year the company had a loss of $229,400, or 6.1 cents per share, from continuing operations but registered a non-recurring gain of $755,800, from the discontinued operations and sale of its Dutch subsidiary, Duracarb b.v., in September 1988.

The results reflect the acquisition of Allied Interstate Datanet Corp. (AIDCO) in August 1989 and of ASM Co. in October 1989. AIDCO designs, installs and maintains data networking and communications systems. ASM manufactures patented accessories for high-pressure spraying equipment. Prior to these acquisitions Panatech had no operating activities since its sale of Duracarb.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Adobe Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:ADBE) and Eastman Kodak Co. announced Thursday that they have signed an agreement giving Kodak licensing rights to Adobe's PostScript software technology.

Kodak will develop electronic imaging products that incorporate Adobe's PostScript interpreter. No specific products were announced at this time.

''We are very pleased to make this announcement,'' said Dr. Charles Geschke, president and chief operating officer, Adobe Systems. ''In announcing this licensing agreement, I'd also like to recognize the contribution Kodak made to the development of the device-independent color capabilities in PostScript Level 2, the next generation of the PostScript language.

''We sought out and received extensive support and advice from Kodak, a recognized leader in color technology, and from other of our OEMs, as we planned and developed those capabilities. Together with our OEMs, we plan to bring the optimum color imaging solutions to market in the 90s.''

''Today's announcement promises significant benefits for everyone who produces color output,'' said James Nealon, program manager, Integration Systems, Eastman Kodak Co.

''Electronic color imaging is a very significant business opportunity for Kodak in the 1990s and beyond, and we see our agreement with Adobe as a key part of our strategy for being a leader in that business.''

Adobe designs controllers and licenses PostScript interpreters to original equipment manufacturers, which incorporate them into their computers and peripherals. Nearly every major computer system, printer and typesetter manufacturer offers PostScript printing and/or display solutions from Adobe.

Eastman Kodak Co. of Rochester, N.Y. -- in addition to its traditional film, chemical and health businesses -- is a major manufacturer/marketer of imaging products, systems and services for business and government. Kodak products include scanning, storage, software and printing devices for a range of document and color imaging applications.

Adobe Systems Inc., founded in 1982 by Dr. John Warnock and Dr. Charles Geschke, is headquartered in Mountain View, Calif. Adobe is the developer of PostScript, the industry-standard page description language for electronic printing and publishing and Display PostScript, a device-independent graphics software component for computer displays.

In addition, the company develops and markets the Adobe Type Library and a line of application software products including Adobe Illustrator 88, Adobe Type Manager and Adobe Photoshop. Revenues for 1989 were over $120 million.

MENLO PARK, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Matrix Pharmaceutical, a biomedical company focusing on targeted drug delivery systems for cancer and hyperproliferative skin diseases, has completed an $8 million second round of venture capital financing.

The investors include J.H. Whitney & Co., Canaan Venture Partners, EG&G Venture Partners, Technology Funding Inc., Pathfinder Venture Capital Funds, J.P. Morgan & Co. and Menlo Ventures.

"This latest funding indicates a high degree of confidence in our site-specific approach to drug delivery," noted Bert DelVillano, Ph.D, president and chief executive officer. "Our near-term emphasis is on products based on our Therapeutic Implant drug delivery system," Dr. DelVillano added.

"As human clinical studies are demonstrating, this patented technology shows strong potential for improving the medical value of genetically engineered biologicals."

Therapeutic Implant products are designed to concentrate the impact of potent chemotherapeutic drugs and biologicals at the site of diseased tissues, thereby minimizing the effect of therapy on the rest of the body and potentially allowing high enough dosage levels to overcome drug resistance. These products can be used alone or in combination with surgery, radiotherapy, and hyperthermia.

Advanced Phase II human clinical studies of the Therapeutic Implants are in progress for the treatment of highly resistant condylomata acuminata (anogenital warts), recalcitrant plaque-type psoriasis and basal cell carcinoma (skin cancer).

Phase I clinical studies also are under way against advanced malignancies of the central nervous system. Preparations are being made for additional clinical studies involving several other advanced cancer indications, including head and neck cancer.

Phase III clinical studies for the treatment of anogenital warts are projected to begin in early 1991, in preparation for the company's first NDA (New Drug Application) for marketing approval.

Matrix Pharmaceutical was founded in 1982 by Edward E. Luck and Dennis M. Brown, Ph.D., in order to develop and commercialize innovative drug delivery systems.

Among the company's key objectives: to increase the effectiveness of medical approaches to the treatment of recalcitrant, resistant, and recurrent disease; to treat and spare organs and other critical tissues that might otherwise be removed surgically; to reduce treatment side effects; and to broaden clinical indications for potent drug therapies.

SAN ANTONIO (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Docucon Inc. (NASDAQ, OTC, BSE: DOCU DOCUU, DOCUW) announced Thursday that it had been awarded a contract by Xerox Corp. to convert 980,000 aperature cards to optical disk resident digital images at Louisville, Ky.

The images will be loaded onto the Navy's Engineering Data Management Information and Control System (EDMICS) located at the Naval Ordnance Station in Louisville.

Louisville is the first of up to 47 sites to have EDMICS systems installed under a conract awarded last year to Advanced Technology Inc. with strategic teaming partner, Xerox Corp.

Eventually, millions of the Navy's hardcopy and aperture card engineering documents will be converted to digital images for use on the systems which bring together document scanners, image editing software, specialized image workstations, and optical storage systems to create the Navy's engineering image and document processing system.

''We are very pleased to have been selected to provide the initial conversion for EDMICS,'' said Allan Hobgood, vice president of Marketing for Docucon.

''We intend to maintain our position as the leading provider of conersion services for the DoD's CALS programs and this project, in addition to the work we are currently doing for the Navy, Air Force, and Army, is an important step in the continuing implementation of this strategy.''

Docucon specializes in high volume conversion of paper and microform documents for use on optical disk based image systems. In addition to the federal government, the San Antonio based company's markets include state and local government, commercial, and law firms.

ARCADIA, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Alan F. Balch, who ended a 15-year association with Santa Anita Park in 1986 to start his own company, will rejoin Santa Anita to direct the operations of the marketing, publicity and sales promotion departments, effective immediately.

The announcement was made by Clifford C. Goodrich, president of Santa Anita, who said that A. Balch & Co. has been retained to supervise the marketing program, with Alan Balch to maintain an office at the track as the key liaison person.

Allan E. Krantz, who became Santa Anita's director of marketing two years ago, has left to pursue other business interests.

''We are extremely pleased to obtain the services of the foremost horse racing marketing specialist in the country,'' Goodrich said. ''Alan Balch started the first marketing department of any track when he was brought in to Santa Anita, and he developed the program which was instrumental in Santa Anita's attaining national leadership in the 1970s and 80s.

''He has added to his depth of experience in the last four years by heading the satellite wagering operation in northern California and by opening his own advertising agency and consulting business.

''A. Balch & Co. was chosen to handle Santa Anita and Oak Tree's advertising in 1988 and will continue to do so. We think this association combined with Alan Balch's leadership in marketing will be invaluable as we emphasize building both our on-track business and the growth of satellite and simulcast wagering.''

A graduate of Claremont McKenna College and holder of a graduate degree from Harvard University, Balch first joined Santa Anita in 1971 as director of public relations. Subsequently, he was named vice president - marketing, senior vice president, and assistant general manager. He was instrumental in the selection of Santa Anita as the major site of and the management of the equestrian sports of the 1984 Olympic Games.

Balch currently maintains offices and residences in Pasadena and San Francisco.

VANCOUVER, BC (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Bethlehem Resources Corp. (''Bethlehem'') and Goldnev Resources Inc. (''Goldnev'') announced on May 9, 1990, their agreement to merge in order to facilitate reactivation of their jointly owned Goldstream copper mine.

Subject to receipt of all necessary approvals and fairness opinions, which will soon be available, the Bethlehem-Goldnev merger is now planned to take place as expeditiously as possible.

Recent discussions with Seven Mile High Group Inc. (''Seven Mile'') have led to an investigation into the possibility of merging to combine the three companies' operations and financing strengths in a new diversified mining products group. Seven Mile, which owns 40 percent of a very promising gold project in the Okanagan managed by Inco Gold, would add attractive assets and financing dimensions to the group.

If an agreement can soon be concluded, Seven Mile could make a three way merger possible.

MONTREAL, QUEBEC (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Ogivar Technologies will hold a media conference on June 12 at the Sheraton Centre Hotel in New York City to introduce its Interport series of new laptop/desktop computers available in 386SX- and 386/33DX-based models.

Ogivar, which expects to announce fiscal-1990 revenues of close to $50 million, is a Montreal-based manufacturer distributing a full line of portable and desktop PC-compatible computers throughout North America and Europe.

Ogivar's marketing philosophy will position the Interport series as a desktop personal computer that is also portable, providing the user with the capabilities and benefits of a desktop unit that easily becomes portable.

The Interport series laptop measures 11.5-inches deep by ten-inches wide by 1.5-inches high and weighs only 9.8 pounds (without battery). The unit provides a nine-inch VGA display and utilizes unique LCD technology for a picture contrast comparable to super-double-twist displays now entering the market. The Interport series runs the latest graphic software programs with 640-by-480 DPI sharpness and 32 shades of gray.

The new Interport station recognizes all Interport-series laptop configurations, eliminating time-consuming reconfigurations by the user. A salesperson from anywhere around the world can plug the Interport series into the Interport station at any other location and be up-and-running immediately. The Interport station has a full keyboard and monitor (color or monochrome).

This product introduction is a significant event for the Canadian computer industry. Ogivar is making this announcement from its Montreal headquarters and will be teleconferencing it live to its Canada offices in Ottawa, Vancouver and Toronto, as well as media centers in New York and Paris.

The New York media conference begins at 10:30 a.m. in the Sheraton Centre Hotel Consulate Room in mid-town Manhattan. Journalists wishing to cover this event should RSVP with Fisher Business Communications at (714) 852-1313; FAX: (714) 852-8432.

SAN DIEGO (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - In a key strategic move, American Healthcare Systems (AmHS(R)) has announced the formation of an innovative national risk-sharing insurance program for its multihospital systems.

The alliance has expanded its role from the group purchasing of insurance to the assumption of risk through establishing the AmHS Insurance Co., Risk Retention Group, based in Vermont, said William Nydam, senior vice president and chief financial officer of AmHS.

Additionally, American Excess Insurance Ltd., an off-shore captive insurance company, has been established in Bermuda.

Of the approximately 400 AmHS facilities eligible for this program, more than 300 have voluntarily joined. This established the AmHS Excess Liability Insurance Program as one of the larger hospital liability programs in the nation from the outset.

AmHS has been successfully engaged in the group purchasing of Directors and Officers, Hospital Professional Liability, and Property and Life Insurance as predecessor programs. AmHS' new program has been made possible by the very extensive support received from commercial insurers and reinsurers.

AmHS utilized the services of the Johnson and Higgins HealthGroup, its National Casualty office and its healthcare subsidiary, Health Industry Insurance Professionals Inc., in planning and establishing this program.

AmHS is one of the largest healthcare networks in the nation, with not-for-profit healthcare facilities in 44 states and Washington, D.C. AmHS shareholders represent combined revenues of more than $17 billion.

AmHS operates one of the nation's largest healthcare group purchasing programs and is involved in a healthcare venture capital fund, a national research and educational institute, a capital finance corporation and a wide range of healthcare businesses.

PHOENIX (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Phoenix-based America West Airlines (NASDAQ:AWAL; PSE:AWA) regained the No. 1 position in on-time performance for April 1990 according to the latest Department of Transportation monthly report.

The carrier, which holds the national championship in on-time performance for 1989, 1988 and since the DOT began mandatory reporting in 1987, operated 90 percent of its April flights within 15 minutes of schedule. America West dominated all carriers at its ''superhub'' at Phoenix and Las Vegas with 89.5 percent and 93.4 percent of its flights arriving on-time, respectively. The airline's 90 percent mark was the highest figure logged by any airline since America West's 90.8 percent performance in June 1989. Preliminary figures show the carrier's May on-time performance over 90 percent.

America West's May 1990 traffic rose to 910,296,000 revenue passenger miles, a 53.4 percent increase over May 1989. Available seat miles for the month increased 34.9 percent over last year to 1,502,059,000 producing a load factor of 60.6 percent. The carrier's May 1990 load factor was 7.3 points higher than May 1989.

Beauvais noted that America West recently announced its filing for Taipei, Republic of China and Hong Kong. In addition, the carrier is vying for route authority to provide service between Honolulu and Nagoya.

America West currently operates a modern, fuel efficient all-Boeing fleet of over 90 aircraft including 747s, 757s, 737s and de Havilland Dash 8s. The airline employs more than 12,000 people in its 60 city route network which stretches from coast-to-coast and across the Pacific to Honolulu.

On July 15, America West will initiate new service to Dallas/Forth Worth International Airport with four daily non-stop flights. The airline is now offering Dallas/Fort Worth introductory round trip fares, including $198 to/from Phoenix, $208 to/from Las Vegas and $468 to/from Honolulu.

LONG BEACH, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - HQ Office Supplies Warehouse Inc. (OTC:HQOSA, class A common stock; Pacific Stock Exchange:HQO) announced that the Securities and Exchange Commission declared effective its registration statement relating to the offer and sale of 10,000 units Thursday.

Each unit priced at $1,000 will entitle the holder to (i) $1,000 principal amount of a convertible debenture due June 1, 1995, and (ii) 200 class C warrants. Each class C warrant will entitle the holder to purchase one share of class A common stock at an exercise price of $6 per share. The units, convertible debentures and class C warrants commenced trading on NASDAQ Thursday.

The NASDAQ symbols for each of the securities are: units, HQOSU; debentures, HQOSD; class C warrants, HQOSW. The close of the offering is anticipated to occur on or about June 14, 1990.

Brad Tukey, president and chief executive officer, stated: ''The company will initially receive net proceeds of approximately $8,635,000 from this offering. The company intends to use a portion of these funds to continue our expansion program in the Southern California market, where we will open up to three additional stores during the Summer of 1990.

''Additionally, a portion of the funds will be used for repayment of corporate debt and for working capital. Assuming all the class C warrants are exercised, the company will receive additional net proceeds of approximately $14 million. The company would use these funds to open additional stores during the balance of fiscal year 1990.''

HQ Office Supplies Warehouse Inc.'s merchandising strategy is to offer a wide selection of quality brand-name office products including general office supplies, business machines, office furniture and other business-related products at discount prices primarily to small and medium-sized businesses. The stores average at least 25,000 square feet of selling space with an inventory of approximately 8,000 stock keeping units.

PORTLAND, OR (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - The Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) has issued its annual Systematic Assessment of Licensee Performance (SALP) for Portland General Electric Co.'s Trojan Nuclear Plant, showing improving overall performance.

The NRC said the plant substantially exceeds regulatory requirements in the area of operations. While the NRC said more management attention needs to be placed on maintenance at the plant, the commission noted an improvement in this area during the later part of the reporting period.

The report covers the period Jan. 1, 1989, to March 31, 1990, and is the result of nearly 4,800 hours of inspection by NRC staff members. PGE is the principal subsidiary of Portland General Corp. (NYSE: PGN).

In a letter accompanying the report, the NRC concluded that activities at Trojan were ''acceptable and directed toward safe facility operation.'' The NRC also recognized ''the actions taken during the last half of the assessment period to strengthen the Trojan management team and to improve performance.''

The report covers seven functional areas and places them in one of three categories. Category 1 is the highest rating and signifies that the level of performance substantially exceeds regulatory requirements. A Category 2 rating indicates that the level of performance is above that needed to meet regulatory requirements. A Category 3 rating indicates that the level of performance does not significantly exceed that needed to meet minimal regulatory requirements. Areas rated Category 3 will receive additional NRC attention.

The seven areas reviewed by the NRC include plant operations, radiological controls, maintenance/surveillance, emergency preparedness, security, engineering/technical support, and safety assessment/quality verification.

The NRC rated plant operations a Category 1, an improvement over last year's Category 2. Security and safety assessment/quality verification also improved from a Category 3 to a Category 2.

Radiological controls and engineering/technical support received a Category 2 rating, unchanged from last year.

The Trojan Nuclear Plant is in the twelfth week of its annual refueling and maintenance. The plant is scheduled to be back in operation later this month.

PHOENIX (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Nix-O-Tine Pharmaceuticals Ltd. (NASDAQ:NIXXF/VSE:NIX.V) Thursday announced that it has engaged the Phoenix investment banking firm of McKee & Co. to assist the company in identifying and reviewing strategic partner candidates that would allow the company to expand its Nix-O-Tine smoking cessation program and its LungCheck take-home lung cell test nationally.

The company also announced that it has commenced negotiations with two entities regarding strategic alliances with the company and also with its recently acquired LungCheck division. McKee & Co. will be assisting management in evaluating the proposed alliances.

The company believes that it will require additional financing to continue the current level of marketing and product development activities during the next year and to expand its programs and products nationwide. McKee & Co. will also be assisting the company with respect to obtaining financing for these activities.

Founded in 1987 by President William B. McKee, McKee & Co.'s financial professionals represent over 15 years of financial and investment experience. Mr. McKee has been a director of two public companies in the medical industry.

Nix-O-Tine is a public company that owns a patented drug method and a physician-directed behavioral modification program for nicotine addiction and smoking withdrawal. In May 1990, the company reported clinical test results from a 546-patient study that its drug method was 2.5 times more effective than placebo in achieving smoking cessation in medium to heavy smokers under private physician care.

Nix-O-Tine also nationally distributes LungCheck, a take-home diagnostic lung cell test that uses sputum cytology for early assessment of lung health and as a motivational aid for smoking cessation. The LungCheck test can detect cell changes that could lead to cancer long before it shows on X-ray.

LA MIRADA, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - While the world breathlessly awaits the premiere of Touchstone Pictures' ''Dick Tracy,'' Playmate Toys introduces Dick Tracy action figures and accessories to stores everywhere.

Kids can turn coppers with role-playing toys from the Dick Tracy line. Strap on Dick Tracy's 2-Way Wristwatch. Press the button. A light flashes so you can summon Dick Tracy to the crime scene. The LCD analog watch really works and will retail for about $9.95.

Flash! The Dick Tracy line of 14 action figures features a square-jawed hero and the most grotesque villains to ever wear a sneer. Each figure is about four-inches tall, fully articulated and will retail for between $4.99 and $5.99.

Playmates' action-figure line pits two of America's most famous detectives against 12 infamous gangsters. Incorruptible Dick Tracy and his right-hand man, the loyal Sam Catchem, wage an unending war against Al ''Big Boy'' Caprice and a gang of low-life hoods: Flattop, Itchy, Mumbles, Pruneface, The Brow, Influence, Lips Manlis, Shoulders, Rodent, Steve the Tramp and The Blank.

Squealing tires and the rat-a-tat of machine-gun fire explode into the night. Another mob hit. ''Calling Dick Tracy...Calling Dick Tracy.'' Waiting at the curb is Tracy's trusty Police Squad Car, a powerful pursuit vehicle which makes an earsplitting siren sound when pushed. Working doors allow quick exits and are handy shields when the lead flies. There's even a cop-carrying running board for shooting on the fly.

Big Boy's Getaway Car, a convict-carrying crimemobile, makes a realistic tommy-gun-firing sound when pushed. Quick opening doors are perfect for hotfooted getaways and the rear-mounted spare with cover is an ingenious hiding spot for contraband. Both cars will retail between $24.99 and $29.99.

An I.D. Composite Kit helps junior sleuths identify marauding mobsters. Create thousands of crazy composite sketches by using the eyes, noses and mouths of America's most-wanted thugs. The kit will retail between $10.99 and $12.99.

Every aspiring detective will want Dick Tracy's Crimestopper's Kit. It comes with handcuffs, a secret ring key, wallet, official ID card, badge and certificate. A magnifying glass, fingerprinting kit, flashlight, barricade tape and a Crimestopper's textbook are also included. The kit will retail for between $16.99 and $21.99.

Playmates Toys will also produce refrigerator magnets, retailing for about $2.50, that can be clipped onto pockets; and will offer a 15-inch rotocast collector doll of Dick Tracy and a 14-inch doll of Breathless Mahoney for approximately $21.99 to $25.99.

SAN JOSE, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - To rapidly access Soviet technologies, Cypress Semiconductor (NYSE:CY) Thursday announced its participation and membership in ECONOTECH, a joint venture company comprised of representatives of the Ministries and Enterprise Groups of the Soviet Union and members of U.S. corporations for the purpose of developing business relationships for a wide variety of opportunities.

ECONOTECH has negotiated with the Soviet government for sole rights to technologies and products developed by the Academy of Sciences and other ministries.

Cypress is the first technology company to be invited to join this one-of-a-kind business consortium.

As a charter member of ECONOTECH, Cypress has exclusive rights of first refusal on all semiconductor technologies and products from the various ministries and enterprise groups that are associated with ECONOTECH in the U.S.S.R.

In addition, Cypress will have direct access to the highest levels of the Soviet government and the large markets they represent; access to the best technologies in the Soviet Academy of Sciences; access to government, enterprise cooperatives, import/export businesses, and Soviet private enterprise groups; and access to free land, buildings and labor, as well as to high quality engineers, scientists and software specialists.

The primary focus of ECONOTECH is that it establishes high technology business opportunities by maximizing the complementary nature of US/Soviet technology and business management capabilities.

Cypress Semiconductor's aggressive approach to working with the Soviet Union and their product leadership direction in its market segments is what motivated ECONOTECH Chairman Steve Puthuff to choose Cypress as their exclusive consortium member for this specific market segment.

Cypress Semiconductor Corp. is a leader in the design, development and manufacture of a broad line of high-performance digital integrated circuits which are fabricated using its proprietary 1.2 and 0.8 micron CMOS, BiCMOS and Bipolar technologies.

SAN JOSE, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Valid Logic Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:VLID), a leading developer of integrated electronic design automation software, Thursday announced that it had completed the sale of $11.2 million worth of newly issued voting convertible preferred stock to IBM Corp.

Under the terms of an agreement announced last month, IBM's purchase of the Valid stock was made at a price of $4.20 per common share equivalent. IBM received convertible preferred stock equal to 2,666,670 shares on a common share equivalent basis. The investment represents an interest in Valid of approximately 8 percent.

Additionally, Valid was paid $1,187,500 by IBM for the purchase of warrants to acquire up to 4.75 million shares of Valid common stock at $11 per share.

DUBLIN, Ireland (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Intel Corp. will begin building a state-of-the-art chip manufacturing facility near Dublin, the company said Thursday.

The new IR 200 million (approximately $300 million U.S.), 200,000-square-foot (18,600-square-meters) facility is being constructed with the support of the Industrial Development Authority of Ireland.

The new facility will be Intel's most advanced semiconductor manufacturing plant. It will be dedicated to making Intel's latest generation of advanced logic components, primarily for the European market.

The company is currently applying for planning permits and permission and, upon approval, will start construction immediately. The plant will employ approximately 500 people. That figure should double when the facility reaches full maturity.

The European wafer fab will be constructed and equipped to produce microchips featuring submicron dimensions. One micron equals 1/1,000,000 of a meter (1/22,400 of an inch), or 1/100th of a thickness of a human hair.

The actual production of the microchips will take place in a strictly controlled environment called a ''clean room.'' Within this clean room, temperature, humidity, vibration, and most importantly dirt are regulated to uncompromising specifications. This new wafer fab will be a certified ''Class-1'' clean room, totaling over 30,000-square-feet.

Although the Class-1 industry designation refers to the reduction of contaminants to one particle of .5 micron or greater per cubic foot of air the actual level of cleanliness is expected to be ten times greater than that level. This environment is tens-of-thousands of times cleaner than a surgical operating room.

The wafer fabrication plant will join a 150,000-square-foot (14,000-square-meters) Intel Systems manufacturing facility on a company-owned site in Leixlip, County Kildare. Construction of the Systems manufacturing facility began in late 1989 and is scheduled for completion by the end of this year.

SCOTTS VALLEY, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Borland International (NASDAQ:BORL) Thursday announced its 14-city OOP (Object-Oriented Programming) World Tour.

This first-ever tour event showcasing OOP technology is Borland's response to the growing numbers of corporate and independent software developers adopting the technology. The technology tour, which starts July 23 in Boston, provides high-quality, in-depth OOP training for managers, computer programmers and application developers.

Each stop on the OOP World Tour includes an Introduction to Object-Oriented Programming and Concepts, which provides an understanding of OOP through an overview of OOP terminology and principles.

This general session is followed by the attendees choice of three intensive training tracts: Managing OOP Development, for development managers who hare using or planning to develop OOP applications; Introduction to C++, for programmers with a knowledge of C who new to C++; and Introduction to Pascal with Objects, for Pascal programmers who want to take advantage of the object-oriented programming extensions in Pascal.

Conducting the technical tracts are David Intersimone, Bruce Eckel and Zack Urlocker, three prominent experts in the field of object-oriented technology.

Object-Oriented Programming provides the foundation for a new generation of more powerful software. In the face of ever-increasing software complexity, OOP is a proven programming methodology that simplifies software development. LOS ANGELES (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Surgin Surgical Instrumentation Inc., a Placentia, Calif.-based maker of disposal devices for the ophthalmic surgical industry, won the first round in its series of legal battles against Alcon Surgical Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Nestle, S.A.

Alcon's complaint for patent infringement against Surgin and a preliminary injunction in the case was dismissed in the United States District Court Central District of California on June 4.

''This is a classic case of a small, David-sized company beating a Goliath '' said Armand Maaskamp, president of Surgin Surgical Instrumentation.

Alcon filed an injunction against Surgin on Aug. 10, 1989, to prevent Surgin from selling its disposable 10M cassettes to physicians and health care facilities. Surgin's cassette effectively ends Alcon's monopoly in this market by providing users with a cost-effective alternative device. The Surgin cassette fits into the Alcon Series Ten Thousand machine, a phaco emulsification machine that is used in cataract surgery. The patent infringement suit claimed that Surgin's cassette infringed upon Alcon's patent.

''With the recent Medicare reimbursement reductions, facilities are being constantly squeezed on costs. The Surgin cassette, introduced in April 1989, brought the price of cassettes down. Our company will continue to fight to bring cost-effective alternatives to the disposable ophthalmic marketplace,'' said Maaskamp.

MILPITAS, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Logic Modeling Systems Inc. Thursday announced that ELF Engineering Inc. will develop and supply simulation models for use with Logic Modeling's industry-standard hardware modeling system, the LM-1000, to the general marketplace.

The agreement establishes ELF as an independent, third-party model builder with independent development and direct sales and distribution of models for the LM-1000 as part of ELF's consulting and contracting business.

Hardware modeling solves the simulation model availability problem for system and ASIC designers by allowing a physical VLSI device to be used to model its own behavior during design verification. Hardware models are intrinsically full-function and accurate.

The LM-1000 provides designers with easy access to over 600 standard hardware models of important VLSI devices on the market today, and ASIC models can be developed in less than one day. The LM-1000 hardware modeling system is platform- and simulator-independent and is supported by the major EDA vendors.

Logic Modeling sells through OEM relationships with EDA vendors including Cadence, GenRad, Harris Scientific Calculations, IKOS, Mentor Graphics, Siemens, Valid, Vantage Analysis Systems, Viewlogic Systems and Zycad, and to companies with proprietary simulators.

Logic Modeling Systems Inc. is a privately held company, with corporate headquarters located at 1520 McCandless Drive, Milpitas, Calif. 95035; Telephone 408/957-5200.

ELF Engineering Inc. has been in the business of building simulation models and developing test programs for a variety of EDA vendors since 1987. ELF has corporate headquarters at 321 W. Hatcher Rd. 101, Phoenix, Ariz., 85021; Telephone, 602/997-9295.

SALT LAKE CITY (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Dayna Communications Inc., Thursday announced that it has signed an agreement with Novell Inc. to license that company's EtherPort technology.

As a result, Dayna will begin shipping a line of Ethernet cards for Macintosh computers in July under the brand name of DaynaPORT.

The DaynaPORT cards will be available for all Macintosh SE and II series computers. The DaynaPORT E/II is a NuBus card for all Macintosh II models the DanaPORT E/SE supports all Macintosh SE models, while the DaynaPORT E/30 supports the Macintosh SE/30 bus topology. All cards provide either a thin Ethernet connector or a AUI port for external transceiver connections to thick Ethernet, twisted pair wiring and fiber optic cables.

''EtherPort is currently the most popular line of Ethernet cards for the Macintosh, so we're extremely pleased to be able to license the technology '' said Boyd T. Jones, president and chief executive officer of Dayna Communications. ''We are introducing the DaynaPORT cards at a very competitive price point, and we will be working over the next few months on performance and feature enhancements.''

With the addition of the DaynaPORT cards, Dayna now offers a full range of Ethernet hardware for Macintosh LANs. This includes EtherPrint, a $499 EtherTalk-to-LocalTalk converter for LocalTalk printers, due to ship later this month.

The DaynaPORT E/30 and DaynaPORT E/II cards will be available in July at a retail price of $499. The DaynaPORT E/SE card is expected to ship by the end of third quarter and will also be priced at $499 retail.

REDMOND, WA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - ProCyte Corp. (NASDAQ: PRCY) Tuesday announced it has begun animal clinical trials of its topical wound-healing cream at Colorado State University's (CSU) College of Veterinary Medicine and Biomedical Sciences.

Prior to launching the CSU study, ProCyte received an investigational New Animal Drug Application (INAD) from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. CSU researchers plan to study the effect of the topical would healing cream on dogs with naturally occurring wounds.

According to Joseph Ashley, ProCyte's president and chief executive officer, the CSU study will give researchers additional data on the mechanisms of tissue repair in animals.

This information, Ashley said, will help researchers learn more about the basic mechanisms of healing in animals and humans. ''We have considerable data showing the positive healing effect of the creams,'' Ashley said. ''We are furthering our studies to learn more about how improved and accelerated healing takes place.''

In addition to undergoing clinical trials in animals, the ProCyte topical wound-healing cream is also undergoing human clinical trials in the United States and France on patients with diabetic and stasis ulcers.

ProCyte is developing wound-healing products for both humans and animals, representing significant worldwide market potential, Ashley said. The worldwide market for human wound-healing products is estimated to be in excess of $1 billion. In the United States alone, the market for animal wound-healing products is estimated at $50 million.

ProCyte holds key patents in the use of this peptide in wound-healing applications.

Founded in 1985, ProCyte is a biopharmaceutical company developing compounds for wound healing and tissue repair and regeneration. The company has to date developed over 100 derivatives of its peptide complex and plans to initiate additional clinical trials for further indications in 1990.

CUPERTINO, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Tandem Computers Inc. (NYSE:TDM) and Sistemas y Redes Limitada Thursday announced the formation of Tandem Chile S.A., a joint venture based in Santiago, Chile. Created to strengthen Tandem's presence in the Chilean market, Tandem Chile will sell Tandem products and those of its subsidiaries such as Ungermann-Bass.

''Chile has one of the strongest free-market economies in Latin America with stable growth, low debt, and a base of businesses requiring the flexible, online computer systems and enterprise networking Tandem offers '' said Michael C. Moore, vice president and managing director of Tandem's intercontinental division.

''Our partnership with Sistemas y Redes will bring market expertise, management talent and an existing customer base to Tandem Chile. This joint venture demonstrates our long-term commitment to both the Chilean market and our Latin American customers.''

Sistemas y Redes recently purchased the Tandem division of Tandem's previous distributor in Chile, providing the basis for the venture. Tandem will maintain a close relationship with the new venture and Tandem representatives will serve on the board of directors.

Sistemas y Redes is a Chilean technology investment firm based in Santiago. The address is Huerfanos 1313, Santiago, Chile. Telephone number is (56) 2-698-0724.

Tandem Computers Inc. manufactures and markets computer systems and networks for online transaction processing, large database applications and the UNIX system marketplace. Company headquarters are located at 19333 Vallco Parkway, Cupertino, CA 95014. Telephone number is 408/725-6000.

CUPERTINO, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Tandem Computers Inc. (NYSE:TDM) Thursday announced that, through a newly formed Tandem joint venture in Chile with Sistemas y Redes Limitada, Banco Sud Americano S.A. has selected a Tandem NonStop system for its online banking applications.

Banco Sud Americano, one of the five largest banks in Chile, is based in Santiago, Chile. As the first step of a project, the bank will be using the Tandem NonStop CLX computer system and NonStop SQL database software to connect tellers and to handle checking and savings account information. The bank, which has 31 branches, plans to bring all operations online, and will run 24-hours a day, 7-days a week.

''In order to offer more competitive service to their customers, the bank needed to provide them with up-to-the-minute information. Tandem offered reliable and easily expandable systems to cost effectively bring the bank online,'' stated Claudio Weason, sales manager for Tandem Chile.

Banking System for Continuous Operation (SIBOC) applications software from Ingedigit, C.A., Venezuela, also contributed to the sale to the bank.

Tandem Computers manufactures and markets computer systems and networks for online transaction processing, large database applications, and the UNIX system market. Tandem's world headquarters are located in Cupertino, Calif. Telephone is 408/725-6000.

CANTON, MA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Perception Technology Corp. and GTE TeleMessager Inc. of Irving, Texas, have reached an agreement in principle to manufacture and sell interactive voice response (IVR) products under a joint arrangement.

Under the multi-year agreement, GTE TeleMessager will sell Perception Technology's equipment and software, as well as use Perception's equipment and software in their IVR service bureaus. Perception Technology will also sell IVR applications developed by GTE TeleMessager.

Interactive voice response (IVR) is a method that allows businesses to collect or disseminate information via a touch-tone telephone. This technology saves on labor costs and allows 24-hour access to either input or receive information without the use of a computer terminal.

Perception Technology and GTE TeleMessager both expect increased sales as a result of the agreement.

GTE TeleMessager is a voice processing services and systems provider. It is part of GTE Information Services (GTEIS) of Tampa, Fla., which offers industry-specific software and services, publishing and marketing services through its businesses.

PLEASANT HILL, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Giga-tronics Inc. Thursday announced the receipt of several large orders for significant quantities of its single band and broad band signal generators.

The instrument orders, valued in excess of $2.9 million, are deliverable within the next 12 months to several military customers.

Two weeks ago the company reported receipt of an order for a significant quantity of its single band signal generators valued in excess of $2.5 million. Major instrument orders from the military during May have resulted in over $5.4 million in bookings for the company.

In making the announcement the company stated that the orders were related to previously awarded contracts. In some cases, the orders had been expected to be received for several months and had only recently been released by customers. For these reasons, the company stated that the receipt of these orders should not be viewed as a major change in the outlook for its defense-related business.

Giga-tronics designs, manufactures and markets a broad line of synthesized microwave signal sources, generators and sweepers for customers in the defense, aerospace and telecommunications industries around the world. The company is located in Pleasant Hill.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Information Management Technologies Corp. (''IMTECH'') 1/8NASDAQ:IMTKA (common), IMTKU (units), IMTKW (warrants)3/8 Thursday announced that its wholly-owned subsidiary, IMTECH Optical Systems has signed a distribution agreement with Standard Data, a division of Standex International Corporation, with sales in excess of $400,000,000 based in Salem, New Hampshire.

Under the terms of the agreement, Standard Data, which provides data processing and micrographics services to clients in the northeast will offer IMTECH Optical Systems' PC-based optical data storage product ''COINS ''(Computer Output INformation System).

COINS stores historical transaction information, customer statements, invoices etc. on optical disks and then indexes and accesses the information in seconds. COINS provides on-line storage at a fraction of the cost of other means of storage; in fact, one $200 disk contains 700,000 pages of data. Data can be downloaded from a mainframe, service bureau or minicomputer, then permanently stored on a removable optical disk, and then retrieved, viewed, printed or sent by facsimile at any time.

IMTECH provides on-site and off-site information facilities management (''IFM'') services, turning many of its clients' ''back-office'' operations into revenue producers while minimizing seemingly limitless support functions. Through its wholly-owned subsidiary, IMTECH Optical Systems, markets the COINS optical disk storage/retrieval software, an easy and efficient way to dramatically reduce computer data retrieval time eliminate multiple copies of computer printout or microfiche.

OMAHA, NE (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - ValCom Inc. (stock symbol:VLCM) has signed an agreement to market Banyan products through the national ValCom network of business computer centers, announced Dale R. Schuster, ValCom vice president and general manager.

''With Banyan's innovative product line and ValCom's networking and system integration expertise, this partnership is consistent with our long-term focus of advanced systems,'' says Schuster.

''It is a key factor in positioning ValCom as the obvious choice for customers seeking top-to-bottom connectivity and data integration for the 1990s.''

ValCom locations carrying Banyan products will be required to provide service and support consistent with the needs of sophisticated network installations.

Banyan's choice of ValCom as marketing partner was a natural fit given ValCom's strategic direction, which emphasizes superior service and support.

One example of ValCom's commitment to supporting advanced technology is its Communications Research Center, opened last spring.

The first of its kind in the industry, the Center is a vendor-independent connectivity laboratory and represents the largest investment in connectivity research by any computer reseller chain. Another industry milestone is ValCom's Business Technology Group, a subsidiary which provides end-user consulting and system integration through ValCom business computer centers nationwide.

Banyan is the leader in corporate-wide PC networking. Its premier product is VINES, a fully integrated distributed network computing environment based on industry and international standards.

VINES permits the convenient accessing, sharing and managing of computer information and resources in distributed systems ranging from localized PC clusters to the largest multinational PC networks in the world.

SCOTTS VALLEY, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Borland International (NASDAQ: BORL), a leading developer of computer software technology, has announced several ventures aimed at increasing its participation in the expansion of the Soviet computer market.

Philippe Kahn, chairman and founder of the company, will deliver the opening keynote address at the First International Computer Forum (ICF) at Moscow's World Trade Center on June 15. In addition, Kahn will address the Soviet Academy of Sciences and students at Moscow State University.

He will also inauguarate the Soviet link to Globalnet, an electronic bullentin board service that connects PC user groups worldwide. The ICF will host U.S. and European computer and technology companies at the four-day forum and exhibition to be held in Moscow, June 14-17.

Representatives from a broad spectrum of Soviet organizations are expected to attend, as is the general public. Borland will demonstrate its business and programming language products at the ICF. Company representatives will also meet with Soviet computer professionals to assist in establishing Soviet PC user groups.

Borland recently signed a software distribution agreement with Interquadro a joint venture of Soviet, French, and Italian interests that distributes hardware and software packages throughout the Soviet Union. Under the terms of the agreement, Interquadro will distribute and sell Borland software products through its 15 Soviet offices.

Kahn, who in just seven years built the California-based Borland into a $110 million company, believes that Soviet computer entrepreneurs can make a positive, long-term impact on the Soviet economy.

"Computers are essential tools for the free exchange of ideas and information," Kahn said. "Enabling access to computers and increasing computer knowledge throughout Soviet Union can help revitalize the Soviet economy."

The Soviet Union has approximately 300,000 personal computers compared to 30 million PCs in the United States. A current Soviet government plan calls for setting up one million computer systems by the end of 1990, while a Soviet Academy of Sciences study says demand over the next decade will reach 25 million PCs.

Borland International (Scotts Valley) offers some of the world's most widely used business applications and programming software, under the tradmarks brand names of Paradox, Quattro Pro, SideKick, Turbo Pascal, Turbo C, Turbo C++ and Turbo Debugger.

NASHVILLE, TN (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Dollar General Corp. (NASDAQ:DOLR) Thursday reported flat sales for the five weeks ended June 1, 1990.

Chairman and chief executive officer Cal Turner Jr. said sales for the period ended June 1, 1990, totaled $60.3 million compared with $60.3 million in 1989. Same store sales for the period decreased 4.6 percent.

''We are disappointed with May sales,'' Turner said. ''Memorial Day sales were weaker than expected offsetting the sales gains early in the month. Our newly automated distribution center has not yet provided our stores with timely deliveries. With implementation this week of a second shift, we expect our stores to be ready for improved back to school sales.''

For the first four months of the year, Dollar General retail sales totaled $187.8 million, compared with $183.9 million for the same period last year an increase of 2.1 percent. Same store sales for the year have decreased 2.5 percent.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Judicate, the national private court system, will announce at its annual meeting Thursday that it has commenced a nationwide program that will assist Crum and Forster Personal Organization in resolving appropriate standard personal lines claims through alternative dispute resolution (ADR) services as part of the wind down of the Crum and Forster Personal Insurance operation.

In April, 1990, Crum and Forster decided to withdraw from the standard personal lines market to concentrate on its traditional strengths of commercial insurance, specialty coverage and reinsurance.

Stephen D. Edenbaum, Judicate's vice president of sales said the Crum and Forster program is a multi-year package.

''We are extremely pleased that Judicate was selected to provide its national arbitration and mediation services for Crum and Forster,'' said Edenbaum.

Judicate's president, Jay D. Seid, said, ''The program is the first of several we expect to announce during 1990, which were initiated by Stephen D. Edenbaum, who joined Judicate at its vice president of Sales in April, 1990. All these programs capitalize on Judicate's unique nationwide capabilities.

''The need for ADR is obvious and the Judicate concept is solid and workable,'' he said. ''Through programs like this, we are committed to further building on the solid foundation of Judicate as an industry leader on the cutting edge of ADR.''

Founded in 1985, Judicate provides arbitration and mediation services through its nationwide panel of more than 550 former federal, state and local judges.

CHICAGO (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Ameritech and ItalCable Thursday announced a three-year agreement to promote each other's services, share resources and cooperate in a variety of possible future joint projects.

The agreement is a part of Ameritech's international joint account management program in which the company establishes cooperative links with foreign communications companies.

The partnerships allow Ameritech to better serve customers who require service overseas, or to assist overseas firms with operations in the Chicago-based company's five-state, Great Lakes region. The resulting agreements also open the door for Ameritech and the partner company to work together on other projects of mutual benefit.

"This agreement with one of the world's leading international communications carriers positions the Ameritech companies to better respond to customers who need communications services or related support in Italy," said Andres B. Bande, president of Ameritech International, the subsidiary responsible for developing business opportunities outside the U.S.

"Also, the Ameritech companies can more effectively meet the needs of Italian firms, customers of ItalCable, who are establishing operations and require communications support in our region."

Under terms of the agreement, Ameritech and Rome-based ItalCable S.p.A. will cooperate to provide consulting services or certain telecommunications products or services; to support each other's marketing efforts; and to pursue possible future joint activities in the international telecommunications marketplace. About 100 firms based in the Ameritech region have offices in Italy.

Dr. Ernesto Pascale, ItalCable's president and chief executive officer, said the agreement "is part of ItalCable's diversification and internationalization strategy."

The agreement with ItalCable S.p.A. is the fifth such agreement reached by Ameritech. Other agreements with overseas telecommunications concerns involve PTT Telecom BV in the Netherlands, Copenhagen Telephone Company (KTAS) in Denmark, Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Corp. (NTT) in Japan, and Telefonica in Spain.

Ameritech is the parent of Bell Companies serving Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, and Wisconsin, and of several other communications companies in mobile communications, directory publishing, lease financing and voice messaging services. Its 1989 revenues were $10.2 billion. ItalCable, S.p.A. is the Italian international communications carrier.

VIENNA, AUSTRIA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - IBM Europe Thursday announced the establishment of Computer Competence and Development Centers in Hungary and Czechoslovakia in partnership with academic institutions in those countries.

The centers are to be part of a broader IBM-sponsored Central and Eastern Europe Academic Initiative to foster the advancement of information technology skills throughout the region.

Subject to the appropriate export licences being granted, IBM plans to provide the centers with advanced hardware and a library of systems and application software aimed at the national needs and requirements of the host countries.

IBM will also provide training and education for staff personnel at the centers. This aid will be directed toward helping them to make the best use of the equipment and to support other users as well as producing software and documentation in their national language and initiating advanced research projects.

The centers will be linked through a computer gateway in Vienna to existing academic networks in the West. This link will give the centers an up-to-date communications medium, offering the local academic community the opportunity for worldwide exchange with their colleagues.

Once established, the centers will be staffed and operated by the local IBM partner, usually a university. The center will offer a means to increase the level of information technology skills, prepare materials for service and support to other users in the local language and provide access to advanced applications critical to the country's development. All qualified users from academia, students and industry can use these centers.

In Hungary, the Ministry of Education has designated the University of Economics in Budapest as IBM's partner. Several other universities will be linked to the IBM Competence and Development Center located at the University of Economics.

In Czechoslovakia, the Office of the Prime Minister has identified the Charles University and the Czech Technical University as IBM's partners. The Czech School of Engineering, Bratislava, and the University T. G. Masaryk, Brno, will be linked to the IBM Competence and Development Center in Prague. IBM will provide one of the largest processors ever installed in Central and Eastern Europe, complemented by a variety of systems and application software.

After intensive training, the centers' staffs will offer their services to less-experienced users in academia, agriculture and industry. The centers will also provide high-level education to students.

Thus, Hungarian and Czechoslovakian scientists will have access to efficient tools and will be able to communicate with scientists around the world or participate in international projects. Also, selected IBM customers can be linked to this network.

The long-term goal of the centers is to help the countries build a viable modern infrastructure for their developing economies by giving them modern tools to compete in an increasingly technical world.

PARK RIDGE, NJ AND SAN JOSE, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - The Video Conferencing and Satellite Systems Division of Sony Corp. of America and Compression Labs Inc. (CLI)(NASDAQ/NMS:CLIX) Thursday announced a strategic marketing agreement to serve the rapidly growing videoconferencing market in the United States.

Under the terms of the agreement, CLI will supply video codecs to Sony for product integration and resale. According to T.C. Browne, vice president and general manager of Sony's Video Conferencing and Satellite Systems Division, ''CLI codecs deliver the quality, features and connectivity we require for our line of integrated videoconferencing equipment. With our new videoconference system controller and peripheral components, the CLI codecs add a broad level of functionality to Sony's family of videoconferencing systems.''

Videoconferencing systems improve productivity and speed decision-making by permitting participants at two or more remote sites to see and hear one another as if they were in the same meeting room. Video codecs make videoconferencing economical by compressing bandwidth-intensive video signals for transmission over commonly-available communications facilities.

The two companies also expect to collaborate on selected international videoconferencing projects. ''This partnership will provide multinational organizations with increased support for videoconferencing over international communications networks,'' noted Walsh.

CLI and Sony Corp. of America's parent company, Sony Corp., have an existing relationship which includes marketing of CLI codecs in the Far East and collaboration on the design and manufacture of certain elements of CLI codecs.

CLI, a pioneer in video compression technology, is the largest video codec supplier in the world with revenues of $29.2 million in 1989. The company has shipped over 1700 units to date.

Sony is an international leader in video communications, including video and audio recording and imaging capture; post-production; video display; still image transmission and satellite reception; and other applications. In the United States, Sony's integrated videoconferencing products and components are developed and marketed by the Video Conferencing and Satellite Division of the Sony Corp. of America, headquartered in Park Ridge.

BURBANK, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Walt Disney Computer Software announced this past weekend at the Consumer Electronic Show, in Chicago, that is has broken the price and sound barrier with the release of THE SOUND SOURCE, a breakthrough, technologically innovative compact accessory that brings high quality digitized speech, fully orchestrated music and real life sound effects to IBM PC and compatible home computers.

Signing an agreement with Electronic Speech Systems of California, Disney Software has become the exclusive licensing agent for the ESS speech compression technology in the home computer market.

Suggested retail prices for THE SOUND SOURCE is $34.95. ''It's hard to believe that we can offer this breakthrough technology for such a nominal price, but it has been our intent all along to price THE SOUND SOURCE so that all consumers could experience our software the way we intended,'' siad Ralph Giuffre, director of marketing.

''THE SOUND SOURCE is designed to be sleek, high tech, and in the traditional 'putty' color of most computers and was designed with the home computer in mind. It is our hope that home computer owners will leave the box in place at all times so that when they boot up future entertainment and children's software titles from Disney, they will be able to experience them to the fullest.''

Disney will be releasing THE SOUND SOURCE initially with its line of preschool products; MICKEY'S ABC's, MICKEY'S 123's, and MICKEY'S COLORS & SHAPES, with plans to have all future premium priced MS-DOS titles compatible with THE SOUND SOURCE.

''In fact, we are eager to begin licensing the technology to other publishers so that their software can offer the same high quality digitized speech, fully orchestrated music and real-life sound effects,'' added Shelley Miles, Disney Software's vice president and general manager.

Walt Disney Computer Software is an operating unit of Disney Consumer Products, one of three business groups of the Walt Disney Company, including the Walt Disney Studios and Walt Disney Attractions.

NEWARK, NJ (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - New Jersey Bell's new Monmouth County Area telephone directory contains a new number residents should get used to dialing.

It's 908 -- the state's new area code that may be dialed now.

As the first New Jersey Bell directory to include 908 listings and information, the Monmouth area book begins a year-long cycle to update all directories by June 1991, when the new code officially takes effect.

Residents will begin receiving their new Monmouth directory beginning June 14. A blue announcement on the cover directs them to pages 24-29 of the Customer Guide for information about the new 908 area code.

Along with a description of the areas in which New Jersey Bell provides service, the section features a map that shows the state's three area codes. The 908 code, which includes Warren, Hunterdon, Middlesex, Monmouth, Somerset, Union and parts of Ocean, Sussex and Morris counties, is in the North Jersey Regional Calling Area, along with the 201 area code.

The 609 area code, which comprises the Delaware Valley and Atlantic Coastal Regional Calling Areas, remains unchanged.

The cost of telephone calls also will remain the same.

Beginning on page 25, the Customer Guide lists the exchanges -- or first three digits of customers' phone numbers -- that are in the 908 area code. Similar lists for the 201 and 609 area codes also are included.

New Jersey Bell will deliver 431,400 Monmouth County directories during the next few weeks.

Other New Jersey Bell telephone directories that primarily cover the 908 area code are Ocean County, New Brunswick, Hackettstown/Washington, Elizabeth, Phillipsburg and Plainfield.

SAN DIEGO, CA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - California Jamar Inc. (NASDAQ:JMAR/BSE:JMR) announced Thursday the appointment of Dr. James Glaze as president and chief operating officer.

Dr. Glaze, who has been a member of Jamar's board of directors since December 1989, will report to Dr. John S. Martinez, chairman and chief executive officer.

In this new position, Glaze will assume daily responsibility of Jamar operations and, in addition, aid Martinez in achieving Jamar's strategic business development objectives in the areas of laser-based x-ray lithography for the semiconductor industry and advanced laser applications for defense and industry.

Prior to joining Jamar, Glaze spent five years as a senior executive with General Signal Corp.'s Semiconductor Equipment Group, where he served as vice president of the Xynetics Unit and, also, as general manager of that unit's Ionscan division.

Most recently, he held the position of vice president/technology for the Thinfilm Co. Before joining General Signal, Glaze held management positions at Physics International Co. where his responsibilities included new products and x-ray lithography development; at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory where he played a key leadership role in the development of the Shiva and Nova fusion laser systems; and at Hughes Aircraft Co. where he pioneered in chemical laser development.

In commenting on the appointment, Martinez noted that Glaze's extensive management and technical background in both the laser and the semiconductor fields is unique and ideally suited to the needs of Jamar as it seeks to develop critical laser-based x-ray sources for next generation lithography applications.

Further, he views the development of such sources as of national importance and one in which traditional American entrepreneurships can play a deciding role.

Jamar is currently developing a compact, excimer laser-based x-ray point source system to provide semiconductor manufacturers with a more affordable way to make advanced chips.

California Jamar Inc. specializes in the development of advanced laser systems for a range of industrial and military applications, including optical communications, remote detection and x-ray lithography for semiconductor manufacturing.

RICHMOND, VA AND AUGUSTA, ME (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - James River Corp.

(NYSE: JR) and the Nature Conservancy jointly announced Thursday a purchase agreement with the State of Maine and Diamond Occidental Forest Inc. representing the largest single conservation purchase in Maine history.

The centerpiece of the acquisition is the 31,512-acre Nahmakanta Township property southwest of Baxter State Park. Sportsmen and conservationists consider the property to be one of the most diverse and significant tracts of northern forest land not already protected by private or public agreement.

The Diamond transaction is a case study in the complexities of large real estate transactions. Eight public agencies were involved in the transaction.

The Conservancy was asked to serve as lead negotiator for the board because of its expertise in conservation real estate. In addition, The Conservancy had already worked with Diamond Occidental to protect nearly 15,000 acres of outstanding Maine land, establishing the Donnell Pond public lot and the Sunkhaze Meadows National Wildlife Refuge in the process.

The historic agreement that finally emerged required hundreds of hours of negotiations between the Conservancy, Diamond Occidental and various state and federal agencies.

It was the sale of certain Diamond assets that sparked the current concern about the future of the northern forest lands. James River Corp. purchased a 23 percent stock interest of Diamond to protect the timber resources which have historically provided pulpwood to its pulp mill in Old Town and to guide the future land sales of non-strategic Diamond timberlands.

According to Brent Halsey Jr., James River's vice president for woodlands, this transaction is a reflection of the company's commitment to working with the state to safeguard key lands of statewide significance.

But Halsey and Wommack both emphasized that hard work and good intentions are rarely enough to save land, and that is where the Land for Maine's Future program fits in.

The Land for Maine's Future Board will formally consider funding the Diamond purchase at a later meeting after gathering public input. If approved, the transaction would be the 10th purchase approved by the board since its inception in 1988. Previous acquisitions have protected more than 6,700 acres of land.

The Nature Conservancy is a national, non-profit land conservation organization which works to protect significant natural areas and owns and manages the largest, private system of nature sanctuaries in the world.

James River Corp., with headquarters in Richmond, is a major integrated manufacturer of pulp, paper and converted paper and plastic products with sales of $6 billion for its fiscal year ended April 29.

MARLBOROUGH, MA (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - The largest computer system ever delivered by Sequoia Systems Inc., a 16-processor configuration for a 2,000 plus terminal network, has been installed at Ferguson Enterprises Inc., the country's largest supplier of plumbing, heating and industrial supplies.

Located in Newport News, Va., Ferguson will use the Sequoia Series 300 system to consolidate its seven regional data centers into a single location, and will automate virtually every aspect of their distribution operations in over 170 branches. The Sequoia system was sold by the Ultimate Corp., a Sequoia distributor.

The system installed at Ferguson is configured with 16 processors, 512 MB of memory and 18 gigabytes of mirrored disk. It will provide Ferguson with both the Pick and UNIX operating environments, and will be used for order entry, purchasing, inventory control and accounts receivable. The system is using X25 communications to connect with their 19-state network covering the Mid-Atlantic, Southeast and Mid-West.

Ferguson's computer needs consist of large shared databases, big terminal networks, high transaction volumes, fast response times and a demand for high system availability. Sequoia's computer systems are designed to meet these needs. The system has a multi-processor, tightly-coupled fault-tolerant design. Ferguson looked at a number of competing systems before choosing the Sequoia system as their platform.

Even with the 2,000-plus terminal network which will be completely on-line with the next six months, Ferguson was also concerned with system expandibility. They required a system that could expand up to 4,500 users.

Ferguson Enterprises Inc., a division of Wolseley plc of the United Kingdom, is the largest wholesale plumbing distributor in the United States, with operations in 19 states and the District of Columbia. They have annual revenues in excess of $600 million.

Sequoia Systems Inc., designs, manufactures and markets fault-tolerant systems to serve the on-line transaction processing (OLTP) needs of companies. Sequoia's systems have an open architecture adhering to industry standards and a UNIX-based operating system. The company also offers the Pick Open Architecture. Sequoia provides on-line service and maintenance support to its worldwide customer base.

HUNT VALLEY, MD (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - EA Engineering, Science, and Technology, Inc. (NASDAQ: EACO) Thursday reported that the company expects to report an increase in net revenue to approximately $10.0 million for the third quarter which ended May 31, compared to $8.6 million in net revenue for the third quarter last year, but expects lower net income than the $301,200, or $0.12 per share, reported a year earlier. A complete earnings release is anticipated within the next few weeks.

The decline in net income is primarily due to the continuing delay in delivery by clients of samples for analysis in EA's analytical laboratory, and a continuation of the slowing of volume in building systems engineering at EA Mueller.

Furthermore, net income is being impacted by the unfavorable combination of a decrease in interest income due to the use of funds previously invested and an increase in interest expense due to borrowings for working capital needs.

Jensen noted that since the company's operating results depend to a large extent on timing of contract awards, and since costs associated with new business development tend to fluctuate during the fiscal year, EA's earnings can best be evaluated over several quarters rather than in short, three month intervals.

EA Engineering, Science, and Technology, Inc. is a multidisciplinary professional services consulting firm providing a wide range of engineering, scientific, analytical, and remediation capabilities to address existing and potential threats across the nation. EA designs building systems for energy conservation, indoor air quality, and climate control; provides remedial designs at contaminated sites; and develops solutions for waste management, energy conservation, and emissions control. EA is headquartered in Hunt Valley, and has offices in Texas, California, New York, New Jersey, Georgia, Nebraska, Illinois, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Washington, and Virginia.

HOUSTON (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Normandy Oil & Gas Co. announced Thursday that it has sold 50 percent of its interests in three gas wells in Southwestern Colorado, plus 50 percent of its undeveloped oil and gas leases in the same area, for almost $1.3 million. The company retains 50 percent interests in these wells and leases, it reported.

Frank W. Cole, chairman, stated that, in addition, the company has entered into an agreement with the purchaser of the interests to jointly develop an "Area of Mutual Interest" (AMI) in Southwestern Colorado comprising approximately 66,000 acres.

The parties expect to begin a development drilling program on their leases, with the first well spudding within 120 days. Additionally, an active leasing program is already underway to expand their holdings.

Cole stated that about $500,000 of the cash generated from this sale would be used to reduce bank debt and balance to increase working capital. He further stated that the development drilling program in the AMI, which will be largely funded by Normandy's partner, could be a significant factor in Normandy's growth.

Commenting on Normandy's recent price decline over the past three weeks on the over-the-counter national market list, Cole said, "There are no recent developments within the company that would account for the drop to $2.50 from $3.25. As these recent transactions indicate, Normandy is continuing its growth."

Normandy operates oil and gas production and gas gathering systems in Colorado, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas and Utah. It is concentrating its efforts on the acquisition of gas reserves and gas gathering and processing facilities, which currently account for about 60 percent of its revenues. Normandy, which recently reported sharply increased third quarter revenues and earnings, is based in Houston.

Osborn earned a Bachelor's Degree in Industrial Management and a minor in accounting from West Virginia University in 1964.

Eddie L. Ervin Jr., who founded the company in 1982, will continue to serve as chairman of the board of directors of the company. He said, ''We are excited about strengthening the Company's management team with an individual with Osborn's background and experience in the restaurant industry.

''Family has been seeking the 'right' person to provide the increased management and operational leadership necessary for a growing company such as ours. Jim brings us over 25 years of diverse operating and management experience in the industry. He is a capable and dynamic professional, and we are confident that he will help guide the Company to increased profitability and growth.''

Ervin also said, ''In addition, I will continue to be actively involved in the business. With the addition of Jim as chief executive officer, he will assume the day-to-day operational responsibilities, which gives me the opportunity to focus on strategic planning and longer-range matters.''

Osborn said, ''I am extremely enthusiastic about this unique opportunity to help guide a company that has such a solid foundation. The Ryan's concept of quality and service makes it the best in the industry. As the Florida franchisee for Ryan's, Family is already a leader in the industry, and I believe that it has unlimited potential.

''I am looking forward to working with Eddie Ervin and the entire management team at Family.''

The company owns and operates 25 Ryan's Family Steak House restaurants in Florida, as the exclusive Florida franchisee of Ryan's Family Steak Houses Inc. of Greer, S.C.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Metropolitan Asset Group Ltd. (MAG) announced Thursday that, together with Lambert Brussels Real Estate Corp., it had reached an agreement to purchase 100 percent of the assets of U.S. Shelter Corp., which has been one of the country's largest real estate syndicators and professional property managers.

U.S. Shelter has controlled more than $1.5 billion of original purchase price real estate assets, in addition to the value of its other divisions. Terms of the transaction include a cash infusion of $6 million into U.S. Shelter by an MAG partnership and conversion by Lambert Brussels of approximately 40 percent of its debt in the company into equity.

Pending resolution of negotiations currently underway, a total of approximately $40 million of U.S. Shelter indebtedness will be restructured and potentially assumed as part of the purchase price. The MAG partnership will own 65 percent, and Lambert Brussels will own 25 percent, of the equity in Shelter Holdings, a new entity being formed by MAG and Lambert Brussels to purchase U.S. Shelter's assets.

MAG, based in New York, has completed over 75 restructuring and workout transactions involving $750 million in assets. The firm is controlled by the Farkas family, founders of Alexander's Department Stores, which has developed and operates millions of square feet of retail and shopping center space.

Greenville, S.C.-based U.S. Shelter, a public company, is one of the largest professional property managers in the country, with general partner interests in 150 limited partnerships and with 48,000 multifamily housing units and one million square feet of commercial space in 26 states under management.

Lambert Brussels Association L.P. owns 100 percent of Lambert Brussels Real Estate Corp., which is the U.S. investment arm of Pargesa Holding/Groupe Bruxelles Lambert, an international financial organization with a market capitalization in excess of $3 billion.

FORT WORTH, TX (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Ucarco Inc. (NASDAQ: CARS) announced Thursday the closing of its public offering of 5,750,000 shares and receipt of approximately $108.4 million in proceeds.

In response to questions regarding the company's other sources of continued funding, the company announced that it is actively pursuing expansion of its financing alternatives.

In this connection, the company is involved in discussions with its lead bank, NCNB Texas National Bank, to significantly increase its revolving credit line, and is also in discussions with its investment bankers, Merrill Lynch Capital Markets and Alex. Brown & Sons Inc., regarding the feasibility of securitization of the company's automobile note portfolio and a commercial paper program.

The increase in Ucarco's shareholders equity to over $200 million, afforded by the recently completed offering and the increasing collections of the company's note portfolio (collections on such portfolio exclusive of down payments were $21 million for the past nine months as compared with $4.6 million for the like period last year), permits the company to pursue additional financing alternatives.

Ucarco presently has cash and available bank lines exceeding $125 million. Ucarco Inc. operates a chain of 17 used car and retail lots in Fort Worth, Dallas, Houston and Austin, selling quality used passenger cars and light trucks and typically financing customer purchases.

TAMPA, FL (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Action Staffing Inc. (NASDAQ:ACTS) and Synesys Inc. Thursday signed a letter of intent which is expected to lead to combining of the operations of the two employee leasing companies, it was announced Thursday by David Miller, chairman of Action Staffing.

Tampa-based Action Staffing would acquire certain assets of Atlanta-based Synesys for six million shares of its authorized but unissued restricted comon stock.

''Combined annual revenues of the organization, which would keep its dual identities, would approximate $350 million,'' Miller stated, on signing the letter of intent with James Shanks, president of Synesys Inc.

The combined companies' operations would have more than 20,000 employees under lease. Under the employee leasing concept, Action and Synesys provide a wide range of employee benefits and human resources functions including payroll administration.

''The amalgamation of Action Staffing and Synesys' opeations will result in an organization with greater scope and marketing expertise in one of the fastest growing industries,'' Miller pointed out. ''This will help us maintain our leadership in the industry and benefit from economies of scale,'' he said.

For the six months ended Feb. 28, Action Staffing reported a 92 percent increase in net income and a 41 percent rise in revenues. Action's revenues for the period were $77,422,000 and net income reached $342,000, or one cent per share.

The proposed transaction is subject to the execution of final definitive written agreements between the parties.

ANNOUNCEMENT:

Kansas City Southern has amended its $14 per share tender offer to increase the per share price to $15.85, eliminate certain conditions and change others.

Terms of the proposed second-step merger have also been changed.

DST's (TICKER: DSTS) board has approved the amended offer and merger and recommends that stockholders tender their shares.

An additional lawsuit has been filed in connection with the proposed transactions against Kansas City Southern, DST Systems, and Thomas A. McDonnell which seeks damages, costs and the divestiture of certain claimed profits and benefits.

The suit alleges, among other things, that the defendants have violated securities laws by allegedly manipulating DST's stock price, and misrepresenting and failing to disclose material information in connection with the tender offer in an attempt to acquire the outstanding shares for inadequate consideration at $14 per share.

The suit also alleges that McDonnell, who is a director and executive officer of both DST and Kansas City Southern, approved the transaction in violation of his fiduciary duties.

GROUP LED BY PACIFIC BASIN CO TEXAS OWNS 4,587,230 SHARES (67.37%) OF APCO ARGENTINA INC (TICKER: APAGF) OF SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

ANNOUNCEMENT:

Fighting for its alleged right to acquire certain shares of APCO Argentina Inc. held by The Williams Companies Inc., Triton Energy has filed counterclaims in the U.S. District Court against Williams and its subsidiary, Northwest Energy Co.

The legal battle concerns a shareholders agreement among Williams, Northwest Energy, Triton and Triton's subsidiary, Pacific Basin Co. While Triton believes it has the option under their agreement to buy Williams' shares in APCO in lieu of a sale to third parties, Williams says the agreement expired May 1 and that Triton has no such right.

In its suit, Williams also argues that The First Boston Corp. did not propose a price or marketing plan for disposition of the shares in a timely manner as required under the agreement, therefore releasing Williams from its obligation.

Triton and Pacific Basin claim in their defense that Williams and Northwest prevented the timely preparation of a marketing plan and, in fact, waived any claims that First Boston perform its tasks within the stated time frame.

They also alleged that Williams had promised to extend the shareholders agreement for at least a year.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows On June 3, 1990, Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. Inc. announced the introduction of a new multi-function optical drive with overwrite capability. The new product, as Matsushita informed Energy Conversion Devices Inc., utilizes erasable phase technology as developed by Energy Conversion. That technology was licensed to Matsushita on non-exclusive, royalty-bearing terms.

The new optical drive was introduced by Matsushita through its Panasonic Communications & Systems Co., located in the United States. Matsushita, according to the royalty agreement, must pay Energy Conversion royalties of three percent of net sales of optical discs and three percent of thirty-five percent of the net selling price of the hardware memory devices, subject to Matsushita advanced royalty credits. The royalties, under the license, must be paid for five years after manufacture of the devices has begun.

Under Energy Conversion's consulting agreement with Matsushita, of Nov. 18 1990, Energy Conversion owns all inventions generated by those consultations, subject to Matsushita's irrevocable option to gain non-exclusive license for those inventions at a three percent royalty rate. Those terms apply to both write-once and erasable systems. In Japan, however, Matsushita possesses exclusive rights to such developed inventions, subject to the same three percent royalty rate.

JAKARTA (JUNE 7) - Indonesia's export revenues surged to 5.78 billion dollars in the first quarter of 1990, up by 14 percent from the corresponding period of last year, Information Minister Harmoko said Thursday.

Export earnings from non-oil commodities grew to 3.40 billion dollars in January-March, or an increase of 12.4 percent over the previous year, Mr. Harmoko said after a cabinet meeting.

Non-oil commodities accounted for 58 percent of Indonesia's export income during the quarter, well up on the 20 percent registered in the early 1980s before the government embarked on a campaign to boost the non-oil sector.

Plywood and textiles are the two most prominent non-oil exports, followed by traditional commodities such as coffee and rubber. Indonesia however has increasingly broadened its export base to include various manufactured goods.

Mr. Harmoko said export income in March was 2.22 billion dollars, up 0.9 per- cent on February but 0.54 percent lower than in March of 1989.

Indonesia imported 1.80 billion dollars worth of goods during the month, giving a trade surplus of 420 million dollars.

The minister also said that Indonesia's inflation rate in May stood at 0.58 percent, compared to 0.64 percent registered in May 1989.

WELLINGTON (JUNE 7) - New Zealand's Labour government moved a step closer Thursday to the controversial sale of the state-owned Telecoms Corp. when bids were closed here.

The telephone company was expected to fetch between 3.5 billion and four billion New Zealand dollars (two and 2.3 billion U.S.), though State Owned Enterprises Minister Richard Prebble would not disclose details of bidders.

The sale, now on a fast-track to be completed by July before general elections due in October, is the latest in a series of state asset sales designed to reduce New Zealand's government debt.

The move could be electorally damaging, according to public opinion polls which show 90 percent of the respondents do not approve of the Telecom sale in its current form. At the 1986 elections Labour promised not to sell Telecoms.

Mr. Prebble has defended the sale, saying Telecoms would not improve its performance without private ownership and that the state can no longer afford the investment required.

He insisted that any future owner of Telecom would be required to guarantee free local dialling, ensure telephone availability at a standard rate for rural and urban users and promise that charges would not rise faster than inflation.

Mr. Prebble had the promises carved in stone - literally - and presented them to parliament, while television advertisements repeated the promises.

A number of potential bidders have disclosed their intentions, the latest being Thursday when New Zealand's biggest company, Fletcher Challenge Ltd. (FCL) unveiled a proposal for a 100 percent purchase of Telecoms.

FCL chairman Sir Ronald Trotter, who is also Telecoms chairman, announced he was resigning immediately from the Telecoms post.

Mr. Prebble dismissed any suggestion of conflict of interest, saying Sir Ronald had been "quarantined" from matters relating to the sale since FCL first expressed interest in acquiring Telecoms several months ago.

LONDON (JUNE 7) - Nissan Motor Co. Ltd., the British subsidiary of the Japanese car maker, has agreed to donate 3.2 million pounds (5.4 million dollars) to Oxford University to expand Japanese studies facilities, the company said here Thursday.

The donation will be used for construction of a new building to house the Nissan institute of Japanese Studies at St. Antony's College and will help fund two new lecturships in economics and social anthropology, Nissan said.

The Nissan Institute , which began a Japanese studies program in 1981, was founded after the carmaker gave 11.5 million pounds (18.4 million dollars) to the university in 1979 to assist Anglo-Japanese cultural exchange programs.

In a statement, Nissan said it had been approached by Oxford for a further donation which was agreed "in recognition of the significance of the Nissan Institute's activities."

Paris (JUNE 7) - Western nations Thursday cleared the way for East Germany to have virtually unlimited access to high-technology exports.

The western nations also cleared the way for major improvements in machine tool, telecommunications and computer equipment deliveries to East Bloc countries.

The decisions were made by officials of all North Atlantic Treaty Organisation states except Iceland, plus Japan and Australia, meeting as members of Cocom, the Coordinating Committee for Multilateral Export Controls.

LONDON (JUNE 7) - The Irish Guinness Peat Aviation (GPA) aircraft leasing company on Thursday reported an increase of 59 percent in net profits to 242 million dollars for the year to March.

Sales rose by 88 percent to 1.96 billion dollars compared with 1.04 billion dollars. Profits the previous year were 152 million pounds.

In the fourth quarter net profits rose by 49 percent over the same period the previous year to 62.6 million dollars on sales of 714.5 million dollars.

GPA is the biggest aircraft leasing company, ahead of the U.S. firm International Leasing Corp. of Los Angeles. Its shareholders are spread throughout North America, Europe and the Far east, and include the founder Tony Ryan with eight per cent, Air Canada, Aer Lingus of Ireland, and the Japanese Mitsubishi trust Bank which has 12 percent.

Company vice president Robert Foley said that GPA might seek a flotation on the London stock exchange towards the end of 1991, adding that the company was now worth an estimated four billion dollars.

The company said that it had lines of credit totalling 5.8 billion dollars. It leases 240 aircraft to 68 airlines in 41 countries, and has ordered 700 aircraft with turbo engines.

Wihin a few years the company has been developed from nothing under the leadership of Mr. Ryan, a former Aer Lingus pilot.

LONDON (JUNE 7) - The British Pilkington company, one of the leading world manufacturers of glass, Thursday reported a fall of three percent in taxable profits for the year to March.

Profits totalled 314.3 million pounds (528 million dollars) compared with 325.2 million the previous year.

Sales totalled 2.915 billion pounds compared with 2.572 billion pounds. The final dividend was increased to 7.57 pence against 6.84 pence making a total for the year of 10.5 pence against 9.5 pence.

Profits per share fell to 25 pence from 27.3 pence.

Analysts had expected a higher profit figure of between 317 million and 330 million pounds. The shares lost 10 pence to 192 pence after the news.

Performance was undermined by difficulties in the British construction industry caused by high interest rates, by a reduction of sales to the U.S. auto industry in the second half, and by recession in the Australian economy, the company said.

PARIS (JUNE 7) - A Paris court Thursday sentenced Jacqueline Esber, a Lebanese national, to life imprisonment in absentia for the murder of an Israeli diplomat here and the attempted killing of a U.S. envoy.

Ms. Esber, whom investigators believe has fled to Lebanon, was the companion of convicted Lebanese terrorist Georges Ibrahim Abdallah who is serving a life sentence for the attempted assassination of U.S. consul general Robert Onan Homme in Strasbourg, east France, in March 1984.

The court found her guilty of the killing of Israeli diplomat Yacov Barsimentov in the Paris suburb of Boulogne-Billancourt in April 1982 and the attack on Mr. Homme which was later claimed by the Revolutionarey Lebanese Armed Factions (FARL).

Witnesses had identified Ms. Esber near Mr. Barsimentov's home. The Israeli diplomat was gunned down with the same weapon used in the killing of U.S. deputy military attache Charles Robert Ray here in January 1982.

Meanwhile, a special Paris court jailed Iraqi terrorist Haysayn Humari for life in absentia for a bomb attack on the Marks and Spencer department store here in February 1985 in which one person died and 18 people were injured.

A Tunesian national, Habib Maamar, got a life sentence last December for the same attack after he admitted to the bombing and accusing Mr. Humari of having trained him in Iraq.

Court president Maurice Colomb said Thursday Israeli and French intelligence services had spotted Mr. Humari but he would not say where.

Mr. Humari is also suspected of terrorist activities in Italy, Mr. Colomb added.

In another terrorist trial Algerian Mohand Hamami was jailed for life in absentia for killing two police here in May 1983 in a shoot-out between members of the leftist terrorist group Action Directe and the police.

Mr. Hamami, 35, was also found guilty of the attempted killing of four people including witnesses to the shooting.

Police said Mr. Hamami probably fled to Algeria.

In June 1987 two other Action direct terrorists were sentenced to life imprisonment and ten years in prison each for their part in the shooting.

Investigators suspect Mr. Hamami of being a liaison man between Action Directe, the Italian leftist group Red Brigades and Mr. Abdallah's FARL.

DAMASCUS (JUNE 7) - Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi met here Thursday with Syrian President Hafez al-Assad to discuss resolutions adopted at an Arab summit last week boycotted by Damascus, a League source said.

The source said Mr. Klibi's visit, which began Tuesday, was "aimed at involving Syria, the main frontline state with Israel, in the application of resolutions adopted by the Arab summit" in Baghdad last week.

Syria, which has longstanding ideological differences with Iraq, stayed away from the meeting, charging that it had been inadequately prepared.

Mr. Klibi had underlined in his talks here the "positive and constructive mood at the summit during debates on the Palestinian cause, Lebanon and the threats against Iraq and Libya," the source said.

The summit condemned Washington for its support of Israel and urged the United Nations to guarantee that Soviet Jews emigrating in large numbers to Israel will not be settled in the Israeli-occupied territories.

The Arab League secretary general met Wednesday with Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Shara on preparing a conference of Arab foreign and economic ministers scheduled within the next two months.

Mr. Klibi was to leave Damascus later Thursday for Tunis, where the League is headquartered.

KHARTOUM (JUNE 7) - Rebels of Ethiopia's Oromo Liberation Front released two Cuban medical workers in the Sudanese capital Thursday after nearly half a year of captivity.

Dr Pedro Marin, 35, and his wife, nurse Ylolanda Boga, 23, both appeared to be in good health as they were handed over to U.S. Ambassador James Richard Cheek in a ceremony at Sudan's Ministry of Culture and Information.

Cheek was scheduled to turn the couple over to ''appropriate Cuban officials at a convenient place and time in Europe'', Oromo's representative in Sudan, Tadessa Ebaa, said.

The United States and Cuba do not maintain diplomatic relations.

Marin and Boga were among an original total of six Cuban medical workers captured following the fall of Asosa, a town 700 kilometres west of Addis Ababa, on January 5.

Two of the group were released to the Cuban ambassador in Sanaa, Yemen, on April 17, and Ebaa said Thursday that the remaining two would be freed in the coming days.

In a brief address at the Khartoum ceremony, Marin said he and his wife went to Ethiopia ''on our own will and out of our own ideological conviction to help the people of Ethiopia''.

Paderborn, West Germany (JUNE 7) - Nixdorf Computer Ag suffered losses of 1.069 billion marks in 1989, ''by far the most difficult year'' in the West German firm's history, according to a corporate statement Thursday.

Declining market prices were to blame for the ''dramatic decline'', which is continuing this year. The corporate statement predicted that ''high losses'' would continue through September 30.

Volume in 1989 was 5.26 billion marks, down only slightly from 1988's 5.34 billion. But 1988 benefitted from large sales of property holdings by the company, which helped result in a year-end surplus of 26 million marks.

Besides the price drop, an uncertain domestic market turned the normally better second half of the fiscal year sour. Domestic volume slumped by 7 per cent, compared to a rise of 4 per cent on the international market.

Nixdorf, which is to be taken over by Siemens October 1 and to re-emerge as Siemens Nixdorf Information Systems, laid off 2,500 employees worldwide in 1989. Another 3,500 workers are to go this year from the current workforce of 28,500.

CAIRO (JUNE 7) - Khaled Abdel Nasser, son of the late Egyptian leader Gamal Abdel Nasser, was released on bail Thursday by a state security court here trying alleged members of an extremist dissident group.

Mr. Abdel Nasser had unexpectedly returned to Egypt late Wednesday after several years abroad. He was arrested at Cairo airport after arriving with his wife and children on a flight from Geneva.

He is accused of financing the Revolution of Egypt group, which mounted a series of attacks between 1984 and 1986 on Israeli and U.S. diplomats that left two Israelis dead and several Americans wounded.

The court freed Mr. Abdel Nasser on bail of 5,000 Egyptian pounds (two thousand dollars) and was to continue its hearings Saturday.

During the trial of the Revolution of Egypt group, which began in 1988, the prosecutor had asked for the death sentence against Mr. Abdel Nasser and 10 other defendants.

LONDON (JUNE 7) - The International Wheat Council (IWC) on Thursday upped its world wheat output forecast for the July 1990-June 1991 season by eight million tons to 565 million.

The forecast points to a harvest some 30 million tons higher than the estimated 1989-1990 crop.

World wheat stocks at the end of this month were forecast to stand at 106 million tons, up three million tons from the IWC's previous forecast.

The IWC also ventured forecasts of Soviet grain output and imports. Grain output there will reach 215 million tons in 1989-1990, up from an estimated 211 million in 1989-1990, the Council said.

It forecast Soviet grain imports to fall to 35 million tons from 38.5 million in 1989-1990.

KABUL (JUNE 7) - The central committee of the ruling People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan (PDPA) has held a special meeting here to prepare the agenda for its first congress in 25 years, a government spokesman said Thursday.

The central committee, headed by President Najibullah, decided Wednesday to adopt a new constitution for the party, change its name to the Homeland Party and work out a new program of action, spokesman Humayun Mukammel told reporters.

He said the congress was expected to be held "within a few weeks" as part of Mr. Najibullah's political moves to democratise the party, which came to power after a pro-communist military council took over in 1978.

"The first congress was on January 1, 1965, and since then a lot of things have changed, but there had been no congress," Mr. Mukammel said, adding that the party had made "certain mistakes" in the past.

Senior PDPA members have in recent weeks criticised the founders of the party, saying they had adopted a Marxist ideology because it was "fashionable in eastern Europe at the time."

Mr. Najibullah has recently denied categorically that the current PDPA is a communist party and has tried to distance the party from the 1978 takeover.

LONDON (JUNE 7) - The British National Union of Journalists on Thursday urged its members and other journalists to join a one-day strike on June 27 to protest union derecognition and growing use of personal employment contracts.

An NUJ spokesman said personal contracts and derecognition by magazines and newspapers were the two greatest threats to collective bargaining faced by the union.

Members were expected to join demonstrations, including a rally in central London, and to stay off the job on June 27.

British Trades Union Congress General Secretary Norman Willis and tony Blair, the opposition Labour Party's chief spokesman on employment issues, had been invited to speak at the London rally.

ABIDJAN (JUNE 7) - Hundreds of expatriate businessmen and missionaries were leaving conflict-ridden Liberia, but plan to return to the West African country "when the dust settles," travellers said here Thursday.

"Everybody's getting out now," two American missionaries who asked not to be identified told Agence France-Presse on arrival at the international airport here from Monrovia's Spriggs Payne Airport.

They said the capital Monrovia was basically calm Thursday, but that tension was running high in anticipation of a rebel attack and further murders by government troops against Gio and Mano tribesmen accused of supporting rebels.

"There are lots of soldiers around, but they are doing everything but protect the people," the missionaries, who booked a return ticket, said. "They (troops) are running wild."

Many of the 126 people who arrived aboard Air Guinea's packed Boeing 737 carried two or three pieces of baggage, and despite their late departure from the country rocked by a six-month-old rebellion, appeared to want to return as soon as possible.

"I left Monrovia, but I plan to return in six months or as soon as the dust clears," said businessman Douglas Atchison, who was on his way home to Canada.

Dozens of Lebanese and Indian businessmen were also on the flight.

For Al Karlay, a 30-year-old Liberian American from Los Angeles who had to cut short a three-week visit with his family in Liberia, life has already become somewhat more "normal" because of U.S. marines positioned off the Coast of Liberia.

U.S. officials say marines, aboard four navy ships, are awaiting instructions to help evacuate Americans still in the country should the need arise.

Mr. Karlay, who lived in Liberia until age 20, is confident that President Samuel Doe will "give up for the sake of peace," making way for an interim government and upcoming general elections.

He said he was able to walk around freely in Monrovia without problems, even at night.

A small private Cessna-Beechcraft owned by the Weasua company meanwhile had evacuted City Corp Bank employees to Abidjan earlier Thursday.

The two planes were guided by air traffic controllers in Freetown, Sierra Leone, as workers at Robertsfield, Liberia's only international airport 55 kilometers (35 miles) east of Monrovia, cut off contact with airplanes flying over the gulf of Guinea on Thursday.

The controllers at Robertsfield normally direct 60 planes a day, many of them flying from Southwest Africa to Western Europe and between Latin America, West Africa and the Middle East.

Liberian rebels led by former government official Charles Taylor and seeking to oust President Samuel Doe have surrounded the airport.

Air Guinea is the only commercial carrier still operating in Liberia.

U.S. officials late Wednesday said they would also help evacuate Soviet nationals, while Bonn announced Thursday that it was moving to evacuate 220 West German citizens in Liberia.

ASTI, Italy (JUNE 7) - Brazilian manager Sebastiao Lazaroni warned here on Thursday that the Samba soccer with which the three-time World Cup winners have thrilled the sport for countless years will be discarded in Italia 90.

He promised in its place a more functional European style as the South Americans aim to end a 20-year wait for their fourth World Cup.

Lazaroni, the youngest manager in Brazilian history at 39, explained: "In 1982 and 1986 Brazil without doubt had the best team, but they failed to win the trophy because they played too much football.

"This system gives us much greater security in defence and a better balance. Our record proves it as well because we're conceding fewer goals than before."

However Lazaroni was quick to emphasise that the introduction of a three-man central defence would not lead to a complete suppression of the magical style which football followers have come to know and love.

"We won't be concentrating everything on defence," he said. "These tactics don't stifle creativity and the players need a certain freedom.

"We'll try and play attractively. What I've had to do is to instil a winning mentality into the Brazilian players. We must battle all the time.

"But this system doesn't prevent us from attacking or scoring goals. We can play with three forwards when necessary, but everyone must carry out their defensive tasks.

"I like talent. I don't have a Pele or a Garrincha, but I feel there's as much talent in this team as in that of 1982, who played football of a remarkable quality. I believe we can go far."

Lazaroni, who quits as Brazilian manager after the finals to take over at Italian club Fiorentina, has high hopes of going out in a blaze of glory.

"I believe we're on the right road," he reasoned. "Of course we want the title. I certainly want it and I believe the players have the same determination.

"But we will also need some luck. In a competition like the World Cup that's essential. It's not like a championship where you can make up for your mistakes.

"In 1982 we didn't have the run of the ball. I hope we'll have it this time."

However, even if Brazil do not lift the trophy on July 8, Lazaroni will not be jumping off the nearest bridge.

"Life goes on," he said. "The large majority of countries dream of winning the World Cup for the first time, but we've already won it three times.

"The important thing is that Brazil are competitive and play our traditional football, that is strong on technique and more combative than before."

GENOA (JUNE 7) - Scottish striker Mo Johnson continued to defy doctors when he turned out for light training here and then announced on Thursday he would be ready for the opening match against Costa Rica.

Even Scottish manager Andy Roxburg has been surprised by the speed Johnson's recoverey from a stomach injury.

''Maurice is two days ahead of schedule,'' declared a happy Roxburgh.

''We wanted him to be back at work by Friday so we are pleasantly surprised. However we will not push him. Let's be blunt - a week ago he had no chance of playing.

''If we find he is fit to play in our first match against Costa Rica it will be a tremendous bonus. At the moment, he will certainly be ready for the second game with Sweden a week on Saturday judging by the way he is progressing,'' added Roxburg.

Johnston, Scotland's the first choice striker after his six goals in the World Cup qualifying, is currently taking anti-inflammatory pills for the injury.

Scotland continue to make friends amongst the locals. More than 1,000 people turned out last night to watch the public training session.

DUBLIN (JUNE 7) - The European Community is resolved to step up its support for the protection of the Palestinian people's human rights, Irish Foreign Minister Gerard Collins said here Thursday.

Collins, speaking at the start of a two-day meeting of the general committee of Euro-Arab dialogue, said the 12-member E.C. was alarmed at the current developments in the Israeli-occupied territories. Ireland currently holds the rotating E.C. chairmanship.

The meeting is designed to revive the Euro-Arab process which opened in 1974 but has been stalled for more than a decade.

Collins told the 120 officials attending the session that the need for institutional contacts between the European and the Arab nations had increased.

He said the political aspects of the dialogue would be separated from the economic, technical, social and cultural aspects and in future the political aspects would be institutionalised in a ministerial troika which would meet annually.

KARACHI (JUNE 7) - A multi-party conference here has condemned ethnic violence in Sindh but ruled out emergency measures to restore peace to the southern Pakistan province, officials said Thursday.

The 15-hour meeting, convened Wednesday by Sindh's Chief Minister Aftab Shaban Mirani, condemned "ethnicity" and "proliferation of illicit weapons" and called on the government to take "firm and impartial action against terrorists," a statement issued after the conference said.

It did not say how the resolutions would be implemented.

More than 300 people have died since May 14 in clashes between native Sindhis -- represented by the ruling Pakistan People's Party (PPP) and Jiye Sindh group -- and Urdu-speaking settlers from India, largely represented by the Mohajir Qaumi Movement (MQM).

Fourteen workers were shot dead near a cement factory here Wednesday just before the conference opened.

The MQM, the main opposition group, boycotted the conference held in the Sindh secretariat here, although a Mohajir coordinating body and two components of the opposition Islamic Democratic Alliance (IJI) were among 21 groups that took part.

Economic disparity and official corruption, especially among police, were cited as factors contributing to a rise in ethnic tensions over the past five years, and participants urged the government to follow "non-discriminatory, even-handed" policies, the statement said.

Sindh's provincial government has come under strong criticism for its policy of arresting "terrorists" and other anti-social elements, which oppposition sources said were directed against their activists.

Participants rejected an opposition demand for the imposition of martial law or governor's rule, which would bring the province directly under federal administration, saying instead that the provincial "democratic process should be continued," the statement said.

Observers here said that resolution was significant as it was endorsed by two main fundamentalist opposition parties, the Jamaat-e-Islami and Jamiat-e-Ulema-e-Islam.

Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto earlier rejected a declaration of martial law or a state of emergency in Sindh, her home province.

Pakistan's military chief, General Mirza Aslam Beg, tacitly supported her position, saying Sindh's problems were political and a permanent solution through political means should be found.

ROME (JUNE 7) - FIFA president Joao Havelange has come out in favour of the World Cup being staged in Asia.

And the 74 year-old forecast here on Thursday that he saw no reason why it cannot be staged in Asia within 12 years.

"Before I retire as president my dream is to see Asia hold the World Cup. China, Japan and Saudi Arabia are all possibilities at present," he announced.

Havelange also said he would be meeting Chinese officials during the Asian Games in Beijing later this year to ensure that Hong Kong and Macao would remain as seperate members of FIFA.

There has been doubt over the two federations' future when China takes control of Hong Kong from Britain in 1997 and Portuguese-run Macao in 1999.

"I want the two federations to remain as seperate bodies and I will be talking about it with Chinese officials in September," explained Havelange.

BANGKOK (JUNE 7) - China's Assistant Minister of Foreign Affairs Xu Dunxin is scheduled to hold talks with Thai leaders prior to leaving here to attend Sino-Vietnamese normalization talks in Hanoi Saturday, a spokeswoman of the Chinese Embassy here said Thursday.

Mr. Xu was scheduled to pay a courtesy call on Thai Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan and deputy Prime Minister and Defence Minister General Chaowalit Yongchaiyuth at the Thai Government House Thursday, the spokeswoman said.

A Thai Government source said Gen. Chaowalit, who was scheduled to return here Thursday from Tokyo, was expected to brief Mr. Xu on the signing of a joint communique on a "voluntary self-restraint in the use of force" between rival Cambodian factions which he attended in the Japanese capital Tuesday.

The Chinese Embassy spokeswoman said Mr. Xu will also hold talks with Thai Foreign Minister Siddhi Sawetasila and Foreign Affairs Secretary Kasem Kasemsri Friday before leaving here for Hanoi Saturday.

Mr. Xu will be attending a second round of high-level Sino-Vietnamese talks as a follow-up to the first held in Beijing in May.

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 7) - The African National Congress (ANC) Thursday accused South Africa's government of "half-measures" by only partially lifting the national state of emergency, saying it still had "a long way to go".

"We are not asking for half-measures to clear the way for negotiations with the government," ANC internal leader Walter Sisulu said after President Frederik de Klerk's told parliament that the nationwide state of emergency imposed four years ago would end at midnight Friday except in Natal.

A grim Mr. Sisulu told a media briefing that the state of emergency had to be lifted in its entirety to satisfy the ANC that the government was committed to clearing obstacles in the path of constitutional negotiations.

He also slammed Mr. De Klerk's announcement that 10,000 extra policemen would be recruited nationwide in a bid to curb violence.

"As long as the police are not committed to peace processes, their function is suspect ... because they are the people who are themselves committed to violence. They add to the violence."

Mr. Sisulu also rejected Mr. De Klerk's claim that that the ANC was "vacillating" in its plans to search for peace in the country.

"We have no intention of dragging our feet. The government has not done enough to start blaming the ANC for vacillating and delaying," he said.

In a clearly pessimistic address, Mr. Sisulu said Mr. De Klerk had not dealt with numerous other security measures which prevented the ANC from free political activity and blamed him for not sufficiently tackling violence.

He accused the government of "doing nothing" to stop recent right-wing attacks on blacks, notably in the Orange Free State gold mining town Welkom.

PARIS (JUNE 7) - Thirty-six people hurt in last Sunday's deadly French motorway crash of a British tourist coach left here Thursday for Birmingham on board a special flight.

They included the driver John Johnston, who has been charged with manslaughter, involuntarily causing injury and speeding.

Mr. Johnston, 52, from Scotland, appeared Wednesday before a magistrate at Sens who released him on bail of 50,000 francs (about 8,700 dollars or 5,000 pounds).

The 36 flown to Birmingham, 11 of whom were on stretchers, were seen off at Orly airport by an attache of the British embassy.

Six other casualties are still in hospital in the Paris region.

Eleven people were killed and a total 57 hurt in the crash at Joigny, in the Yonne district of Burgundy, near Auxerre. A burst tyre sent the speeding coach hurtling off the motorway.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 7) - The ban on imports of British beef ordered by France, Italy and West Germany in connection with Britain's "mad cow disease" has been lifted, effective immediately, EEC Agriculture Commissioner Ray MacSharry announced here.

He stressed that the additional checks on British beef exports decided on Thursday by agriculture ministers of the European Economic Community were "applicable immediately".

The farm ministers had reached agreement earlier in the day to strengthen Community measures against the spread of "mad cow disease", which is ravaging British herds, and the ministers had hoped the accord would end the "beef war" that broke out with a ban on imports of British beef by France, West Germany, Italy and Portugal.

Irish Agriculture Minister Michael O'Kennedy, whose country is the current EEC president, said the additional measures and the cancellation of the beef ban were "automatic and simultaneous".

The farm ministers' agreement, which was to be formalized later Thursday after approval by the EEC Veterinary Committee, provides that all British beef exports are to be eviscerated, boned and stripped of nerve tissue to eliminate the parts of the animal thought most likely to carry the "mad cow disease" - formally known as bovine spongeiform encephalitis.

BONN (JUNE 7) - The member states of the Western export-control organization COCOM decided on Thursday in Paris to liberalize existing restrictions on technology exports to East Bloc countries, West German Economics Minister Helmut Haussmann said here.

He said in a communique that the liberalization, in particular, would facilitate exports of machine tools, telecommunications installations and computers to countries belonging to the former Communist Bloc.

Exports of high-technology items to East Germany will now be almost unrestricted, the minister added.

Members of COCOM, the 17-nation Coordinating Committee on Multilateral Export Controls, began meeting in the French capital on Wednesday to discuss loosening restrictions on technology exports to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Mr. Haussmann said the Paris meeting made five decisions, providing for:

- Free access for East Germany to almost all Western technology,

- A marked loosening of conditions pertaining to exports of machine tools, telecommunications equipment and computers to all Eastern countries.

- Dropping more than a third of the products now banned from export to Eastern countries).

- Greater flexibility in treatment of Eastern countries that formally pledge to use technologies acquired from the West for civilian purposes only, and

- An additional and "considerable" reduction in the number of articles of which COCOM bans exports by the end of the year, limiting bans to equipment of strategic interest.

COCOM groups all NATO countries except Iceland, plus Japan and Australia.

GENOA, ITALY (JUNE 7) - Genoa, Italy's leading port, is bracing itself for an invasion of up to 100,000 World Cup fans from all around the globe in the next fortnight.

Among those will be the notorious followers of England and the Netherlands, who will pass through this building site of a city to see their countries in action in Sardinia and Sicily.

The Genoese insist they are ready for any violence, whether it be from the English or Dutch, Scots, whose team are based here, or any other nationality.

That is not exactly evident, with enough rubble near the quayside where fans will pour on and off the huge ferries to keep any hooligan amused for quite some time.

But Dr Vito Mattera, Genoa's police chief, warned: "If there is any trouble, we will certainly be able to deal with it. I have 2,000 officers available until the end of the World Cup.

"We're ready to deal with people coming here and are working closely with the British and Dutch police.

"We've dealt with everything in the last 30 years -- terrorism, everything. We're not frightened of young men acting in a delinquent way.

"For every crime there is a punishment. If they kill someone, for example, they'll go into our jails and never come out and our jails are not nice places.

"Lesser crimes will have lesser punishments and we will treat them according to their seriousness."

Coaches will be escorted into the port from the end of the motorway and freight railway lines will be opened up to enable trains carrying fans to go straight to the quayside.

English and Dutch supporters will bord from separate quays and fans will be frisked before they embark.

PRETORIA (JUNE 7) - South Africa's gold and foreign exchange reserves dipped by 2.72 percent to 5.326 billion rands (1.997 billion dollars) in May from 5.475 billion rands (2.053 billion dollars) in April, the Reserve Bank said here Thursday.

Gold reserves decreased by 5.7 percent in May, a marked change from their 1.64 percent rise in April. Local economists attributed this to the rapid fall in the gold price on international markets, frequently dropping below the critical 370-dollar-an-ounce mark in May.

Foreign exchange reserves edged higher in May, increasing by 1.6 percent to 2.319 billion rands (869 million dollars).

MOSCOW (JUNE 7) - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, at the start of a summit conference of the seven-nation Warsaw Pact, called Thursday for a unified Germany to be an associated member of both the Western and the Eastern military pacts, conference sources said.

Gorbachev told leaders and foreign ministers of East Germany, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Romania, Hungary and Poland that since the end of World War Two both Germanys had shown that they were mature enough to bear their share of responsibility in world politics.

East Germany and West Germany could honour their commitments toward their respective blocs best by remaining associated members of both the Pact and the North Atlantic Alliance (Nato) after German unification, the Kremlin leader said.

Gorbachev praised the Warsaw Pact as a political factor that had helped to maintain a European equilibrium.

Briefing the conference on his recent summit in Washington with George Bush, Grobachev said the U.S. president was not reckoning with the dissolution of the Pact, the sources said.

Gorbachev was also quoted as speaking of the likelihood of ''wholly different Nato memberships''. Conference sources said this could indicate Moscow's readiness to accept in future differing membership status for various Warsaw Pact countries.

Non-communist East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere said he advocated ''a thoroughly reformed Nato'', the East German Adn news agency reported. Adn quoted him as saying Nato must abandon its present strategy of flexible response and forward defence.

If what was today East German was given a special military status a unified Germany could be a member in such a reformed Nato for an interim period, de Maiziere was quoted as saying.

Gorbachev and de Maiziere meanwhile had a meeting on the periphery of the summit, Tass news agency reported. They agreed to continue their consultations on German unification and bilateral ties at various levels, it added.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze told reporters Moscow planned to propose holding meetings between all European foreign ministers every six months.

He said Moscow favoured the creation of a permanent secretariat of European foreign ministers to serve as ''a centre for preventing the threat of war''.

Shevardnadze added, ''In the event that Berlin becomes the capital of a unified Germany, this centre should have its headquarters in Berlin.''

The seven leaders later adopted a declaration, paving the way for a gradual transition of the Warsaw pact to a political organisation, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Yuli Kwizinski told reporters.

According to the declaration, the pact should be stripped of its ''confrontative elements'' since these were ''no longer in line with today's challenges''.

The declaration envisaged a transition to ''a grouping of equal and sovereign states'', he said. The pact's military side should be be replaced by political abd consultative elements, Kwizinski added.

HANOVER, WEST GERMANY (JUNE 7) - Social Democrats and Greens ended three weeks of negotiations here Thursday by agreeing on details for a coalition state government in Lower Saxony - the third Spd-Green coalition at the state level in West German history.

The new coalition, which unseats a conservative state government headed by the Christian Democrats, was finalised Thursday afternoon when Greens leaders agreed to accept cabinet positions for the newly created Women's Ministry and the Ministry for Federal and European Affairs. Greens will also be appointed to under-secretary posts in the education and environment departments.

The coalition platform calls for phasing out nuclear power plants, dropping plans for two nuclear waste disposal sites and stopping the current practice of burning waste at garbage dumps.

In addition, the state government is to give priority to public transport over highway construction. The coalition vowed to rewrite state laws to prevent political parties from seizing control of the regional public broadcaster, Ndr radio and television. Top Ndr posts are currently held by Cdu officials appointed under the former state government.

Similar Spd-Greens coalitions have been created in the past at the state level in West Berlin and Hesse.

ROME (JUNE 7) - Few goals and fewer stars is the sobering World Cup prospect raised by Italy's defensive kingpin Franco Baresi.

"I don't really imagine we are going to see a lot of goals," said the quietly-spoken Italian captain who two weeks ago raised the European Champions Cup in triumph after his club side AC Milan beat Benfica Lisbon in the final with a single goal from Dutch international Frank Rijkaard.

"There is going to be very little space in front of goal and teams are going to find it difficult to create chances."

Mexico set an ominous pattern when the 1986 finals produced fewer goals per game than any previous tournament.

And if Baresi can read the future as well as he reads the game world soccer fans could be in for meagre fare.

"In these conditions it will be difficult for any unknown player to break through. I don't think we will see another Diego Maradona or Ruud Gullit."

Maradona, whose Napoli side pipped Milan for the Italian league title this season, leads Argentina out in their opening game against Cameroon on Friday.

Gullit, who came back after injury to play for Milan in that European Cup final, leads European champions the Netherlands against Egypt in their first match in Sicily next Tuesday.

Brazil are Baresi's favourites. "They might not have any fantastic individual players but they are a lot more difficult to beat," he said.

He should know. The free-kick from Cruz which brought Brazil a 1-0 win in Bologna last October was the only goal Italy have conceded in their last 10 matches.

"It's true we have not been scoring enough goals recently but all that could change when the tournament starts."

Italian clubs have already won all three European competitions this year and the whole country is now expecting the national team to complete the grand slam by winning the World Cup.

"It does put pressure on us but we can only do our best and it's up to us to face up to our responsibilities," he added.

Italy are notoriously slow starters but Baresi refuses to consider Austria, the United States and Czechoslovakia as an easy ride into the second round.

"I know everyone says the same thing but teams like America for instance are playing their own World Cup final against us. You cannot afford to write off anyone any longer at international level."

MOSCOW (JUNE 7) - A gunman Thursday shot dead a Soviet militiaman and a public prosecutor near the Soviet Foreign Ministry here, Izvestia newspaper reported.

Special troops of the interior ministry captured the gunman, who was not named. His motive for the killings was being investigated, the evening paper said.

The man this morning had attacked militia sergeant Alexander Shevtsov, who had been on duty outside the ministry, seizing the guard's gun and shooting him dead.

The killer then forced his way into the nearby Dzerzhinsky district prosecutor's office and fatally shot prosecutor Valery Sevryugin.

Members of the prosecutor's office called the interior ministry troops who arrested the man.

MONROVIA (JUNE 7) - Liberia's President Samuel Doe said Thursday that he had no intention of fleeing the country in the face of a rebel offensive closing in on Monrovia.

A statement from his office denied that he had asked the United States or any other country for asylum and said he had asked no-one to seek political asylum on his behalf.

He had "no intention to leave or abandon the country in the face of the crisis", the statement said.

Rebels of the National Patriotic Front (NPFL) led by fugitive former civil servant Charles Taylor were reported Thursday to be within 40 kilometers (25 miles) of the capital.

U.S. State Department sources said Wednesday that several African countries had been approached to know if they would give asylum to Mr. Doe, who came to power in a bloody coup d'etat in 1980, when he was an army master-sergeant.

In Lagos Thursday, a source close to the federal government said Nigeria would welcome him if he wished to settle there.

Thursday's presidential statement in Monrovia also said Mr. Doe had set up a human rights group in Liberia to monitor and report on human rights abuses in the West African state.

LONDON (JUNE 7) - The British government on Thursday welcomed the decision by South African President Frederik de Klerk to lift the state of emergency in most parts of the country.

But a foreign office spokesman said London "regrets" that the measure was not rescinded in Natal Province and said Britain had no plans to ease economic sanctions against Pretoria for the time being.

"We don't contemplate any further unilateral moves at this stage," the spokesman said, adding that European Economic Community foreign ministers would review the Community's policy toward South Africa at a meeting later this month.

"A heavy responsibility now rests on political leaders on all sides in South Africa to help prevent violence," the spokesman said.

LUSAKA (JUNE 7) - President Kenneth Kaunda took Zambia a step closer to a promised referendum on multi-party rule Thursday with an announcement that he has named an electoral commission to work out mechanisms of the plebiscite.

Kaunda presented Deputy Chief Justice Matthew Ngulube as head of the commission and said the group would meet next week to discuss its operations and a likely date for Zambians to go to the polls.

The results of the referendum will determine whether Zambia will remain under single party rule, as favoured by the president, or switch to a multi-party system.

Kaunda also announced changes in the makeup of the powerful Central Committee of the United National Independence Party (Unip), the main decision-making body under Zambia's one-party socialist style of government.

The most spectacular shift was the droppping of Defence Minister Fredrick Hapunda, whom Kaunda criticised Thursday as ''ineffective... You do not run an army like that.''

Hapunda, a civilian, was appointed defence minister early 1988. He remains a member of Parliament.

Asked whether he was considering ending Zambia's state of emergency, as demanded by most multi-party advocates, Kaunda cited continued ''dangers'' from South Africa and said the time was not yet ripe for ending emergency rule.

Multi-party advocates fear they will not be able to air their views freely because of the state of emergency which has been in existence since Zambia gained independence in 1964.

PRAGUE (JUNE 7) - Former Czechoslovak Communist party leader Vasil Bilak was freed Thursday 48 hours after he was detained in the Slovak capital of Bratislava, Ctk news agency reported.

Bilak, a hardline communist, is regarded as one of the main supporters of the 1968 Warsaw Pact intervention that crushed the short-lived Prague Spring reform movement.

Ctk said 15 former members of the once notorious but now disbanded Stb secret police were being questioned by police Thursday. It did not elaborate.

Ctk said Bilak had been questioned among other things about ''communist aid'' to other communist parties abroad during his time in office.

MONROVIA (JUNE 7) - Armed soldiers harassed Mali's consul-general Assata Sylla Cisse, demanding money and a list of Malian residents in Liberia, she told journalists Thursday.

Mrs. Cisse said she had been approached close to her office overnight Wednesday by the soldiers. She refused to give them the list they wanted, but had to hand over 25 dollars.

The Liberian capital is insecure, particularly at night, with residents fearing an imminent offensive by rebels seeking to overthrow President Samuel Doe.

BANGKOK (JUNE 7) - A Chinese aircraft manufacturer has exhibited its light passenger plane in Rangoon, state-run Burmese radio said.

The exhibition of the 17-seater short-range aircraft was organized by Singapore-based Aircraft Services Ltd. and China's National Air Technology Export and Import Corp. at Rangoon's Mingladone airport, the radio said.

Senior Burmese military officials, who attended the opening ceremony of the exhibition Thursday, inspected the aircraft before it was flown in an air-show, the radio said in a report monitored here.

The aircraft is suited for multi-purpose applications in Burma, including short-range passenger and cargo transport, geological surveys as well as for spraying crops, the radio said.

It did not indicate whether Burma's military government would purchase the Chinese-built aircraft.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 7) - An Israeli Jew who admitted desecrating Jewish cemeteries in the northern port city of Haifa last month has been found "mentally irresponsible," court sources said Thursday.

Gershon Tennenbaum, 32, was arrested with 41-year-old David Goldner, who claimed to be the Messiah, after they were seen loitering in the Kfar Samir and Hof Ha Carmel cemeteries where 250 tombstones were defaced with anti-Israeli and anti-Semitic slogans.

The court agreed with the psychiatrists' assessment, after three weeks of observation, that Mr. Tennenbaum was mentally ill, the sources said.

Mr. Tennenbaum had acted out of his desire to unify Israel against the Arab states, newspapers quoted him as saying on May 17.

The desecration came two days after reports that 34 graves were profaned at the Jewish cemetery in Carpentras, southern France, and a corpse mutilated and impaled.

DAMASCUS (JUNE 7) - Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi ended Thursday a visit to Syria after meeting here with President Hafez al-Assad to discuss resolutions adopted at an Arab summit last week boycotted by Damascus, officials said.

Mr. Klibi's visit, which began Tuesday, was "aimed at involving Syria, the main frontline state with Israel, in the application of resolutions adopted by the Arab summit" in Baghdad last week, an Arab League source said.

Syria, which has longstanding ideological differences with Iraq, stayed away from the meeting, charging that it had been inadequately prepared.

Mr. Klibi had underlined in his talks here the "positive and constructive mood at the summit during debates on the Palestinian cause, Lebanon and the threats against Iraq and Libya," the source said.

He met Wednesday with Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Shara on preparing a conference of Arab foreign and economic ministers scheduled within the next two months.

ASUNCION (JUNE 7) - The Organization of American States (OAS), acting despite U.S. opposition, agreed Thursday to recommend abolition of the death penalty among its 32 member states.

A bid by some delegations at the annual OAS conference to pass a stronger resolution demanding an immediate end to capital punishment was quashed by the United States and Mexico during drawn out negotiations Wednesday and into Thursday morning, informed sources said.

Formal approval of the compromise was scheduled for Friday, with U.S. represenative Samuel Brock expected to express Washington's "reservations " the sources said.

During the lengthy debate on the issue, the U.S. delegation repeatedly expressed its strong opposition to the measure and defeated efforts to include a reference in the final resolution to the death penalty as "cruel inhuman and degrading punishment."

The United States is one of the last nations in the hemisphere in which convicted criminals are routinely executed.

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (JUNE 7) - At least five people were killed and several injured in an armed clash between alleged heroin smugglers and an anti-narcotics tribal force near here Thursday, official sources said.

The incident occurred in the semi-autonomous tribal area of Bara, a few kilometers (miles) west of here bordering Afghanistan, they said.

Members of the anti-drug force, created by the Afridi tribe last week, encircled the warehouse of Askar Khan, who refused to pay a fine of 100,000 rupees (more than 4,000 dollars) for allegedly smuggling heroin, they said.

The officials said four people from the anti-drug force and Askar Khan's father were among those killed during the ensuing clash, adding that Mr. Askar Khan escaped after the clash while one of his men was arrested.

On Wednesday, three heroin dealers were flogged publicly in Bara, they added.

Tonnes of poppy are grown annually in the northwestern tribal areas bordering Afghanistan. An unknown number of clandestine laboratories in these areas refine heroin from the opium which is derived from the poppy.

According to the local Newsline magazine, narcotics worth 90 billion dollars, which is 30 per cent of the world's 300 billion dollar drug trade, are trafficked through Pakistan.

Officials say that most of the drugs passing through Pakistan come from Afghanistan.

MORECAMBE, ENGLAND (JUNE 7) - Belgian Jan Bogaert notched up his fourth sprint victory to take the 10th stage of the Milk Race on Thursday, but Shane Sutton of Australia clung on to his yellow leader's jersey.

Sutton only just managed to avoid a pile-up one mile from the finish of Penrith to Morecambe stage and finished seventh in the 117 mile (188 kilometre) race.

But points leader Joey McLoughlin (Ever Ready-Halfords) clattered down with two team mates, Bernie Burns and Tony Doyle.

Another Belgian, Frank Hoste came second and East German amateur Frank Augustin was third in the same time.

Star of the stage was Serguei Zaroubine, of the Soviet Union, whose 114 mile lone breakaway through the Lake District reached a maximum lead of 15 mins 50 secs by half distance.

But he fell foul of the headwinds and was caught three miles from the line to finish 66th in 1 min 6 secs.

DAR ES SALAAM (JUNE 7) - Tanzanian finance minister Steven Kibona presented an unprecedented 43.1 percent 1990-91 deficit budget on Thursday, expecting external donations to finance a shortfall of 88,866 million Tanzanian shillings (467.7 million U.S. dollars).

Mr. Kibona told Parliament that total estimated government expenditures would be 206,000 million shillings (1,084.2 million dollars), although projected revenue would not exceed 117,134 million shillings (616.5 million dollars).

He said the 88.6-billion-shilling gap is expected to be funded by external donors that had pledged to finance the second phase of the country's Economic Recovery Programme (ERP), whose first five-year phase ends this month.

The huge deficit has been caused by a new minimum and fringe benefit to civil servants, part of President Ali Hassan Mwinyi's campaign to restore workers' morale and to fight rampant corruption in government.

Beginning next month, the minimum wage goes up by 20.5 percent, from 2,075 shillings (10.92 dollars) to 2,500 shillings (13.15 dollars).

The monthly transport and subsistence allowances for low-income workers are to rise to 700 shillings in Dar es Salaam and 300 shillings in other towns, while tax relief is raised by a substantial percentage for all categories of workers to enable them cope with raging inflation. Although officially estimated at 28 percent, it is actually nearing 60 percent a year.

Mr. Kibona, who took over the ministry last March from perennial holder Cleopa Msuya -- now heading the industry and trade ministry -- also announced tax relaxation in other traditional revenue sources such as estates, rents, petrol and capital gains.

Mr. Kibona also waived import taxes on all solar-energy equipment, such as cookers, to discourage rural populations from using fuel-wood (charcoal), consumption of which is depleting thousands of hectares of rain-fed forests annually.

Mr. Kibona said the thurst of his budget was consolidation of economic gains achieved under ERP in the last five years to enable the government to rehabilitate the social sector, including education, health and water supply, which had deteriorated sharply in the last decade.

From next month, Mr. Kibona said, the goverment's long-term policy would be to rehabilitate roads and telecommunications services, and the tempo will be maintained until they are all improved to meet internationally-accepted standards.

He also disclosed that the country's external debt stands at 8,100 million dollars, and consumes about 44 percent of Tanzania's foreign exchange earnings in service charges.

He noted, however, that some 175.2 million dollars in the form of loans had been written off recently by creditors, while 270 million dollars had been rescheduled to relieve Tanzania of debt payment pressure.

MUSCAT (JUNE 7) - Work has begun to develop the "Lekhwair" oil field, one of the oldest in the sultanate of Oman, as part of efforts to increase the country's oil and gas reserves, Omani television reported Thursday.

The Petroleum Development Oman organization, which produces more than 95 per cent of Oman's total crude output, has allocated 500 million dollars to increase the field's production from the current 24,000 barrels a day (bd) to 100,000 bd by 1994, the television said.

Once completed in 1995, the project is expected to boost the sultanate's gas reserves by four million cubic meters (1.4 million cubic feet). The development process includes the digging of 122 new wells.

Oman, which is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, produces about 600,000 bd and its oil reserves are estimated at 4.3 billion barrels.

Colonel Robert Guei replaced General Felix Ory whose deputy, General Gustave Houphouet Koasi, was given other, non-specified, functions, they said.

Colonel Guei was commander of the Korhogo military region, 600 kilometres (400 miles) north of Abidjan.

SINGAPORE (JUNE 7) - France's second-largest chemical company, Atochem, announced plans here Thursday to build a 30-million-U.S.-dollar polystyrene plant in Singapore.

The announcement came as a high-powered French business delegation wound up a visit to Singapore which included a meeting with Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew.

French Ambassador Bernard de Montferrand declined to give details of the meeting, but said Mr. Lee had shared his views on "the best way to do business in Singapore and the region."

Atochem, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Elf Aquitaine, which was represented on the delegation, said in a press statement that its new plant would produce some 45,000 tonnes of polystyrene a year when it comes on stream in mid-1992.

With a polystyrene compounding line, Atochem said it hoped to strengthen its share of the audiovideo market. Polystyrene may be used for packaging and in the manufacture of cassettes, toys and home electrical appliances.

Mr. de Montferrand told a news conference later that top business executives from some of the 17 French companies represented were discussing several other "serious projects" with their Singapore counterparts. No details were given.

Asked whether developments in Europe would affect France's position in Southeast Asia, Antoine Jeancourt-Galignani, chairman and chief executive officer of Banque Indosuez, said businesses would remain.

"We still consider Asian countries as an area where we should grow and should make a strategic investment for the future," he told reporters.

French exports to Singapore currently stand at slightly more than two billion Singapore dollars (one billion U.S.) a year, with French investment in Singapore at 1.6 billion (just under 800 million U.S.), the ambassador said.

BUCHANAN, LIBERIA (JUNE 7) - Government troops have recaptured the Firestone rubber plantation east of the Liberian capital Monrovia after rebels claimed have taken control Tuesday, informed sources said here said Thursday.

National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL) rebels, who are based in this port city 145 kilometers (90 miles) east of Monrovia, were fighting to regain control of the plantation and overrun the Schiefflin military camp some 25 kilometers (15 miles) from Monrovia.

The huge plantation, some 50 kilometers (35 miles), is the largest single private employer in Liberia and one of the world's largest plantations.

Government troops were also trying to reinforce positions at Harbel near Robertsfield, the West African country's only international airport 55 kilometers (35 miles) east of the capital, the sources said.

Western journalists here saw rebel reinforcements leaving for the combat zones with at least one 105-millimeter cannon and machine guns.

On Wednesday, Liberian Information Minister Emannuel Bowier told reporters in Monrovia that government forces were in full control of the Firestone plantation following shooting there Tuesday.

He gave no further details, but told journalists they could travel to Firestone to see for themselves. Journalists who tried to travel there were turned back at Camp Schiefflin after been told the road was "not safe."

This was the major first setback for the rebels, who launched their bid to oust President Samuel Doe last December in northeastern Nimba County near the Ivory Coast and Guinea and had marched to within 40 kilometers (25 miles) of Monrovia virtually unopposed.

On Sunday, the NPFL insurgents lost their key military strategist, U.S.-trained Elmer Glee Johnson, who was shot dead in a skirmish with government troops not far from Buchanan.

COPENHAGEN (JUNE 7) - The foreign ministers of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, will seek Friday to get their Baltic republics admitted as observers to the CSCE human rights conference here, informed sources said Thursday.

It is the first time the three ministers have got together abroad to make such a joint initiative, diplomats said.

Estonia's foreign minister Lennart Meri arrived in Copenehagen Thursday and was being joined later by Janis Yurkans of Latvia and Algirdas Saudargas of Lithuania.

They will give a joint press conference Friday under the aegis of the U.S. delegation. It will be held in the centre where the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe is being held, said the Baltic World Council, an organization of Baltic exiles in the United States sponsoring the move.

They will argue the case for Baltic participation in the CSCE process and discuss the Soviet Union's economic blockade against Lithuania.

On Sunday, Lithuania officially sought observer status at the conference but the application was refused by the Danish presidency on the grounds that it was unikely to get the needed consensus from the 35 CSCE members -- all of Europe without Albania plus the United States and Canada -- because of likely Soviet objections.

Danish sources said no new formal request had been made but well-informed sources said a new approach would be made Friday.

The sources said the three were likely to meet the same rejection, pointing out that no one wanted to poison the "excellent" atmosphere of the conference.

The chief aim of the ministers was to maintain pressure on the Soviet Union by drawing international attention to the Baltic situation, they said.

Several countries including Ireland, current president of the European Economic Community, raised the Baltic issue at the inaugural conference session here and called on Moscow to open negotiations with Lithuania over the independence issue.

PARIS (JUNE 7) - The Paris Bourse put an end Thursday to a string of five losing sessions by managing a slight rise of 0.25 percent, on the basis of the CAC-40 stock price index.

Operators said the Bourse has been worried the last few days about a stronger leftist influence in the ruling Socialist government. President Francois Mitterrand recently attacked inequalities and criticized people who "make money while they sleep", denouncing speculators on property and securities.

Operators are also concerned about possible higher taxes on capital gains.

Since May 29, the Bourse has lost almost four percent.

However, analysts said Thursday that statements to the National Assembly made Wednesday by Prime Minister Michel Rocard should help calm fears on the Bourse. Among other things, he said that "France cannot accept greater penalization of market activities without penalizing investments and the free circulation of capital".

Operators said that was the reason stock dumping has stopped, but "That doesn't mean people are again buying strongly".

CAGLIARI (JUNE 7) - England are warming up for their opening World Cup match against Ireland with only one fully fit goalkeeper after second string Chris Woods joined Peter Shilton on the sidelines.

Woods picked up what manager Bobby Robson called "a slight back injury" in training and was forced to sit out Thursday's session, leaving only David Seaman to stand between the posts.

"It's come at the wrong time as we're now nursing both goalkeepers," Robson said.

However, Shilton's injury is not giving cause for concern and at the moment there is almost no doubt that he will play against the Irish.

England's other injury problems, both to defenders, are easing. "Mark Wright is still wearing a soft collar on his neck and Paul Parker has started running and light kicking but we don;t want to hurry it. He's wearing a strap on his ankle and he's with that. other than that everybody's fine," said Robson.

However, Wright is a definite non-starter, even if he had been in Robson's plans, which seems unlikely.

"He can't head balls and anybody who plays against Ireland is going to have to head a few," the manager admitted.

It seems that he has already picked the team, which is unlikely to show more than one change from that which came so close to defeat against Tunisia last week, with Peter Beardsley taking up an extra striker's role and Steve Hodge, a disappointment in Tunis, stepping down.

Beardsley impressed with his three goals against a Sardinian Select XI in midweek, although even he admitted: "To score three goals is something, but in a practice game it doesn't really count as the oppostion is not the same standard."

Even so, Robson is keeping his cards close to his chest and will not announce the side until an hour before the match. "I've had a look at various options some of which were new, and I've now made my mind up what the team will be for Monday," he said.

ATHENS (JUNE 7) - The Bank of Greece reported on Thursday that the country suffered an "unprecedented" current account deficit of 2.52 billion dollars for the first four months of the year.

That is a jump of 186 percent from the 880-million-dollar shortfall recorded for the first four months last year.

The central bank said the increase was due particularly to fears of devaluation of the drachma that were widespread before the April 8 elections.

Imports rose by 24 percent in the four months by comparison with the same period last year, from 4.81 billion dollars to 5.97 billion, while exports were up by only one percent, from 1.96 billion dollars to 1.98 billion. The trade deficit rose by more than 39 percent, to 3.98 billion dollars.

Receipts on invisibles were down by nine percent, from 3.15 billion dollars to 2.86 billion.

CARACAS (JUNE 7) - Demonstrators clashed with police in Caracas and several other Venezuelan cities Thursday as tensions escalated for the eighth straight day over a pending hike in gasoline prices and the rising cost of living.

Police manned key positions in Caracas at daybreak, in preparation for a student-led march, while schools sent teachers and staff home and most businesses remained closed.

Scores of police patrols lined the main streets leading to the nearly deserted center of the capital.

Although the student demonstration proceeded without incident at 1 p.m. (1800 GMT), in one Caracas neighborhood schoolchildren set fire to a bus and threw rocks at police forces sent to disperse them.

Police reported several other clashes in the capital.

At Guarenas and El Guatire, suburbs east of Caracas, police threw tear gas and fired buckshot at students who were leaving school to return to home.

Violent clashes were also reported in Valencia, Barquisimeto, Merida and Maracaibo. In the southeastern city of Merida, the National Guard dispersed demonstrators who were burning a bus. A police officer was injured in Maracaibo, 500 kilometers (300 miles) west of Caracas, when he was hit in the head by a thrown rock.

Interior Minister Alejandro Izaguirre appealed for people to disregard "numerous rumors" that were circulating in the country and said only "a miniscule number of people" were involved in the violent demonstrations.

Wednesday more than 30 people were injured in clashes, notably in Los Teques, a suburb 22 kilometers (13 miles) south of Caracas.

Defense Minister Filmo Lopez said the army was "ready to act" alongside the police to maintain order.

The wave of protests stemmed from the announcement of the next increase in gasoline prices as part of an economic liberalization plan adopted by Social Democratic President Carlos Andres Perez in an agreement with the International Monetary Fund (IMF).

Violent outbursts have sporadically erupted since February 1989, when the government imposed austerity measures, including hikes in public transit fares and food prices, called for by the IMF agreement. Confrontations that month left 276 people dead.

LONDON (JUNE 7) - Amnesty International called Thursday on the Liberian government and the rebel National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL) to "stop killing non-combattants and prisoners in the escalating armed conflict".

In a statement here, the human rights organisation "urged governments worldwide, particularly those with influence over the Liberian government or the rebel forces, to use every effort to protect civilians and prisoners from violence and ill-treatment".

According to Amensty, the government forces were increasingly carrying out "summary executions" in the capital Monrovia. Most victims were members of the Gio and Mano ethnic groups, from which the rebels in the West African state have mainly drawn their forces.

On May 30, the statement recalled, government soldiers seized some 30 men, women and children from a United Nations compound where they had sought refuge. Several of them were reportedly found dead the next day.

Amnesty stated that more than 100 soldiers of the Gio and Mano tribes had been arrested Thursday, and expressed fear they would be executed.

On the rebel side, the statement said, members of the NPFL had summarily slaughtered sympathisers of the regime of President Samuel Doe, members of the president's Krahn ethnic group and members of the Mandingo Moslem community, at Buchanan and Kakata, after taking the two towns.

Hundreds of people are reckoned to have died since the rebels launched an offensive on December 24.

TURNBERRY, SCOTLAND (JUNE 7) - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze has told the United States that the Kremlin does not intend to curb the flow of Soviet Jewish emigrants to Israel, a U.S. official said Thursday.

President Mikhail Gorbachev, in a joint press conference on Sunday with President George Bush, said he had been "bombarded" by Arab complaints about the emigration, fearing it would spur Israeli colonisation of the West Bank and Gaza strip.

"Either our concern is heeded in Israel, and they will make certain concessions, or else we must give further thought in terms of what we do in issuing permits for visa," Mr. Gorbachev said.

A U.S. official said here Thursday that Mr. Shevardnadze had given private reassurances to U.S. Secretary of State James Baker in a two-hour meeting in Copenhagen on Tuesday.

Mr. Gorbachev's threat contrasted with "what Shevardnadze said the other night in private," the official said.

"What we've been hearing in private from them on immigration is not what we heard Gorbachev say at the press conference with the president," the official added.

Mr. Baker was attending a two-day meeting of North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) foreign ministers that opened Thursday at this scenic west coast Scottish resort.

He met with Mr. Shevardnadze on the sidelines of a meeting of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE).

LIMA (JUNE 7) - Nearly 250,000 police and troops were put on red alert throughout Peru Thursday to protect voters from possible terrorist attacks leading up to Sunday's presidential elections, police said.

About a third of the security forces have been mobilized in Lima with the rest fanned out over this South American country of 22 million people that has been locked in civil war for a decade.

Leftist Shining Path rebels have launched at least a dozen attacks since Tuesday, police said.

On Tuesday night, rebels bombed a radio staton in Huancavelica, 390 kilometers (240 miles) southeast of Lima in the Andean mountains and took over a radio station in nearby Ayacucho to broadcast warnings not to vote.

Assailants also threw gasoline bombs and explosives at the party headquarters of the Freedom Movement whose candidate, novelist Mario Vargas Llosa, will face off with Cambio 90 candidate Alberto Fujimori on Sunday.

Simultaneously, several registration offices were set ablaze and documents needed for Sunday's election went up in smoke. Police attributed that attack to another rebel group called the Tumpac Amaru Revolutionary Movement.

The Shining Path attacks are also considered a signal by authorities that despite the capture last week of at least 100 rebel followers, the group remains strong and unbowed.

Since the rebels formed their movment 10 years ago to topple the government through assassination, sabotage and intimidation, they have left some 15 billion dollars in damages and 18,000 dead.

BEIRUT (JUNE 7) - An underground group claimed responsibility Thursday for a rocket attack on the Romanian Embassy here, accusing Bucharest of having close ties with Israel and helping Jewish emigration.

The claim was made by the Revolutionary Action Organisation-Arab Resistance Front in a handwritten Arabic statement received by a Western news agency here.

Police said a passer-by was injured late Wednesday when a rocket was fired at the embassy building in Syrian-controlled west Beirut.

The attack caused minor damage to the building, which was empty of its usual staff of four diplomats and five Romanian employees, the embassy said.

One of the Romanian diplomats said no warning or threat had been received before the attack and activities at the embassy were continuing normally.

The Revolutionary Action Organisation had also claimed an attack by gunmen March 30 that wounded a Polish diplomat and his wife in west Beirut.

It warned Poland in its claim against "granting any help for the transportation of Soviet Jews to the holy land of Palestine."

Thursday's statement accused the "Romanian regime of maintaining privileged relations with the Zionist enemy and of facilitating Jewish emigration."

It also said that "Arab and Islamic anger will be felt by interests and institutions of Western countries" that help Israel.

Washington was singled out for its "unlimited and absolute support" for Israel "at the expense of our Palestinian brothers."

Bucharest, along with Budapest and Warsaw, is considered by Western diplomats as a main transit point for Soviet Jews emigrating in large numbers to Israel. Romania has never officially confirmed this.

Several underground groups, considered close to pro-Iranian fundamentalists, have threatened in recent months to mount attacks against the interests of Eastern bloc and other countries helping Soviet Jews emigrate to Israel.

In Jerusalem, the Jewish Agency, a semi-governmental body which handles Jewish immigration, said Thursday that 1.16 million Soviet Jews had asked to emigrate to Israel since January 1989 -- 715,000 of them during 1990.

A total of 250,000 new immigrants are expected in Israel this year.

Arab countries have expressed concern that the immigrants will be settled in the Israeli-occupied West Bank or Gaza Strip. Israeli officials say the new arrivals are free to live anywhere they wish.

LONDON (JUNE 7) - Former French president Valery Giscard d'Estaing and former West German chancellor Helmut Schmidt urged Thursday that the European Currency Unit (ECU) should be more widely used in the European Economic Community (EEC).

The ECU should be used in an initial phase alongside the Community's national currencies, and should then become its only currency, they said at the end of a meeting here.

They are the co-chairmen of the Committee for the Monetary Union of Europe, which was established in 1986 and groups 17 European figures. They were speaking in the Committee's name.

They also said they hoped that Britain would soon join the exchange stabilization mechanism of the European Monetary System (EMS).

Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Giscard d'Estaing said that the EEC should get ready for the second stage of the "Delors Plan" for monetary union by taking steps quickly to extend use of the ECU. It should be used by Community institutions for all transactions, and particularly in drawing up the budget, while central banks should push its use in intra-European payment systems, they said.

During the second Delors phase, which calls for a reduction of permissible fluctuation margins of national currencies within the EMS, the ECU would co-exist with those currencies, but it would later become the EEC's sole currency, the former French president emphasized.

He added that natural trends on currency markets were strengthening the Deutsche mark's weight in the EMS, and "If we do nothing, the EMS will move to a DM zone. Do we want a jointly managed currency, or this natural evolution?"

Mr. Schmidt expressed opposition to a mark zone widened to the whole EEC, which he called a "psychologically damaging process" and politically dangerous.

The Committee co-chairmen said they wanted sterling to join the exchange stabilization mechanism soon, if possible before next December, the date of a meeting of the EEC Council of Ministers in Rome that is supposed to launch the second phase of EEC economic and monetary union.

The British government favors such membership in principle, but only after sufficient reduction of the British inflation rate, and it has always refused to set a date for such membership.

WELLINGTON (JUNE 8) - A French nuclear test in the Tuamotu Archipelago in the South Pacific was recorded Friday by New Zealand's Department of Scientific and Industrial Research.

The department, in a statement, said its Seismological Observatory in Rarotonga, Cook Islands, 2,200 kilometres (1,350 miles) west of the test site, recorded a three kiloton blast at 1730 GMT Thursday.

The department said it believed the test site was at Mururoa.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) - A nuclear power plant in northeastern Lithuania with the same reactor design used at Chernobyl -- the site of the world's worst nuclear accident -- was shut down Thursday, Lithuanian officials said.

The plant was shut down by its automatic safety system for unknown reasons and operations were halted for at least two days while the incident is investigated, said the Washington office of the Lithuanian Information Center.

"During the course of normal functioning of the second reactor, for reasons unapparent for the time being, the shutdown system of the reactor became activated," said a statement from the Lithuanian Supreme Council in Vilnius, released by the information center here.

The shutdown will put a greater burden on Lithuania's energy production that is already under strain after the Soviet Union imposed a fuel embargo to pressure Lithuania to suspend its declaration of independence.

"Now the entire workload of electrical energy must be transferred to the regional electrical plant which is almost completely depleted of emergeency fuel resources," the council statement said.

The Ignalia nuclear power plant in northeastern Lithuania has two 1,500-megawatt reactors. The statement did not specify whether both were in operation when the plant was shut down.

The Ignalia reactors are the graphite-moderated, water-cooled design like the one used in the Chernobyl plant, a design consider antiquated by western standards.

The Chernobyl plant ran out of control and exploded on April 26, 1986, killing 31 people outright and forcing the evacuation of hundreds of thousands of others.

The meltdown dispersed highly radioactive fallout over thousands of square kilometers. The Chernobyl safey systems were not in operation at the time for unauthorized experiments.

JAKARTA (JUNE 8) - Indonesia has urged colleagues in the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) to keep oil output to levels pledged at the group's meeting last month in order to prop sagging world prices, the official Antara news agency said Friday.

Mines and Energy Minister Ginanjar Kartasasmita said the basket price of OPEC's main crudes plunged further to 14.85 dollars a barrel this week because some members were still producing above their pledged limits, Antara reported.

OPEC's 13 members agreed in Geneva last month to slash their combined production by 1.445 million barrels per day (BPD) from their estimated April level of 23.5 million BPD with the aim of bringing prices to their targeted level of 18 dollars a barrel from under 17 dollars.

"Once again, I would like to appeal to all OPEC members to make serious efforts to uphold the agreement," Mr. Ginanjar said, without naming members violating the pact.

He said he could understand some members not being satisfied with the current output arrangement, but added that with patience -- and once oil prices reached the 18 dollar level -- they could be given higher allocations.

The minister also announced his plan for an official visit to the United States from June 18 to meet U.S. energy officials and leaders of the oil industry, Antara said.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) - Mitsubishi Pencil Co., Japan's top writing instruments maker, said Thursday it has acquired the British stationery company, Royal Sovereign Ltd., for 8.6 million pounds (14.6 million dollars).

The Japanese company will use the British firm's sales network to sell its products in Britain while Royal Sovereign continues to sell stationery products under its own name and also the brand names Blick and Stephens.

Mitubishi Pencil, which was founded in 1896, has no connection with Japan's mammoth industrial group Mitsubishi despite its name. It had sales totaling 41.6 billion yen (273 million dollars) in the year to last March.

The Manchester-based Royal Sovereign reported annual sales of 8.6 million pounds (14.6 million dollars) last year, according to Mitsubishi.

Wiesbaden (JUNE 7) - West Germany achieved a 7.6 billion mark (4.52 billion dollar) foreign trade surplus in April, plunging from the March surplus of 13.4 billion marks, the Federal Office of Statistics said here Thursday.

The office said that exports in April slipped by 1.9 percent from the same month last year to 52.4 billion marks, while imports rose 2.8 percent to 44.8 billion marks.

For the first four months, West Germany's foreign trade surplus amounted to 44.5 billion marks, slightly below the 45.6 billion mark figure for the same period of 1989, the office said.

The balance on current accounts - comprising foreign trade, services, and capital transfers - showed a surplus in April of 5.7 billion marks, down from 10.4 billion in March.

For the first four months, the current accounts balance showed a 34.5 billion mark surplus, down from 39.1 billion marks in the same period last year.

MOGADISHU (JUNE 7) - Somalia's state-owned Commercial and Savings Bank has collapsed, but the government will reimburse account holders, Prime Minister Mohamed Ali Samater said.

Lieutenant-General Samater said the central bank would make cash payments to holders of savings and current accounts in the insolvent bank, Somalia's only commercial bank.

Small savers are to be compensated in full, while current account holders will be paid 20 percent of the balance of their accounts, he said in a letter to account holders this week.

Central bank governor Omer Ahmed Omer said the government would not bail out the bank, which is to be replaced by another government-funded bank, the Somali Commercial Bank, due to open next month.

The new bank will be privatised after a year, when the government will withdraw its initial capital of one billion Somali shillings (about 750,000 dollars), putting 1,000 shares up for sale, Mr. Omer said.

WELLINGTON (JUNE 7) - Air New Zealand's tax-paid profit for the year to March 31 was 100,954,000 New Zealand dollars (58,199,981 dollars U.S), up 38.5 percent on the previous year's result and well ahead of forecasts, the airline announced Thursday.

Its tax-paid profit in the March 1989 year was 72,868,000 dollars (42,008,402 U.S.).

Air New Zealand has maintained its promise of a 11.5 cents (6.6 cents U.S.) full-year dividend.

Revenue was up 10.4 percent on last year's but down 4.1 percent on the company's forecast.

Air New Zealand chairman Bob Matthews said revenue was down because of the Australian domestic pilots' strike and a dispute with its own pilots which has delayed the introduction of the new long range Boeing 747-400 jets.

Market forecasters had been picking a result of between 65 million dollars (37 million U.S.) and 90 million dollars (51 million U.S.). The result also exceeded the airline's own prospectus projection last year of 72 million dollars (41 million U.S.).

The profit figure included 28,707,000 dollars (16,549,585 U.S.) of abnormal items including the sale of a DC-8 freighter, a Boeing 737 and several properties.

Mr. Matthews said an encouraging factor was the growth in foreign exchange earnings which totalled 993.4 million dollars (572 million U.S.), a 21 percent improvement.

Hong Kong (JUNE 7) - Hong Kong Telecommunications, the largest local listed company on the stock exchange, announced a 20 percent profit rise on Thursday. Post-tax profits for the year ending March 31, 1990 rose to 4,360 million Hongkong dollars (559 million U.S.).

The increase was in line with market expectations and bodes well for the results of Britain's Cable and Wireless Plc. which has a 58.6 percent controlling stake in the Hong Kong company. Most analysts estimate that around 70 percent of the parent company's profits come from its Hong Kong subsidiary.

Michael Gale, the chief executive of Hongkong lecom, said talks had just begun with the government about the future of its monopoly franchise for the provision of domestic telecomunications services which expires in 1995. The international telephone monopoly expires in 2006.

It is widely believed that the Hong Kong government wishes to end the monopoly and introduce a greater element of competition in the telecommunications sector.

Meanwhile, Hongkong Telecoms revealed an 8,400 million Hongkong dollar (1.076 billion U.S.) investment programme for the next three years.

NAIROBI (JUNE 7) - A European Economic Community (EEC) official warned African nations Thursday that they faced economic "marginalisation" unless they strengthened the private sector.

Manuel Marin, European Commissioner for development and fisheries, on a three-nation tour of East Africa, urged African countries to move away from state-controlled economies.

"Africa must have a real private sector," Mr. Marin told a press conference here before leaving for Uganda.

"Otherwise, there is a real risk that Africa will be marginalised" as Western investors look to the new democracies of eastern Europe for new opportunities and the EEC boosts internal trade when it forms a single market in 1992.

Africa now accounts for only four percent of the EEC's external trade, he said, though African countries once ranked among Europe's major trading partners.

He stressed that the EEC, Africa's biggest single aid donor, was not about to divert funds from Africa into eastern Europe.

Over the next five years, the EEC has pledged to give the 69 African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) states 12 billion European Currency Units (14.5 billion dollars) in grants and aid, 95 percent of which will go to Africa.

Between 1985 and 1990, EEC aid to the ACP countries totalled some eight billion ECUs (9.5 billion dollars).

But Mr. Marin warned that in the medium term, there was a "real risk" of an exodus of European private investment from Africa, unless African countries rose to the challenge of restructuring their economies to give greater weight to the private sector.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 7) - Agriculture ministers from the EEC reached agreement Thursday to strengthen community measures against the spread of "mad cow disease", which is ravaging Britain's herd.

The package, it is hoped, will end a "beef war" that broke out with a ban on imports of British beef by France, West Germany, Italy and Portugal.

The accord, which was to be formalised later Thursday after approval by the European Economic Community's veterinary committeee, stipulates that all British beef exports be eviscerated, boned and stripped of nerve tissue to eliminate the parts of the animal thought most likely to carry the disease.

Whole carcasses would have to carry certificates stating they came from herds free of bovine spongeiform encephalitis (BSE) for the past two years.

A ban on exports of live animals older than six months and on all beasts born of infected cows remains.

Meanwhile, in France, a French expert warned on Thursday that French farmers had fed suspect meat feed to cattle, and that the disease could appear in France in coming months.

The expert at the French Federation National SOS Environment said: "France is not sheltered from this as our country has imported feed of this kind from England since 1988.

"Under these conditions it is possible that some cattle have been fed with this kind of feed...Since incubation and appearance of the disease can take from two to five years, mad cow disease risks appearing in France in coming months."

The French centre for managing feed (DGAL) said that meat-based feed from Britain accounted for about one per cent of feed fed to cattle in France, before it was banned more than six months ago.

Islamabad (JUNE 7) - Pakistan has proposed a meeting between the foreign secretaries of India and Pakistan this month to remove the causes of the tension between the two countries, a foreign office spokesman announced here Thursday.

Briefing reporters on Islamabad's response to the Indian set of proposals, the first official response by New Delhi to Pakistan's call for dialogue over Kashmir region, the spokesman said that although the list of seven proposals did not include the two central issues - talks on Kashmir and the heavy concentration of Indian troops along the borders - Pakistan was ready to engage in purposeful dialogue with India.

The proposals included measures like exchange of information on military exercises, regular contacts between military establishments, avoidence of air-space violations, exchange of delegations, and a call for reaffirmation of the Simla agreement, said the spokesman.

Some of the proposals, he added, had already been discussed at the secretaries level, but ''there is no difficulty in discussing them again as part of confidence building measures''.

Earlier, the adviser to Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto on national security and foreign affairs, Iqbal Akhund, had Tuesday called the Indian proposals ''a step in the right direction''. dpa wo 071410 jun 90

MOSCOW (JUNE 7) EFE - Eleven people were killed in new outbreaks of ethnic violence in the Soviet Central Asian republic of Kirghizia in the past 24 hours, bringing the death toll to 51 since rioting broke out four days ago, a Soviet Interior Ministry spokesman said Thursday.

Spokesman Dmitri Seleznyov said the worst clashes between indigenous Kirghiz and minority Uzbeks occurred Wednesday in the town of Uzgen, where rioters set fire to nine houses and several shops and 33 people were reported injured.

Earlier, attackers armed with automatic weapons tried unsuccessfully to seize control central police headquarters in the city of Osh to steal more arms, Seleznyov said. Five cars were set on fire during the incidents, he said.

Similar attacks were carried out against police stations in four other towns, including Uzgen, he said.

The clashes first broke out Monday in the region of Osh, near the Chinese border, after Kirghiz residents demanded that land granted to the Uzbeks be turned over to them for new housing.

Although the Uzbeks represent only about one-fifth of Kirghizia's four million inhabitants, they are a majority in Osh.

Most of Kirghizia has been placed under a state of emergency and Soviet troop reinforcements have been sent to the area.

SANTIAGO (JUNE 7) EFE - The widow of leftist Chilean president Salvador Allende, who died in the 1973 military coup, has denied a New York Times report that she accepted the military's long-standing claim that Allende committed suicide.

"I have always asserted my conviction that Salvador Allende was murdered by those who brutally took the presidential palace on the 11th of September 1973," Hortensia Bussi said in a written statement released to the news media in Santiago Wednesday.

The statement denied journalist Shirley Christian's report, published in The New York Times May 31, which said Bussi had accepted the military's claim that Allende shot himself through the head with a pistol given to him by Cuban leader Fidel Castro.

Allende's doctor, present at the time of his death, said that the leftist leader committed suicide, but his body was never seen by his family, the autopsy was carried out at a military hospital and murder by the Armed Forces has been widely alleged.

"Whoever killed Salvador Allende, nobody can deny the heroism of his death. This is very different to recognizing that he committed suicide," Bussi's statement went on.

"Salvador Allende is engraved in the hearts and minds of the Chilean people as a democrat who died defending his ideals. Nothing can sully his name or diminish the importance of the ideals which he always defended and for which he died."

Her conviction that Allende was murdered was, she said, reinforced by the discovery last week of a mass grave containing the bodies of 16 people, eight of them identified as detainees shot by the military after the coup led by Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

Some 700 people disappeared during Pinochet's 16-year rule and at least three other clandestine burial sites containing the remains of alleged victims of the military have been discovered since 1978.

VATICAN CITY (JUNE 7) EFE - Pope John Paul II held a private audience Thursday with the newly-appointed Soviet Ambassador to the Holy See, Yuri E. Karlov, the first such meeting in the Soviet Union's history.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro Valls described the 40-minute meeting in the Pope's private library as "very cordial".

The 53-year-old Karlov, who gave the Pope a formal letter of presentation accrediting him as extraordinary and plenipotentiary ambassador to the Holy See, spoke to the Pontiff in Italian and Russian.

The Pope and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev met in Rome in early December, paving the way for the announcement in mid-March that diplomatic representatives would be exchanged beteen the Vatican and Kremlin.

The papal representative to the Kremlin, Francesco Colasuonno, formally presented his credentials along with a personal letter from the Pope to Gorbachev on May 5.

When the ambassador exchange was announced in March, Navarro Valls stressed that it did not mean the establishment of full diplomatic relations, but rather "pre-full diplomatic relations".

The Holy See currently mantains full diplomatic relations only with the Eastern European countries of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania, although the last three have yet to appoint ambassadors.

The first nunciature opened in Russia in 1783 under Catherine the Great, and intermittent diplomatic contacts continued until the October Revolution.

The 1917 revolution did not see the complete severance of relations, and a Soviet representative remained in Rome until 1922, and a special mission of the Holy See stayed in the Soviet Union, mainly to distribute aid in the economically deteriorating country until 1923.

Of the 287 million people who live in the Soviet Union, 6.5 million say they are Roman Catholics and some five million, mostly Ukrainian, say they are Byzantine Rite Catholics.

MADRID (JUNE 7) EFE - Spain and Venezuela Thursday signed an economic cooperation accord designed to generate up to dlrs 4.2 billion of Spanish investments in the Latin American nation over the next four years.

Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez hailed the agreement, which he signed at a ceremony in Madrid with Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez as a rare example of European cooperation with Latin America.

The accord, similar to those Spain has signed with Mexico and Argentina in the past two years, will set aside dlrs 1.2 billion in Spanish credit for Venezuela, and will direct some dlrs 3 billion in investments by Spanish firms in development projects.

The leaders also signed several agreements on scientific and technological cooperation, and pledged to increase ministerial contacts between the two countries.

On last year's extradition treaty between Madrid and Caracas, both premiers agreed that applications for extradition should be dealt with by the countries' respective judicial systems without interference by the executive branches.

The treaty was motivated by the presence of several members of the armed Spanish Basque separatist group ETA in Venezuela.

Gonzalez said his Venezuelan counterpart "has always shown solidarity with our proposition to put an end to terrorist violence".

Perez, who arrived in Madrid Tuesday, is to return to Caracas Friday.

BOGOTA (JUNE 7) EFE - Suspected rightist paramilitary death squads have killed 12 peasants in separate attacks on two Colombian villages in the last 24 hours, officials said Thursday.

Gunmen raided the village of La Solicita in the western Antioquia province burst into a house and fired automatic weapons and lobbed grenades at its occupants, apparently members of the same family.

Two men, two women and two girls aged 10 and 12 died in the attack. Two other children were injured, police said.

Radio reports from the northwestern province of Cordoba said there was a similar mass killing there Thursday, but did not give further details.

Also on Thursday in Cordoba, leftist local government deputy Euclides Diaz Cuadrado, of the Popular Front party, was kidnapped in the town of Montelibano.

The Army has accused the Popular Front of being linked to the leftist "People's Liberation Army" guerrilla group.

Meanwhile, Army officers Thursday said counter-insurgency troops dismantled a left-wing rebel hospital and five rebel campsites.

They said three members of the pro-Cuban National Liberation Army (ELN) were arrested in the operation in the Alto Cusai rural zone, 500 km east of Bogota.

The ELN is the only leftist guerrilla group in the country to have ruled out the possibility of entering into peace talks with the government.

But another group, the Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces, have not met Bogota's conditions for entering the talks and the government last Friday authorized the Army to renew military operations against the group.

TURNBERRY, SCOTLAND (JUNE 7) XINHUA - BRITISH PRIME MINISTER MARGARET THATCHER OFFERED HER VIEW ON A FUTURE NATO UNDER THE NEW CIRCUMSTANCES OF DRASTIC CHANGES IN EASTERN EUROPE AND A SOVIET RETREAT AT THE NATO FOREIGN MINISTERS' CONFERENCE AT THE SCOTTISH VILLAGE OF TURNBERRY WEDNESDAY.

THE TASK OF THE MEETING AND THE LONDON NATO SUMMIT NEXT MONTH IS TO "STRIKE THE RIGHT BALANCE BETWEEN PRESERVING THE ESSENTIALS OF NATO AND ADAPTING IT TO NEW CIRCUMSTANCES," THE PRIME MINISTER SAID.

SHE REAFFIRMED THE NECESSITY OF PRESERVING NATO'S PRINCIPLES -- SECURE AND COLLECTIVE DEFENSE, U.S. PRESENCE IN EUROPE AND NUCLEAR DETERRENCE.

IT IS BECAUSE THERE WILL STILL BE TURBULENCE AND UNCERTAINTY IN THE FUTURE AND THE SOVIET UNION STILL HAS A FORMIDABLE MILITARY CAPABILITY, SHE SAID.

THATCHER DECLARED THAT A UNITED GERMANY SHOULD BE A FULL MEMBER OF NATO BECAUSE IT IS A VERY IMPORTANT PART OF A SECURE EUROPE.

SHE AGREED THAT MOSCOW IS CONCERNED WITH THE GERMAN PROBLEM AND SUGGESTED A TRANSITIONAL ARRANGEMENT FOR THE SOVIET FORCES IN EAST GERMANY TOGETHER WITH OTHER SAFEGUARDS TO MEET SOVIET CONCERNS.

THATCHER SUGGESTED THAT NATO SHOULD ADAPT ITSELF TO THE NEW SITUATION IT FACES IN SOME ASPECTS.

ONE IS TO MAKE NATO THE MAIN FORUM FOR TRANSATLANTIC DIALOGUE AND GIVE GREATER WEIGHT TO POLITICAL CONSULTATION ON WIDER WORLD PROBLEMS.

THE OTHER IS "TO HELP THE EASTERN EUROPEAN COUNTRIES FEEL MORE SECURE." THE PRIME MINISTER SAID NATO COULD HELP BUILD UP THE CONFERENCE ON SECURITY AND COOPERATION IN EUROPE (CSCE) AS THE BODY WITHIN WHICH POLITICAL AND SECURITY ISSUES AFFECTING EUROPE AS A WHOLE CAN BE DISCUSSED.

THE CSCE COULD PROVIDE A "FRAMEWORK OF GROWING TRUST AND CONFIDENCE WHICH WILL MAKE BOTH EAST AND WEST FEEL MORE SECURE," SHE ADDED.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - HITACHI LTD. SAID THURSDAY IT HAS DEVELOPED A PROTOTYPE 64-MEGABIT DYNAMIC RANDOM-ACCESS MEMORY (DRAM) CHIP, WHICH IT SAID MAKES IT THE FRONT-RUNNER IN THE RACE TO DEVELOP A NEXT-GENERATION MEMORY CHIP.

HITACHI SAID THE PROTOTYPE, WHICH IT SAYS IS THE FIRST OF ITS KIND IN THE WORLD, IS CAPABLE OF HOLDING DATA EQUIVALENT TO 256 NEWSPAPER PAGES, OR ONE HOUR OF SOUND RECORDED ON A COMPACT DISC.

FUJITSU LTD. AND NEC CORP., TWO OTHER MAJOR CHIP MAKERS, HAVE ALREADY ANNOUNCED THEY HAVE DEVELOPED KEY TECHNOLOGIES FOR PRODUCTION OF 64-MEGABIT DRAMS.

HITACHI SAID IT PLANS TO BEGIN COMMERCIAL PRODUCTION IN 1995. DRAM CHIPS ARE ALREADY AVAILABLE IN FOUR-MEGABIT CAPACITY, OR THE EQUIVALENT OF ABOUT 16 NEWSPAPER PAGES.

HITACHI ALSO ANNOUNCED THE DEVELOPMENT OF A TECHNOLOGY THAT REDUCES POWER CONSUMPTION OF DRAMS, PAVING THE WAY FOR PRODUCTION OF MORE POWERFUL NOTEBOOK-SIZE LAPTOP COMPUTERS THAT WOULD BE POWERED BY A SINGLE DRY CELL.

THE TECHNOLOGY MAKES IT POSSIBLE FOR DRAMS TO OPERATE ON 1.5 VOLTS OF ELECTRICITY, COMPARED WITH THE FIVE VOLTS AT PRESENT NEEDED TO RUN DRAMS, IT SAID.

THE SAMPLE 64-MEGABIT DRAM, COUPLED WITH THE POWER-SAVING TECHNOLOGY, CAN BE USED IN HIGH-TECHNOLOGY PRODUCTS SUCH AS HIGH-DEFINITION TELEVISIONS, ULTRACOMPACT TAPE RECORDERS, AND ELECTRONIC STILL CAMARAS.

U.S. AMBASSADOR ARMACOST PRESSES JAPAN TO OPEN RICE MARKET

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - U.S. AMBASSADOR TO JAPAN MICHAEL ARMACOST PRESSED JAPAN ON THURSDAY TO OPEN ITS MARKET TO RICE IMPORTS, SAYING FAILURE TO DO SO THREATENS THE INTERNATIONAL FREE TRADE SYSTEM.

ARMACOST TOLD A GATHERING OF JAPANESE PARLIAMENTARY VICE MINISTERS THAT THE UNITED STATES EXPECTS PROGRESS ON THE RICE ISSUE AT THE URUGUAY ROUND OF MULTILATERAL TRADE NEGOTIATIONS WHICH END THIS YEAR, DEPUTY CHIEF CABINET SECRETARY TADAMORI OHSHIMA SAID.

"IF AN EXCEPTION IS MADE FOR (JAPANESE RICE), INTERNATIONAL RULES WON'T WORK," ARMACOST WAS QUOTED AS TELLING SOME TWO-DOZEN VICE MINISTERS DURING A 90-MINUTE MEETING.

"THIS IS ONE OF THE MAJOR ECONOMIC ISSUES THAT IS IMPORTANT TO RESOLVE FOR THE SAKE OF OUR GLOBAL PARTNERSHIP,'' OHSHIMA QUOTED HIM AS SAYING.

THE AMBASSADOR ADDED THAT THE URUGUAY ROUND UNDER THE GENERAL AGREEMENT ON TARIFFS AND TRADE (GATT) WILL BE AN IMPORTANT STEP TO CREATING A NEW GLOBAL FREE-TRADE SYSTEM AND SAID THAT GATT MEMBER-COUNTRIES WOULD HAVE TO MAKE SACRIFICES TO MAKE THE URUGUAY ROUND A SUCCESS.

BUT THE VICE MINISTERS SAID IT WOULD BE DIFFICULT FOR JAPAN TO LIBERALIZE ITS RICE MARKET BECAUSE RICE IS OF SPECIAL CULTURAL AND ECONOMIC SIGNIFICANCE TO JAPAN, OHSHIMA SAID.

HE ADDED, HOWEVER, THAT JAPAN CONCURS WITH THE UNITED STATES THAT THE MATTER SHOULD BE DISCUSSED UNDER THE URUGUAY ROUND.

RICE, ALREADY A SYMBOL OF STRAINED TRADE TIES BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES, TOOK ON EVEN GREATER SIGNIFICANCE LAST MONTH WHEN JAPANESE AGRICULTURE, FORESTRY, AND FISHERIES MINISTER TOMIO YAMAMOTO DESCRIBED U.S. MARKET OPENING DEMANDS AS INTERFERENCE IN JAPANESE DOMESTIC AFFAIRS.

HIS COMMENT DREW A LETTER OF PROTEST FROM U.S. AGRICULTURE SECRETARY CLAYTON YEUTTER.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - THE HOUSE OF COUNCILLORS PASSED A LAW THURSDAY ALLOWING FOR THE ISSUE OF 3.5 MILLION 100,000-YEN GOLD COINS TO COMMEMORATE THE ENTHRONEMENT OF EMPEROR AKIHITO THIS NOVEMBER.

ALL PARTIES, RULING AND OPPOSITION, WERE IN AGREEMENT WITH THE LEGISLATION EXCEPT THE JAPAN COMMUNIST PARTY.

TO ENSURE THAT THE NEW COINS CANNOT BE COUNTERFEITED, THE FINANCE MINISTRY EARLIER ANNOUNCED PLANS TO GIVE THE COINS A GLOSSY FINISH AND A MORE ELABORATE AND DIFFICULT-TO-COPY DESIGN.

JAPANESE AUTHORITIES HAVE ALLEGED THAT SOME 105,000 SIMILAR GOLD COINS DISCOVERED EARLIER THIS YEAR ARE FORGERIES OF COINS ISSUED IN 1986 TO COMMEMORATE THE 60TH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF THE LATE EMPEROR SHOWA.

BRITISH COIN DEALER PAUL DAVIES AND COIN EXPERT E.G.V. NEWMAN, DIRECTOR OF THE INTERNATIONAL NUMISMATIC ANTIFORGERY BUREAU, IN BRITAIN HAVE ARGUED THAT THE SO-CALLED "HIROHITO COINS" ARE GENUINE.

DAVIES HAS FURTHER ALLEGED A JAPANESE GOVERNMENT COVER-UP. THE COINS DUE TO BE ISSUED THIS NOVEMBER WILL BE 33 MILLIMETERS IN DIAMETER, THREE MILLIMETERS LARGER THAN THE 1986 COINS, AND THEIR GOLD CONTENT WILL BE INCREASED TO 30 GRAMS FROM THE PREVIOUS 20 GRAMS.

THE 40,000 YEN DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE VALUE OF THE GOLD CONTENT OF THE HIROHITO COINS AND THEIR 100,000-YEN FACE VALUE HAS BEEN OFFERED AS ONE REASON THE COINS WOULD BE AN INVITING TARGET FOR WOULD-BE COUNTERFEITERS.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - THE MINISTRY OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY (MITI) WILL DRAW UP GUIDELINES FOR SHORTER WORKING HOURS TO NARROW THE DIFFERENCE WITH OTHER INDUSTRIAL COUNTRIES, MITI SAID IN A REPORT THURSDAY.

THE REPORT, COMPILED BY A COMMITTEE ADVISING THE DIRECTOR GENERAL OF MITI'S INDUSTRIAL POLICY BUREAU, IS AN APPARENT RESPONSE TO MINISTRY'S FRUSTRATION OVER RECENT DELAYS IN IMPLEMENTING SHORTER WORKING HOURS.

IT SAID AVERAGE ANNUAL WORKING HOURS IN JAPAN HAVE HOVERED AT AROUND 2,100 HOURS OVER THE PAST 15 YEARS WITH NO SIGN OF A SHORTENING.

JAPAN'S 1988 FIGURE OF 2,189 HOURS COMPARES WITH 1,953 HOURS IN THE UNITED STATES AND 1,642 HOURS IN WEST GERMANY.

THE MINISTRY FURTHER SAID THE PICTURE DIFFERS SUBSTANTIALLY BETWEEN INDUSTRIES.

AVERAGE WORKING HOURS IN MANUFACTURING IN 1989 WERE 2,152, WHILE IN THE FINANCE AND INSURANCE INDUSTRY IT WAS 1,862 HOURS.

THE MINISTRY SAID THAT TO FURTHER ITS POLICY OF PROMOTING SHORTER WORKING HOURS MORE SUITED TO THE WORKING CONDITIONS IN EACH INDUSTRY, IT IS IMPORTANT TO DRAW UP DIFFERENT GUIDELINES FOR EACH INDUSTRY.

THE REPORT EMPHASIZED THAT TO ACHIEVE ITS GOAL WOULD REQUIRES COOPERATION WITHIN EACH INDUSTRY SECTOR.

SUCH COOPERATION SHOULD INCLUDE SIMULTANEOUS HOLIDAYS AND CHANGES IN THE WAY OF ISSUING ORDERS TO SUBCONTRACTORS, IT SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - CHORI CO., A MEDIUM-SIZED TRADING HOUSE, SAID THURSDAY IT HAS RECEIVED A LETTER OF CREDIT (LC) FROM THE LITHUANIAN REPUBLIC OF THE SOVIET UNION FOR EXPORTS OF HOUSEHLD KNITTING MACHINES TO THE REPUBLIC IN LATE MAY.

THE LC WILL GUARANTEE PAYMENT OF ABOUT 80,000 DOLLARS FOR 210 KNITTING MACHINES MADE BY BROTHER INDUSTRIES LTD. AND EXPORTED BY THE OSAKA-BASED COMPANY.

CONCERNED ABOUT THE UNSTABLE ECONOMIC SITUATION IN THE BREAKAWAY REPUBLIC, WHICH HAS BEEN SUFFERING FROM AN ECONOMIC BLOCKADE IMPOSED BY MOSCOW, CHORI HAD REQUESTED LITIMPEKS, A LITHUANIAN PUBLIC TRADE CORPORATION, TO ISSUE AN LC.

THIS IS THE FIRST LC ISSUED BY A SOVIET PUBLIC AGENCY IN MORE THAN 10 YEARS.

COMPANY OFFICIALS SAID CHORI, WHOSE TRADE WITH THE SOVIET UNION TOTALED ABOUT 20 BILLION YEN IN THE YEAR TO MARCH 31, WILL CONTINUE TO DEMAND LCS FOR FUTURE TRANSACTIONS WITH THE SOVIET UNION.

MEANWHILE, SUMITOMO CORP. SAID THE COMPANY HAS ALSO BEEN GIVEN AN LC BY THE SOVIET UNION FOR ITS SCHEDULED SHIPMENT OF GENERAL-PURPOSE PLASTICS WORTH SOME HUNDREDS OF MILLION YEN, WHILE MITSUBISHI CORP. SAID IT WILL GET LCS FOR DEALS WITH THE COUNTRY STARTING IN JULY.

INDUSTRY SOURCES SAID SUCH MOVES REFLECT A SOVIET WISH TO INVIGORATE TRADE WITH JAPAN, WHICH HAS BEEN SLOWING RECENTLY DUE TO RECURRENT PAYMENT DELAYS BY THE SOVIETS.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - IBM JAPAN LTD. ANNOUNCED THURSDAY THE START OF QUANTITY PRODUCTION OF 4-MEGABIT DYNAMIC RANDOM ACCESS (4M DRAM) CHIPS, USING 8-INCH SILICON WAFERS.

A SINGLE 4M DRAM CAN HOLD INFORMATION EQUIVALENT TO ABOUT 64 PAGES OF A STANDARD ENGLISH-LANGUAGE NEWSPAPER LIKE THE NEW YORK TIMES, A VOLUME THAT WOULD REQUIRE FOUR 1M DRAMS, CURRENTLY THE MAIN MEMORY CHIPS.

PRODUCTION HAS STARTED AT ITS MAIN PLANT IN YASU, SHIGA PREFECTURE, CENTRAL JAPAN.

MAJOR JAPANESE CHIP MAKERS USE 5- OR 6-INCH SILICON WAFERS IN 4M DRAM PRODUCTION, BUT IBM JAPAN IS USING 8-INCH WAFERS, WITH ABOUT 300 4M DRAM CHIPS BEING PRODUCED FROM EACH WAFER, TREBLE THE NUMBER PRODUCED FROM THE 5-INCH WAFER, THE OFFICIALS SAID.

THE 4M DRAMS, PRODUCED AT THE YASU PLANT, ARE ALL INTENDED FOR INSTALLATION IN GIANT COMPUTERS, WORKSTATIONS AND PERSONAL COMPUTERS BEING MANUFACTURED AT YASU AND AT OTHER PLANTS OF THE JAPANESE SUBSIDIARY OF INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS MACHINES CORP. (IBM).

THE OFFICIALS, HOWEVER, REFUSED TO REVEAL THE PRODUCTION SCALE OF THE NEW CHIPS.

THE NEW IBM JAPAN MOVE IS NOT LIKELY TO HAVE ANY MAJOR DIRECT EFFECT ON THE LOCAL CHIP MARKET. HOWEVER, IT MAY HAVE SOME EFFECT ON 4M DRAM PRICE COMPETITION AMONG THE MANUFACTURERS, INDUSTRY ANALYSTS SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - JAPAN WILL OFFER THE SOVIET UNION ITS MEDICAL EXPERIENCE IN THE EFFECTS OF A NUCLEAR BLAST IN A RELIEF PROJECT NEAR THE SITE OF THE CHERNOBYL NUCLEAR POWER PLANT MELTDOWN, FOREIGN MINISTRY SOURCES SAID THURSDAY.

THE AID IS IN LINE WITH JAPAN'S COOPERATION WITH AN INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY (IAEA) PLAN TO ESTABLISH A RESEARCH CENTER IN THE SOVIET UKRAINE CITY. IT WILL INCLUDE SENDING A GROUP OF DOCTORS SPECIALIZING IN THE TREATMENT OF DISEASES CAUSED BY RADIOACTIVITY AND THE DONATION OF MEDICINE.

THE SOURCES SAID JAPAN INTENDS TO JOIN THE IAEA PROJECT, TO HELP MAP OUT THE FINAL BLUEPRINT FOR THE PROJECT BY THE YEAR'S END.

THE INTERNATIONAL CENTER WILL BE THE SITE FOR RESEARCH WITH SOVIET EXPERTS ON THE EFFECTS OF RADIOACTIVITY ON THE HUMAN BODY AND THE ENVIRONMENT.

JAPAN WILL GIVE FINANCIAL AND PERSONNEL ASSISTANCE TO THE IAEA PLAN AFTER CONSULTING WITH WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION (WHO) SECRETARY GENERAL HIROSHI NAKAJIMA, THE SOURCES SAID.

NAKAJIMA WILL VISIT THE SOVIET UNION NEXT WEEK AT THE INVITATION OF SOVIET PREMIER NIKOLAI RYZHKOV.

THE SOVIET UNION HAS ASKED JAPAN FOR ITS HELP IN THE AFTERMATH OF THE 1986 ACCIDENT AT CHERNOBYL. THE REQUEST INCLUDES TREATMENT IN JAPAN OF PEOPLE SUFFERING THE EFFECTS OF THE FALLOUT.

JAPAN SUFFERED THE WORLD'S FIRST ATOMIC BOMB ATTACKS BY THE UNITED STATES IN AUGUST 1945 IN HIROSHIMA AND NAGASAKI, LEADING TO ITS SURRENDER IN WORLD WAR II. JAPAN HAS SINCE STOCKPILED THE RESULTS OF ITS RESEARCH AND TREATMENT OF A-BOMB SURVIVORS AND THE EFFECTS ON THE ENVIRONMENT.

THE SOVIET UNION IS EXPECTED TO FILE A RESOLUTION WITH A JULY SESSION OF THE UNITED NATIONS ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL, CALLING ON U.N. SECRETARY GENERAL JAVIER PEREZ DE CUELLAR TO SEND A FACT-FINDING MISSION TO CHERNOBYL AND TO REPORT ITS FINDINGS TO A GENERAL ASSEMBLY SESSION IN THIS FALL, THE SOURCES SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - JAPAN WILL REJECT FRESH U.S. REQUESTS IN BILATERAL TRADE TALKS WHICH URGE JAPAN TO SPECIFY THE AMOUNT OF PLANNED PUBLIC WORKS SPENDING IN TERMS OF A RATIO TO ITS GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT (GNP), GOVERNMENT SOURCES SAID THURSDAY.

A TOP GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL SAID JAPAN'S BASIC POLICY IS CONTAINED IN AN INTERIM REPORT ON THE STRUCTURAL IMPEDIMENTS INITIATIVE (SII) ANNOUNCED IN APRIL AND THAT JAPAN WILL NOT ACCEPT FURTHER U.S. DEMANDS.

JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES ARE SCHEDULED TO HOLD THE NEXT ROUND OF SII TALKS IN TOKYO JUNE 25-26 TO WORK OUT A FINAL REPORT. THE SII TALKS ARE AIMED AT ELIMINATING STRUCTURAL BARRIERS TO TRADE AND INVESTMENT.

DURING UNOFFICIAL TALKS IN HAWAII ON MAY 23-24, THE UNITED STATES CALLED ON JAPAN TO BOOST ITS PUBLIC SPENDING TO 9 PERCENT OF ITS GNP OVER A FIVE-YEAR PERIOD FROM 6.7 PERCENT IN 1988.

JAPAN HAS AGREED IN THE INTERIM REPORT TO IMMEDIATELY START FORMULATING A NEW COMPREHENSIVE PLAN FOR PUBLIC INVESTMENT FOR THE NEXT 10 YEARS AND SPECIFY THE AGGREGATE AMOUNT OF EXPENDITURE DURING THE PERIOD.

THE U.S. HAS PROPOSED THE TWO COUNTRIES COMPILE ANNUAL REPORTS TO COPE WITH POSSIBLE NEW STRUCTURAL FRICTIONS. IT ALSO CALLED ON JAPAN TO HOLD CONSULTATIONS FOUR TIMES IN 1991 AND TWICE ANNUALLY THEREAFTER TO MONITOR THE IMPLEMENTATION OF STRUCTURAL REFORMS IN JAPAN.

THE TOP OFFICIAL, SPEAKING ON CONDITION OF ANONYMITY, SAID IT WILL BE BETTER FOR PRIME MINISTER TOSHIKI KAIFU TO MEET U.S. PRESIDENT GEORGE BUSH IN EARLY JULY IF A FINAL REPORT ON SII IS TO BE COMPILED BEFORE THE SUMMIT TALKS.

KAIFU IS SCHEDULED TO MEET BUSH BEFORE ATTENDING THE HOUSTON SUMMIT OF SEVEN MAJOR ECONOMIC POWERS ON JULY 9-11.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - FIVE OF SIX MAJOR JAPANESE GENERAL TRADING COMPANIES SAID THURSDAY THEY POSTED RECORD CONSOLIDATED NET INCOME IN THE YEAR ENDED MARCH 31.

ALL OF THE SIX HAD RECORD CONSOLIDATED SALES. THE SIX ARE MITSUI AND CO. C. ITOH AND CO., MITSUBISHI CORP., SUMITOMO CORP., MARUBENI CORP. AND NISSHO IWAI CORP.

THEIR COMBINED CONSOLIDATED NET PROFITS REACHED 233.8 BILLION YEN, EXCEEDING THEIR UNCONSOLIDATED NET PROFITS OF 142.2 BILLION YEN BY A WIDE MARGIN OF 64 PERCENT.

IF SALES OF "GOLD TRADING ACCOUNTS," A RECENTLY DEVELOPED FINANCIAL INSTRUMENT ON WHICH A TRADING FIRMS' PROFIT IS VERY SMALL, ARE INCLUDED, SUMITOMO LED IN CONSOLIDATED SALES WITH 22.6 TRILLION YEN, UP 52.3 PERCENT. IF THE ''GOLD TRADING ACCOUNTS'' ARE NOT INCLUDED IN THE EQUATION, MITSUI LED WITH 19.6 TRILLION YEN, UP 16.4 PERCENT.

IN GROUP NET, MITSUBISHI WAS THE LEADER WITH 60.3 BILLION YEN, UP 30.8 PERCENT.

THE NUMBER OF SUBSIDIARIES AND AFFILIATES COVERED BY THE CONSOLIDATED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS OF THE SIX TOTALED 2,923 FIRMS, AN INCREASE OF 365 OVER THE PREVIOUS YEAR. THE NUMBER OF SUBSIDIARIES IN THE INFORMATION AND COMMUNICATIONS FIELD HAS SHOWN AN OUSTANDING INCREASE.

THE GROUP NET OF MARUBENI AND ITS 461 SUBSIDIARIES AND AFFILIATES MORE THAN DOUBLED THE UNCONSOLIDATED NET OF THE COMPANY.

EXCLUDING THE TEMPORARY LOSS WHICH MITSUI INCURRED AS A RESULT OF ITS WITHDRAWAL FROM THE WAR-DAMAGED PETROCHEMICAL COMPLEX PROJECT IN IRAN, THE NET PROFIT EARNED BY ITS 571 SUBSIDIARIES AND AFFILIATES ALREADY EXCEEDED THAT OF THE PARENT FIRM ALONE.

TRADING GIANTS ARE LIKELY TO INCREASE THE SEPARATION OF THEIR HIGH-TECH AND NEW SERVICE SECTIONS FROM THEMSELVES TO BOOST THEIR MANAGEMENT EFFICIENCY. THEY ARE ALSO DEEMED LIKELY TO BUILD UP THEIR INVESTMENTS IN OVERSEAS ENTERPRISES.

OVERALL, MAJOR TRADING COMPANIES CAN BE SAID TO HAVE ENTERED THE AGE OF GROUP MANAGEMENT, ANALYSTS SAID.

THE SIX FIRMS' CONSOLIDATED SALES AND NET PROFITS IN FISCAL 1989 WERE AS FOLLOWS (IN L BILLION YEN; FIGURES IN BRACKETS SHOW PERCENTAGE CHANGES FROM THE PREVIOUS YEAR):

	SALES	NET PROFIT
MITSUI	19,507(16.4)	36(-9.7)
C. ITOH	18,725(18.2)	35(15.4)
MITSUBISHI	18,523(18.4)	60(30.8)
SUMITOMO	18,230(25.4)	50(42.4)
MARUBENI	17,294(18.6)	34(17.6)
NISSHO IWAI	13,382(24.5)	18(41.7)

NOTE: SALES DO NOT INCLUDE SALES OF "GOLD TRADING ACCOUNTS," A RECENTLY DEVELOPED FINANCIAL INSTRUMENT.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - SEVEN JAPANESE LEFTIST RADICALS WHO HIJACKED AN AIRLINER TO NORTH KOREA IN 1970 HAVE FORMED A NEW MAGAZINE AND INDICATED THEIR DESIRE TO RETURN TO JAPAN FROM EXILE THERE, INFORMED SOURCES SAID THURSDAY.

THE JAPANESE SECURITY POLICE ARE KEENLY INTERESTED IN THE NEW DEVELOPMENT, LED BY JAPANESE RED ARMY MEMBER TAKAMARO TAMIYA, 47, IN WHAT APPEARS TO BE THE RADICALS' LATEST SIGNAL OF THEIR HOPE FOR A HOMECOMING, THE SOURCES SAID.

ONE OF THE ORIGINAL GROUP OF NINE HIJACKERS, YASUHIRO SHIBATA, 37, WAS ARRESTED IN JAPAN IN 1988 AFTER SECRETLY RETURNING HOME.

THE SOURCES TOLD KYODO NEWS SERVICE THAT TAMIYA'S SEVEN-MEMBER GROUP HAS RECENTLY SENT LETTERS TO JAPANESE SUPPORTERS SAYING THAT ON MAY 6 THIS YEAR, THE SECOND ANNIVERSARY OF SHIBATA'S ARREST, THEY FORMED A NEW MAGAZINE BY CHANGING THE NAME AND POLICY OF THEIR FORMER ONE.

THEY PLEDGED TO BE MORE "IDEOLOGICAL" IN THE NEW MAGAZINE, CALLED "JISHU TO DANKETSU (AUTONOMY AND SOLIDARITY)," WHICH WILL BE CIRCULATED TWICE A YEAR AFTER BEING PRINTED IN NORTH KOREA, THE SOURCES SAID.

TAMIYA STARTED THE FORMER MAGAZINE "NIHON O KANGAERU (THINKING OF JAPAN)" IN 1981, WHICH WOUND UP WITH ITS 30TH VOLUME LAST FEBRUARY.

A GROUP OF NINE JAPANESE RED ARMY MEMBERS, ARMED WITH PISTOLS AND JAPANESE SWORDS, HIJACKED A JAPAN AIRLINES BOEING 727 IN 1970 AND FLED TO PYONGYANG IN THE FIRST HIJACKING INCIDENT IN JAPAN. ONE OF THEM LATER DIED FROM AN ILLNESS.

SHIBATA, WHO WAS A TEENAGER AT THE TIME OF THE HIJACKING, SECRETLY CAME BACK TO JAPAN UNDER AN ASSUMED IDENTITY TWO YEARS BEFORE HE WAS FINALLY ARRESTED.

THE MEMBERS OF TAMIYA'S GROUP HAVE BEEN INDICTED AND CONVICTED IN JAPAN ON HIJACKING CHARGES "IN ABSENTIA" AND HAVE BEEN GIVEN SENTENCES OF BETWEEN FOUR AND 18 YEARS IN PRISON.

THEY ARE REPORTED AS WISHING TO RETURN HOME, DEPENDING ON WHAT PENALTY IS GIVEN TO SHIBATA, WHOSE TRIAL IS STILL IN PROGESS.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - THE GOVERNMENT WILL UNVEIL MEASURES TO SPEED UP JAPAN'S CUSTOMS CLEARANCE AT JAPAN-U.S. TALKS IN WASHINGTON SCHEDULED FOR TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY, GOVERNMENT SOURCES SAID THURSDAY.

JAPAN'S CUSTOMS CLEARANCE SYSTEM HAS BEEN SINGLED OUT BY THE UNITED STATES AS ONE OF BARRIERS TO FOREIGN TRADE AT BILATERAL TRADE TALKS, KNOWN AS THE STRUCTURAL IMPEDIMENTS INITIATIVE (SII).

AS PART OF ITS POLICIES TO BOOST IMPORTS, THE GOVERNMENT HAS PLEDGED TO REDUCE THE TIME NEEDED FOR CUSTOMS CLEARANCE PROCEDURES TO LESS THAN 24 HOURS FROM ABOUT THREE DAYS AT PRESENT.

AT THE TALKS, JAPAN WILL PROPOSE INTRODUCTION OF A PRIOR DECLARATION SYSTEM FOR IMPORT CARGOES, IN WHICH DOCUMENT EXAMINATION IS CONDUCTED AS MUCH AS POSSIBLE BEFORE THE CARGOES ARRIVE IN JAPAN, AND A SIMULTANEOUS CHECKUP SYSTEM, IN WHICH VARIOUS INSPECTION PROCEDURES WILL BE STARTED ALL AT ONCE UPON THE ARRIVAL OF CARGOES.

THE JAPANESE PROPOSALS, IF FOUND ACCEPTABLE BY THE UNITED STATES, ARE EXPECTED TO BE INCLUDED IN A FINAL REPORT ON THE SII TALKS, DUE TO BE COMPLETED BY JULY.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - A JAPANESE PRIVATE RESEARCH CONSORTIUM PLANS TO BUILD A DEMONSTRATION FUSED CARBONATE FUEL CELL, A POSSIBLE NEXT-GENERATION POLLUTION-FREE POWER GENERATION SYSTEM, THE CONSORTIUM ANNOUNCED THURSDAY.

THE PLANT WILL BE BUILT IN THE COMPOUNDS OF THE AKAGI TESTING CENTER OF THE GENERAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE OF THE ELECTRIC POWER INDUSTRY IN GUMMA PREFECTURE, NORTH OF TOKYO.

CONSTRUCTION WORK ON THE 4 BILLION YEN FUEL CELL WILL GET UNDERWAY NEXT MONDAY. THE PLANT IS SCHEDULED TO BE COMPLETED IN FISCAL 1993, AND TESTS WILL BE CONDUCTED UNTIL FISCAL 1996.

IT IS HOPED THAT THE NEW POWER GENERATION SYSTEM WILL COME INTO FULL USE IN THE EARLY 21ST CENTURY.

A FUEL CELL IS A CELL THAT CONVERTS CHEMICAL ENERGY DIRECTLY INTO ELECTRICAL ENERGY, WITH ELECTRIC POWER BEING PRODUCED AS PART OF THE CHEMICAL REACTION BETWEEN THE ELECTROLYTE AND A FUEL, SUCH AS HYDROGEN. IN THE FUSED CARBONATE FUEL CELL, HYDROGEN WILL REACT ELECTROCHEMICALLY WITH OXYGEN IN THE AIR TO GENERATE ELECTRICAL ENERGY.

THE CONSORTIUM SAID IT WOULD DEVELOP A 100-KILOWATT CLASS FUEL CELL AS A FIRST STEP AND WOULD EVENTUALLY HOPE TO DEVELOP A 1,000-KILOWATT CLASS POWER GENERATION SYSTEM.

THE CONSORTIUM IS MADE UP OF L4 MAJOR CORPORATIONS LIKE HITACHI LTD. IN ADDITION TO THE GENERAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE OF THE ELECTRIC POWER INDUSTRY -- THE JAPANESE POWER INDUSTRY'S RESEARCH CENTER.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) KYODO - BROKERAGE FIRMS HAVE IRONED OUT STRICTER GUIDELINES FOR UNDERWRITING OF CONVERTIBLE BONDS AND BONDS WITH EQUITY-PURCHASE WARRANTS, WHICH ARE TO BE RESUMED EARLY NEXT MONTH, INDUSTRY SOURCES SAID THURSDAY.

THE EQUITY FINANCING HAD BEEN SUSPENDED SINCE EARLY MARCH AS A RESULT OF A PLUNGE ON THE TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE.

UNDER THE NEW GUIDELINES, THE LIMIT OF CBS OR BONDS WITH WARRANTS THAT CAN BE ISSUED BY A COMPANY WILL BE LOWERED TO 10 PERCENT OF THE MARKET VALUE OF ITS ALL OUTSTANDING STOCK FROM THE PRESENT 20 PERCENT, THE SOURCES SAID.

ANNUAL COUPON RATES ON CBS WILL BE RAISED TO 5.5-6.0 PERCENT FROM 5 PERCENT IN EARLY MARCH AND THOSE ON WARRANT BONDS TO 5.0 PERCENT FROM 3.3 PERCENT, THEY SAID.

BUT THE SECURITIES INDUSTRY MAY NOT RESUME UNDERWRITING OF COMMON STOCKS FOR PUBLIC REPLACEMENT BEFORE OCTOBER, THEY ADDED.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

The FEDERAL RESERVE is scheduled to release its April consumer credit report today. ... The budget talks between Congress and the Administration resume today.

FROM THE BULLS:

"I think the stock market is still headed higher," says RICKY HARRINGTON, director of investment policy at MARION BASS SECURITIES CORP. of Charlotte N.C. "The institutions have a lot of cash and the secondary market has been improving. I feel the Dow has good support at 2900. I think the market could begin moving higher later this week. My feeling is a Dow of 3100 is a plausible target for sometime this summer. However, it is difficult to predict just how high this market can go." ("Investor's Daily", 6/7)

"I think it [the stock market] will struggle, but I think, currently, it looks like the market will go higher," says ROBERT STOVALL of STOVALL/TWENTY-FIRST ADVISERS. "Today was an excellent excuse offered to the stock market to have a big down day, down 30, 40, 50 points, but it didn't take it. Actually, it performed pretty well." (FNN "Business Tonight", 6/6)

FROM THE BEARS:

Strategist RAYMOND WORSECK at the A.G. EDWARDS & SONS brokerage firm in St. Louis has recently doubled his recommended cash position. "The market's valuation was fair in January, but now it is less appealing." In picking stocks, Worseck recommends IBM and BROWNING- FERRIS INDUSTRIES, both of which have been strong recently, and a hometown financial favorite BOATMEN'S BANCSHARES. ("Fortune", 6/18)

STOCK MARKET:

"I think we're going to see more consolidation above Dow 2900, at least short-term," says THOMAS CALLAHAN, chief equities trader at YAMAICHI INTERNATIONAL. Mr. Callahan remains bullish and explains, "People still have cash to spend -- a lot of portfolio managers are still a high 10 to 15% in cash by my reckoning. The trouble is, what do you buy up here? There aren't too many bargains around anymore, and that factor is holding buyers back." Nevertheless, he says, "The market will eventually have to deal with the phenomenon of a fair amount of excess cash." ("The Washington Post", 6/7)

Whatever outside factors may or may not have created yesterday's drop, "I think the markets were ready to take a breather in any event," says MARSHALL ACUFF of SMITH BARNEY. "We've had a pretty powerful surge in recent weeks ... some pause, some rest was very appropriate." Acuff believes the market will continue upward, saying, "I would still be a buyer because I see the pressure of money coming in this market, particularly from the equity mutual funds." He points out that April statistics showed the most cash as a percentage of net assets since 1961, when statistics were first kept. "That money has to go into equities." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/6)

"While the advance may be more sporadic and we may have a few sinking spells, I look for the market to hold up for the balance of this month," says NEWTON ZINDER of SHEARSON LEHMAN. The market should be helped by next week's triple expiration which Zinder says will have a bullish bias. Also aiding stocks will be the close of the quarter as money managers use cash to show they participated in the rally. Although a survey of newsletter writers shows more bulls than bears, Zinder says bullish sentiment hasn't reached euphoric levels which would indicate a peak in the current rally. (FNN "World Business Update", 6/7)

DAN RYCZEK of the RUSHMORE GROUP says this rally has topped out and expects more pullbacks in the immediate term. "The opinion I'm beginning to see and read in the paper is that it's not a question of if we'll get to 3000, but how quickly. Usually when markets swing that fast and that abruptly, they've gone a little ahead of themselves. I wouldn't be surprised if in six weeks to a month from now this attitude is proven wrong." Ryczek finds support for the market around the 2800 level and he would buy on dips in the market. His favorites include IBM, PHILIP MORRIS, and JOHNSON & JOHNSON. (CNBC "World Business View", 6/6)

JOHN HANCOCK money manager ROBERT G. FREEDMAN says there are still "a lot of skeptics and a lot of cash." He believes as that money flows into the market, the Dow "will easily get to 3000." (NYT, 6/7)

"It was just a classic case of profit-taking," says MICHAEL METZ of OPPENHEIMER & CO. "There was no new external news. New entrants into the market and profit-takers are just evenly matched, for now." Metz expects more pullbacks for the short-term. "My guess is we're spinning our wheels here. The next move should be a correction beginning in the next few days -- not a serious crack, but the short- term bias should be downward. It will be cushioned, though, by the enormous number of investors who haven't spent their money. They'll be nibbling at the market as it retreats." (UPI, 6/6)

"The market came so far so fast that it was natural for people to want to take some profits," says DENNIS JARRETT of KIDDER PEABODY. "The fact that there was no heavy selling bodes well for the next few months." (NYT, 6/7)

LAWRENCE GREENWALD of SANFORD C. BERNSTEIN denies theories that the short-lived rumor of a radioactive cloud from a Soviet nuclear accident was drifting toward Finland had any thing to do with yesterday's mid-day market volatility. He believes the stock market pause "is just a break until we go higher." ("USA Today", 6/7)

STOCK TIPS:

SMITH BARNEY's MARSHALL ACUFF says that while the secondary stocks are now catching up with the leaders, "the leaders will remain the leaders." He feels that IBM, DIGITAL EQUIPMENT and INTEL will continue their moves upward. He also likes drug stocks such as BRISTOL MYERS and SYNTEX. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/6)

TOYS 'R' US is the world's largest and fastest growing children's specialty chain and has gobbled up 25% of the $13.4 billion U.S. toy business, essentially elbowing out any viable major competitors, according to analysts. "They're really the 800-pound gorilla," says one toy manufacturer of the company's dominance at the retail level. "And I think they'll become 16 tons," echoes CATHLEEN MACKEY, senior vice president of institutional research at GRUNTAL & CO. "With $5 billion in sales, the buying power [they] have with manufacturers is tremendous." Toys 'R' Us plans to open five or six stores in Japan in 1991 that are expected to be met with resistance. "But you can bet that if Toys 'R' Us goes into Japan then it would be a clean distribution setup for American manufacturers, who will take away market share from Japanese makers," predicts SEAN McGOWAN of GERARD KLAUER MATTISON & CO. ("Investor's Daily", 6/7)

After a run-up, DILLON and MAY have come down in the past couple of days. But SMITH BARNEY retail analyst WILLIAM SMITH expects them to continue to be strong performers and likes both stocks at current prices. Other long term buys in the retail group: TOYS 'R' US and THE LIMITED. (CNN "Business Morning", 6/7)

ARGUS RESEARCH says that it is dropping such quality growth stocks as PEPSICO INC. and JOHNSON & JOHNSON from its list of "sacred cows" -- or candidates for inclusion in new portfolios -- and replacing them with interest-rate sensitive issues such as utilities and financial institutions. "Many of the financial-services companies should benefit from both lower interest rates and an underlying resilience in the economy " says A. C. MOORE of Argus. (WSJ, 6/7)

"The [market] leaders such as MICROSOFT CORP., COMPAQ COMPUTER CORP. and PROCTER & GAMBLE CO. are not showing any signs of topping. So, one has to go with the trend which is up," says RICKY HARRINGTON, director of investment policy at MARION BASS SECURITIES CORP. of Charlotte, N.C. "However, I feel investors need to be selective. I would not chase the strong stocks that already have had big run-ups. Instead, I would go with those that have less downside risk like the oils, machinery and aluminum stocks." ("Investor's Daily", 6/7)

"The secret to making money over time is being invested and staying there, not chasing the market," says FREDERICK TAYLOR, chief investment officer of New York's U.S. TRUST. "Right now we think technology stocks make the most sense," says Taylor. He calls his portfolio mix slightly bullish.

Among his favorite stocks are GILLETTE, INFORMIX and MOTOROLA. ("Fortune" 6/18)

Despite yesterday's slide in oil prices, DEAN WITTER analyst EUGENE NOWAK remains long term bullish about the industry, saying, "We ... see it as an opportunity to buy at more attractive levels." He specifically likes CHEVRON, EXXON, MOBIL and TEXACO. ("USA Today", 6/7)

PRUDENTIAL-BACHE SECURITIES INC. analyst JOHN McMILLIN downgraded CAMPBELL SOUP yesterday after an announcement that three of the company's shareholders would combine their total stake of 17.4% into a trust. McMillin says the move makes a buyout unlikely for some time. Campbell lost 3 1/8 to 56 7/8. (NYT, 6/7)

When comparing the next decade's earnings potential of tangible assets [such as real estate] to that of stocks and bonds, "Stocks and bonds will win," says ROBERT S. SALOMON, managing director of SALOMON BROTHERS INC. Salomon says stocks that should do the well in the 1990s include those in the consumer products sector, such as PHILIP MORRIS, PEPSICO, GILLETTE and McDONALD'S, and interest rate sensitive stocks that are not impacted by real estate, such as AMERICAN EXPRESS, FUND AMERICA and U.S. LIFE. WILMINGTON, DE (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Hercules Incorporated (NYSE: HPC) announced today that its Resins Group is applying a 4.6 percent surcharge to the price of all rosin- and hydrocarbon-based resin products it supplies in the United States effective July 1, 1990, to partially help offset the cost of major environmental programs it has completed, is undertaking now, and those it anticipates over the next five years.

The company said that the surcharge is needed not only to defray in part what are becoming "staggering" costs in complying with environmental and safety regulations, but also to fund programs that assist Resins Group customers in meeting their environmental obligations.

According to William E. Hosker, president of the Resins Group, the business expects to spend more than $100 million for some 100 capital projects and operating expenses related to environmental compliance over the next five years.

Products affected by the surcharge include rosin resins, rosin derivatives hydrocarbon resins and co-product streams of each which are sold by Hercules to the adhesives, graphic arts, rubber, plastics, pavement markings, food and other industries.

The company launched two years ago a pro-active environmental program entitled "We Care" to demonstrate a visible commitment to public involvement and cooperation with government agencies and citizens.

Hercules environmental compliance and safety programs for its resins business have focused on reducing emissions of pollutants, improving cleanup, developing new testing and monitoring methods, and increasing capital investments for pollution abatement equipment.

The investment in resin plant treatment facilities alone to meet or exceed existing federal, state and local government and safety specifications plus operating costs for treatment facilities has totaled more than $50 million over the past five years, Hosker disclosed.

MORRISTOWN, NJ (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Barringer Resources, Inc. (NASDAQ: BARR), today announced that its Barringer Instruments subsidiary has received an initial order for two Model 100 Ionscan Ion Mobility Spectrometers for commercial use from E.I. Du Pont De Nemours & Company. Ionscan employs proprietary technology developed by Barringer's Canadian subsidiary which is utilized in the detection of sample chemicals. The Ionscan unit can detect chemicals within five seconds. This order is the result of a series of demonstrations to the technical staff of Du Pont at the Barringer development facility in Toronto, Canada. These presentations demonstrated the sensitivity and specificity of the Ionscan unit in the detection of sample chemicals.

Frank Abella, chief executive officer of Barringer said, "We are most pleased with the opportunity to commercially display the performance of our Ionscan technology for Du Pont".

Robert Melnick, chief executive officer of Barringer Instruments indicated that Du Pont will evaluate the performance of these systems in an operational environment. They will consult with Barringer on the results of these tests, and will suggest additional variants for their applications.

Headquartered in Morristown, N.J., Barringer Resources Inc. is a holding company with two operating entities. Barringer Laboratories, Inc. (NASDAQ: BALB), 48 percent owned, provides analytical testing services for the environmental and mineral industries. Barringer Instruments Inc., develops, manufactures and markets specialty analytical instruments for security, law enforcement, exploration and environmental monitoring applications.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - A $42 million dollar contract for U.S. Air Force JTIDS (Joint Tactical Information Distribution System) terminals has been awarded to the Collins Government Avionics Division of Rockwell International (NYSE: ROK).

The contract, awarded by the Electronic Systems Division of the U.S. Air Force Systems Command, provides for the low rate initial production of Class 2 JTIDS terminals for the F-15 aircraft. This represents the largest single JTIDS contract to date for the division, and the company's first JTIDS prime contract.

JTIDS is a highly sophisticated information distribution system that provides real-time, jam-resistant, secure transfer of combat and relative navigation information between widely dispersed battle elements. All participants exchange voice and digital data over a common communications link that is continuously updated by each participant.

Each Class 2 terminal consists of three line replaceable units (LRUs): a digital data processor, interface unit, and receiver-transmitter.

The data processor LRU is the central computer that sets up and controls the JTIDS network. It also provides control functions for the two other units in the terminal.

This contract award is the culmination of nine years of effort by the Collins Government Avionics Division on the Class 2 terminal. During that period, the Rockwell division was a subcontractor to Plessey Electronics Systems Corporation under a leader-follower arrangement. The division's development and preproduction activities have centered on the highly complex receiver-transmitter segment of the JTIDS program.

Since 1981, when Rockwell began JTIDS full scale development, the division has delivered 15 complete Class 2/2H terminals, 173 receiver-transmitter, 24 receiver-transmitter subassemblies (U.S. Army specific), and 38 high power amplifiers. The high power amplifiers are used with Class 2 terminals on command and control platforms to provide greater anti-jam, longer range communications.

JTIDS is the most sophisticated data link systems yet deployed in terms of the amount of data it can handle, the number of functions it performs, and the level of anti-jam protection it provides.

Rockwell International is a $12 billion, multi-industry company applying advanced technology to a wide range of products in its aerospace, electronics, automotive and graphics businesses.

DALLAS (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Con-Way Southwest Express, a regional trucking company based in Dallas, announced today it has opened 12 new service centers in an expansion that will nearly double the company's transportation network throughout Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Tennessee, and Texas.

Con-Way Southwest Express (CSW) was founded last November with 15 service centers throughout Texas, Oklahoma, and Louisiana. Under today's expansion, CSW has extended its network with new service centers in Arkansas, Mississippi and western Tennessee, as well as additional service centers in Texas. The company provides regional trucking for commercial and industrial freight shipments throughout the southwest, specializing in expedited next-day delivery, according to John T. Hickerson, president of CSW.

New service centers opened today in El Dorado, Fort Smith, and Little Rock Ark.; Fort Worth, Sherman, Texarkana, and Wichita Falls, Texas; Gulfport, Jackson, Laurel, and McComb, Miss.; and Memphis, Tenn.

With the expansion, CSW has grown to 220 employees, and a fleet of 200 tractors and 400 trailers, serving 3,964 communities in the southwest. The company opened its doors with a workforce of 150 employees, and a fleet of 100 tractors and 200 trailers.

CSW provides the LTL shipper with trucking services and freight management programs that add value to its customers' products and help manage their freight and distribution needs. Among the special services are: "ExpressRate," an efficient computer diskette-based pricing sytem which enables customers to determine freight rates using their own IBM personal computers; "DIRECT," a direct telecommunications link between the shipper's computer and CSW's electronic data bank for instant shipment status, freight rate quotes, and scheduling information; "PRO PLUS," an instant shipment identification and tracking service beginning with the initial pick-up; "GlobalRate," a comprehensive international shipping service designed to simplify the export/import process for shipments under 10,000 lbs., and "Logistics Manager," a versatile new personal computer-based software program for traffic and purchasing managers that simplifies preparing bills of lading and shipping labels, tracing and tracking shipments, calculating freight rates, and producing customized management reports.

CSW is one of five regional carriers operated by Con-Way Transportation Services (CTS), a regional trucking and intermodal services firm based in Palo Alto, Calif. CTS's other carriers are Con-Way Western Express, Santa Fe Springs, Calif.; Con-Way Central Express, Ann Arbor, Mich.; Con-Way Eastern Express, Rutherford, N.J.; and Con-Way Southern Express, Charlotte N.C. ALBANY, NY (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Marine Midland Bank and Citibank have reached a definitive agreement under which Marine will acquire five Citibank branches in the Albany area.

In announcing the agreement, Edward V. Canale, region executive in charge of Marine Midland's Capital Region, said the five new offices will significantly enhance Marine's ability to serve consumers and businesses in the Albany area.

The acquisition is expected to be completed during the third quarter, Canale said. The five branches will bring to 26 the number of marine branches in the capital region.

Additionally, in acquiring the branches Marine will obtain some $200 million in deposits, and retain as Marine Midland employees the 35 employees who staff the five offices. Loan portfolios associated with the five offices are not included in the transaction. No other financial terms were disclosed.

Canale noted that the capital region has long been an attractive market for Marine. The agreement to acquire the Citibank offices reflects Marine's goal of expanding in the region in line with the Bank's regional banking strategy.

The five branches are located on State Street in Albany, Clifton Park, Broadway in Troy, Wolf Road in Colonie and in Delmar.

Marine Midland Bank is a New York State-based regional banking organization serving consumers and businesses through 317 branches and a network of some 300 automated teller machines statewide. Marine is the principal U.S. entity of the HongkongBank group, which, with $133 billion in assets, is one of the world's 30 largest banking organizations.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Agence France-Presse is the first news agency in the world to successfully operate an entirely digital photo network with an addressing system to every client.

The inauguration of this new system occurred at the 1990 World Championship Soccer games held in Italy from June 8 to July 9.

AFP, founded in 1835 by Charles-Louis Havas, is the world's oldest news agency.

Using the latest technology in digital image transmission broadcast, the new "DITB" network enables a photo to be sent digitally from the origin of the event directly into the client's electronic darkroom, such as AFP's Image Terminal. The compression standards and protocol used function within proposed ANPA-IPTC format standards.

The most striking benefit of AFP's new all digital network is that subscribers will now be able to receive "specials" addressed exclusively to them. In addition to improved speed and quality, the DITB network will be able to interface directly into most pre-press systems.

The DITB network, which will be presented at ANPA TEC 1990 (Las Vegas, June 16-21), is the logical evolution of AFP's commitment to advanced technology, service and quality. AFP's DITB network has been operating in Europe since April. It has been used to transmit the entire production of the European Press Association to clients.

From EPA's Frankfurt bureau the DITB system has successfully addressed photos to 14 countries where clients are receiving according to their specific needs. The DITB has allowed EPA members and clients, mainly European press agencies, to receive pictures on their AFP Image Terminal in 3 minutes and 20 seconds per separation, a rate more than twice the normal transmission speed.

The DITB should be functioning effectively in all countries by 1991. In areas of the world where clients are not equipped with satellite antennas, the DITB can be addressed to the nearest AFP bureau and then relayed locally.

The service will be compatible with all electronic darkrooms and can subsequently be fed into a microcomputer such as a MacIntosh. Clients without electronic editing systems can continue to receive images on an analog paper receiver such as an Oki. The next step will be to feed the entire picture service directly into a PC, a system that is presently functioning effectively with AFP text wires.

ATLANTA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Bank South (NASDAQ: BKSO), an Atlanta-based, $5.4 billion-asset, multibank holding company, and The First National Bank of Clearwater, a $427 million-asset financial institution in Pinellas County, Fla., announced today a definitive agreement to merge the two companies.

The proposed merger, terms of which were not disclosed, is subject to regulatory approval and is expected to be finalized by the fall of 1990.

The agreement represents Bank South's second major expansion into Florida, following a merger in 1988 with the $323 million-asset Citizens & Peoples Bank of Pensacola.

Bank South has 138 offices throughout Georgia and the Pensacola area. The First National Bank of Clearwater has 10 offices and an 5.8 percent market share in Clearwater, Fla.

"The First National Bank of Clearwater is one of the highest-quality banks in the Southeast," said Robert P. Guyton, chairman and chief executive officer of Bank South Corp. "We are very pleased to merge with such a superior, well-managed franchise that will serve as an anchor for further expansion on the west coast of Florida."

Guyton noted that The First National Bank of Clearwater would retain its name, management and board of directors.

"Our secret to success has been very simple: controlled growth and lending where we live," said First National President Robert A. Burwell. "The merger with Bank South will provide new resources for expanded lending capability and other service improvements -- allowing us to serve our customers even better."

Burwell continued: "Bank South's culture, tradition, management style and operations are compatible with those which have been cultivated at The First National Bank of Clearwater over the last 64 years. The merger is expected to bring very little change to the operation of First National. We expect that we will keep our name, our service traditions and management team. We will maintain the ability to make decisions locally. Involvement in the local community will continue to expand as will the bank's product line and services."

Founded in 1926, First National has continually been recognized by independent bank data companies as one of Florida's safest financial institutions. The bank was recently rated "excellent" by Investment Dynamics Corp., an independent research firm, based on Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) information.

First National maintains a conservative loan to deposit ratio of 53 percent, and has made all of its loans in Pinellas County. The bank has a strong trust department with trust assets of $743 million.

During 1989, First National achieved net income of $4.2 million. Return on average assets was 1.02 percent and return on average equity was 11.27 percent.

Bank South during 1989 achieved net income of $48 million or $1.42 per share. Return on average assets for the year of 1989 was .98 percent, and return on average equity was 15.90 percent.

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - First Team Sports Inc. (NASDAQ: FTSP) issued a preliminary report of net sales for the first quarter ended May 31, 1990, totalling approximately $2,900,000, an increase of 147 percent over net sales of $1,175,459 for the first quarter ended May 31, 1989. The company estimates that net income for the first quarter ended May 31, 1990, will be approximately $600,000 compared to $282,835 for the first quarter ended May 31, 1989. These results are subject to final adjustment.

Dave Soderquist, president of the company, attributed the increase in first-quarter sales to the continued acceptance of the company's in-line roller skates, "Ultra-Wheel(TM) and Skate Attack(TM)" and to the impact of the endorsement of the company's in-line roller skates by Wayne Gretzky and Janet Jones Gretzky.

First Team Sports Inc. markets and distributes high-quality in-line roller skates under the trademark ULTRA-WHEELS and related accessory products. First Team Sports, Inc., is traded on NASDAQ under the symbol "FTSP."

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Danaher Corporation (NYSE: DHR)

announced today that the merger between it and Easco Hand Tools, Inc., (NASDAQ: TOOL) has been approved by an overwhelming majority of votes of Easco shareholders, and will be effective at the close of business today.

The announcement followed the special meeting of Easco shareholders and the Danaher annual meeting. Danaher shareholders approved the issuance of stock to be exchanged at a ratio of 0.4175 Danaher shares for each Easco share.

George Sherman, president and chief executive officer of Danaher said, "I'm very excited about the merger with Easco. The combined company will have sales of about $1 billion, approximately half of which will be derived from the tool group anchored by Easco. This group has excellent opportunities for incremental sales and earnings growth through broadening channels of distribution, international sales, overhead consolidation and improved factory utilization.

"Easco is one of the world's largest producers of quality mechanics hand tools and specialized automotive service tools supplying the professional automotive, industrial and do-it-yourself markets," Sherman continued. "In addition to Easco, the tool group will be comprised of Danaher's Matco Tool, Holo-Krome/Allen, Iseli and Jacobs Chuck divisions."

Danaher is a leading manufacturer of tools, process/environmental controls and transportation products.

SAN DIEGO (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - IRT Corp. (AMEX: IX) today announced the completion of a private equity financing of approximately $4 million and new agreements with its lender banks.

The equity investment, completed today, consists of approximately $4 million of convertible preferred stock purchased by several unrelated investors and several members of IRT's board of directors.

In conjunction with the transaction, IRT renegotiated its loan agreement with its subordinated lender bank under which existing debt is beneficially restructured into a seven-year senior subordinated note, ongoing interest rates are substantially reduced in the first two fiscal years and more than $1 million of deferred and accrued but unpaid interest is forgiven. The line-of-credit facility has been extended through April 1, 1991.

"This equity investment substantially completes the reorganization begun in early 1988," said John W. Battin, president and chief executive officer. "As we have repeatedly disclosed, past losses had made IRT's ability to continue as an ongoing entity dependent upon securing the new financing.

"This investment and the new banking arrangements increase IRT's book value by more than $5 million. The additional capital will greatly aid our efforts to establish IRT as the recognized world leader in applying real-time X-ray technology to the modern automated factory."

The investors in the stock purchase include Euro-America-I LP of Menlo Park, Calif., Athena Venture Partners LP of New York, TP Venture Capital C.V. and TP Venture Capital-A C.V. of the Netherlands Antilles, Siparex Participations of Lyon, France, Clemente Global Investors Ltd. of New York The Matrix Technology Group N.V. of the Netherlands Antilles, and a group consisting of current board members and several private investors associated with present management.

Four of the five IRT board members are purchasing approximately $650,000 of the offering, including Clifford V. Brokaw III, chairman of IRT and Battin, the president and CEO.

Each share of preferred stock, priced at $16 per share, is convertible into ten shares of common stock, subject to certain anti-dilution adjustments, and initially carries a cumulative annual dividend of seven percent. After seven years, the dividend increases to 15 percent per annum but the preferred stock becomes redeemable at the company's option.

IRT has agreed to register promptly the common stock issuable upon conversion of the preferred stock. The holders of the preferred stock are entitled to elect one director to IRT's board of directors.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - A team of British environmental scientists today issued a field observations paper concluding that "the overall impact of the Valdez spill on the environment of Prince William Sound and the Gulf of Alaska is likely to be short-lived," Exxon said.

The three researchers, authorities on the natural recovery of marine environments from oil spills, said their field observations in the oil-impacted area of the Alaskan coastline show that "animals and plants are thriving and the environment is healing."

The researchers are: Dr. Jenifer M. Baker, a biological consultant who works on oil-pollution problems for conservation organizations, corporations and government agencies throughout the world; Dr. Robert B. Clark, zoology professor emeritus at the University of Newcastle on Tyne and editor of the international journal Marine Pollution Bulletin; and Dr. Paul F. Kingston, a marine biologist and assistant director of the Institute of Offshore Engineering in Edinburgh, Scotland.

The United Kingdom scientists have examined plant and animal life in Prince William Sound and the Gulf of Alaska and compared their observations with the knowledge they had gained through a detailed review of the natural healing process following other oil spills in the cold waters of the world. That natural process includes wave action, winter storms and bacterial breakdown.

According to the researchers, the rapid recovery of the environment in Prince William Sound and the Gulf of Alaska did not surprise them because it is consistent with their previous studies.

Other findings: -- Because most of the oil has disappeared and only a small percentage of the region had been oiled, the area has retained its natural beauty, and there is an abundance of plant and animal life.

-- During their examination of the region, the researchers observed numerous sea otters, seals and sea lions, sea birds and bald eagles.

-- Barnacles, sea snails (periwinkles), mussels and limpets were abundant along the shoreline of Prince William Sound and the Gulf of Alaska, including areas which had been heavily oiled. "Sighting of numerous young barnacles on the rocks implies that environmental quality has been good enough to support these animals through the sensitive stages of the life cycle," the researchers wrote.

ATLANTA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Georgia-Pacific Corp. (NYSE: GP) today concluded a securitization of receivables of Georgia-Pacific and certain subsidiaries for $1 billion with a syndicate of intermediaries, with Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce acting as Administrative Agent.

Proceeds from the transaction will be used to prepay amounts borrowed under a $4.5 billion tender facility relating to the acquisition of Great Northern Nekoosa Corp.

Today's $1 billion asset securitization transaction is one of three components of Georgia-Pacific's plan to repay and refinance the tender facility and other debt, provide working capital and pay certain fees and expenses of the acquisition. The other two components are a public offering of $600 million of credit-sensitive notes and debentures priced yesterday to be sold by an underwriting syndicate lead by Bear, Stearns & Co. Inc., and a commitment for a revolving credit and term loan facility of up to $4 billion from a syndicate of 25 banks led by Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association.

Georgia-Pacific selected the asset securitization and offering of long-term public debt securities as a more advantageous alternative to permanently financing the acquisition solely through bank loans.

The asset securitization and public debt securities are expected to afford Georgia-Pacific an overall lower permanent financing cost.

Yesterday's agreement to issue public debt securities covered $300 million of 10 percent credit-sensitive notes due June 15, 1997, and $300 million of 10.10 percent credit- sensitive debentures due June 15, 2002. The interest rates on both securities are based on the company's current credit ratings and will change in relation to certain changes in those ratings, but will not be less than 9.55 percent for the notes and 9.65 percent for the debentures.

The 7-year notes were offered at par, and the 12-year debentures were offered at 99.937 percent of par to provide a yield of 10.109 percent.

Bear, Stearns & Co. Inc. is manager of the underwriting syndicate. Goldman, Sachs & Co. and Salomon Brothers Inc are co-managers.

CLARKSVILLE, TN (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Allied-Signal Automotive has started pilot production of Bendix AntiLock Braking Systems (ABS) here in a newly opened $9 million 104,000-square-foot assembly plant, the firm announced today.

The plant, dedicated Wednesday during ceremonies attended by more than 200 other state, local and company officials, was welcomed by Tennessee Gov. Ned R. McWherter, featured speaker at the ceremonies.

John W. Day, Allied-Signal Automotive president who gave the keynote address, said the plant is part of the company's five-year $70 million investment in the advanced braking system for the North American market.

Full production of ABS for 1992 models will begin here later this summer, added Day. The plant currently has 35 employees but will expand to about 250 over the next several years as the market for the Bendix system expands.

The facility is part of the Bendix Automotive Systems Group, a major supplier of ABS and other brake systems and components to the global automotive market. ABS is an electronically controlled system which prevents a vehicle's wheels from locking during emergency braking situations, giving the driver improved control.

Allied-Signal Automotive currently produces ABS at plants in St. Joseph, Mich., and Drancy, France. The French facility supplies ABS for the European market and is currently in production on systems for Renault, Peugeot and Citroen. The St. Joseph plant builds ABS for the Chrysler Jeep Wagoneer and Cherokee.

Allied-Signal Automotive is a unit of Allied-Signal Inc. (NYSE: ALD), an advanced technology company with businesses in automotive products, aerospace and engineered materials.

IRVINE, CA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Fidelity National Financial, Inc.

(AMEX: FNF), a leading title insurance underwriter, today reported a 31 percent increase in net income on an 18 percent increase in second-quarter revenues.

For the quarter, net income was $1,025,000, or $.30 per share, as compared to $782,000, or $.22 per share, recorded for the comparable fiscal 1989 quarter. Revenues for the quarter were $42,261,000, up 18 percent from the $35,771,000 in revenues for the prior-year second quarter.

Net income for the first half of fiscal 1990 has increased 99 percent to $1,772,000, or $.52 per share, versus $892,000 or $0.24 per share, for the opening half of fiscal 1989. Revenues for the first half were $87,074,000 up 22.5 percent from the $71,080,000 recorded for the year-earlier period.

William P. Foley II, president and chief executive officer, said: "Second-quarter earnings remained strong despite a softening in the California real estate market." Foley added that the earnings reflect Fidelity's continuing success in increasing market share and enhancing operating efficiencies through expense containment throughout its network.

Fidelity National Financial, Inc. issues title insurance and performs other title-related services in 31 states and the District of Columbia through Fidelity National Title Insurance Company, Fidelity National Title Insurance Company of California, and Fidelity National Title Insurance Company of Tennessee.

BIRMINGHAM, MI (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Marvin Moses, chief financial officer of ALC Communications Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: ALCCC), announced today that ALC has entered into a series of transactions which have resulted in a significant restructuring of the company's financial obligations.

As part of the restructuring, ALC has obtained additional financing of $7.15 million from The Prudential Insurance Company, General Electric Pension Trust and Grumman Hill, L.P. In exchange, these parties will receive two-year notes bearing interest at a rate of 15 percent and warrants granting them the right to purchase 17 percent of the company's Common Stock, on a fully diluted basis.

Also included in the restructuring is an agreement with a significant majority of the holders of ALC Senior Subordinated Debentures to defer interest until June 30, 1991, subject to possible further deferment to June 30, 1992, in certain circumstances. Maturity of the Debentures of consenting holders has been extended until Dec. 31, 1995, with principal payments of $11 million a year due beginning Dec. 31, 1991, but further deferrable to June 30, 1992, under certain circumstances.

The company's revolving credit line provided by Foothill Capital Corporation has been renewed for a two-year term, under substantially the same terms and conditions of the previous line of credit. As part of the restructuring, one of the new investors has also become a new participant in the credit facility.

ALC also has obtained concessions in certain agreements with Communications Transmission, Inc. ("CTI"), its majority shareholder. The $20 million bridge loan with CTI due September 1990 has been converted to a term loan due June 4, 1992, with a reduced interest rate of 12 percent. In addition, the company's transmission contracts with CTI have been amended, reducing the rates ALC pays for transmission by $500,000 a month, effective May 1, 1990, and further to $700,000 a month effective Jan. 1, 1991, and thereafter. For their concessions, CTI will receive equity in ALC, increasing their ownership of ALC to approximately 64 percent on a fully diluted basis.

According to Moses, this successful negotiation of a restructuring with the various parties is a significant positive step for ALC.

"We are pleased with these agreements because they increase the company's liquidity and give us a stronger financial footing for offering innovative long-distance products," Moses said. "As a result of these and other concessions we have obtained, the company's cash operating costs have been reduced by over $1.2 million per month."

ALC Communications is the parent company of Allnet Communication Services, Inc., one of the nation's largest providers of long-distance service. With offices in every U.S. major metropolitan area, Allnet provides long-distance service to more than 300,000 customers nationwide. Allnet specializes in providing long-distance to small- and medium-size businesses and residential customers.

GRAND RAPIDS, MI (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Charles E. Bennett, president of Guardsman Products, Inc. (NYSE: GPI), reported that his company is less optimistic today than previously about financial results in the current quarter and for the remainder of 1990.

"We had previously anticipated progressive improvements quarter to quarter for the remainder of the year," Bennett said. "However, we are experiencing continued softness in sales consistent with the economic conditions within the durable goods industry."

"Our best prediction now for the current period is that our second-quarter numbers for both sales and earnings may be flat or slightly down from the first quarter."

For the first quarter of 1990, Guardsman reported sales of $47,686,000 and net income of $1,671,000, or 23 cents per share.

Bennett added that Guardsman's results for the balance of the year should be consistent with the economy in general and the performance of the durable goods industry in particular.

LINDEN, NJ (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Exxon (NYSE: XON) announced today that normal marine operations will resume on June 8 at its Bayway (N.J.) refinery and Bayonne (N.J.) plant following completion of a comprehensive marine operations study.

Exxon Corporation President Lee R. Raymond stated, "The study concluded that while Exxon's New York Harbor marine operations preformed above the industry average, significant improvements in environmental and safety performance can be achieved. Exxon will invest more than $10 million over the next three years to sustain the higher level of performance."

The recommendations are designed to make vessel maneuvering safer as well as ensure that only the highest quality vessels call at these two facilities. These measures also will enhance the reliability of cargo transfer operations and increase the response capability at these facilities to limit the impact of a potentially serious incident.

Some of the recommendations deal with operational procedures, such as the use of additional tugboat, while others deal with the installation of equipment, such as new fendering systems and improved cargo transfer systems. The company also has established a new technical group to support all of its marine activities in the New York Harbor.

The three-month study, which cost more than $500,000, began on March 3 after marine operations were suspended at both facilities. It was conducted by a 12-member team consisting of ten Exxon employees from eight different operating units, and two representatives from an independent consultant, Arthur D. Little.

Team members had a combined total of 250 years of technical experience accumulated in more than 20 countries. In commenting on the team, Raymond said, "We selected the best people from around the world to ensure that we had the proper level of expertise in the areas of marine terminal operations and engineering, vessel operations, risk analysis, environmental assessment, and project management."

The scope of the team's efforts included all marine and terminal operations from the beginning of inbound maneuvering of barges and tankers to the conclusion of outbound maneuvering.

Initial study efforts focused on evaluating equipment and operating procedures and included discussions with Exxon employees as well as third parties, including the U.S. Coast Guard, harbor pilots, and other vessel operators.

GREENWICH, CT (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Strategic Information, Inc. today announced that it has reached an agreement in principle to acquire certain operating assets from Master Protection Corporation.

Under the agreement, the company will purchase the assets of Master Protection's Safety Distribution division and Coulson Technical division (the "safety divisions"), which together distribute a variety of safety supplies to industrial and commercial customers. The safety divisions operate from a headquarters office in Billings, Mont., as well as seven branch offices and two satellite offices across a seven-state area in the Western United States.

Master Protection reached an agreement in principle on May 31 to purchase the safety divisions, as well as other operating assets in the fire protection business, from Henry's Safety Supply Company. Upon completing its purchase from Henry's, Master Protection will then sell the safety divisions to the company at cost. The purchase price was not disclosed.

The proposed acquisition results from the company's previously announced intention to pursue acquisition opportunities in businesses whose profitability meets its goals and that would benefit from being operated by a publicly held company. If the purchase of the safety divisions is consummated, the company intends to seek further acquisition opportunities in the safety supplies distribution business.

The company will purchase the safety divisions in exchange for consideration including cash and assumption of certain indebtedness. The company will fund the purchase from available cash and from a short- term borrowing from Finevest Services, Inc., which is anticipated to be repaid from the proceeds of a subsequent private placement of equity. Both Master Protection and Finevest are affiliates of the company. The company's agreement to acquire assets from Master Protection is subject to the completion of a definitive purchase agreement and approval of the company's board of directors.

The company's common stock is traded in the over-the-counter market.

HOUSTON (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Oklahoma-Arkansas Pipeline Co. has received precedent agreements from shippers requesting transportation for 535 million cubic feet per day (MMcf/d) of natural gas from the Arkoma Basin through the company's proposed 500 MMcf/d Oklahoma-Arkansas pipeline. These precedent agreements will be converted to firm transportation contracts upon Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) certification of the project. Among those requesting firm service are Arco, Panhandle Eastern Corp., International Paper, National Fuel Gas Co., CMS Energy Corp. and Reliance Pipeline Co.

Pre-construction engineering work is proceeding along the 352-mile pipeline route from Pittsburg County, Okla. to Independence, Miss. Aerial surveys of the route have been completed, and environmental teams are conducting archaeological reviews, wetlands assessments and a study of threatened and endangered species. An evaluation of major river crossings is also underway.

The Oklahoma-Arkansas Pipeline Co. has requested an optional expedited certificate from FERC to construct the $273 million pipeline. The request was filed on Oct. 31, 1989. With timely approval by FERC, construction of the project will begin in the spring of 1991 with the first volumes scheduled to flow in the fall of 1991.

Oklahoma-Arkansas Pipeline Co. is a general partnership comprised of Sabine Pipe Line Co. and subsidiaries of CMS Energy Corp., International Paper, National Fuel Gas Co., Panhandle Eastern Corp., Reliance Pipeline Co. and The Williams Companies Inc.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The Quick & Reilly Group, Inc. (the company) would like to correct the press release dated March 28, 1990 in which the company stated that the write-off for the company's acquisitions would be 43 cents per share net of tax benefits for the fiscal year ended Feb. 28, 1990 and a projected thirty four cents per share for the current fiscal year.

The 34 cents per share charge previously projected for the current fiscal year included the write-off of only JJC Specialist Corp.'s acquisitions. Had the acquisition costs of all the company's acquisitions been included, the projected charge for the current year should have been stated as 41 cents per share in March's press release.

Because three of the company's subsidiaries have elected to change their state and local income tax reporting methods to a consolidated basis, their effective tax rate is now down to a lower level than in previous fiscal years. This lower effective tax rate serves to decrease the tax benefit on acquisition write-off charges; therefore the company's earnings for the year ending Feb. 28, 1990 were charged 47 cents per share after tax benefits for acquisition write-offs. This does not change the earnings for the year ended Feb. 28, 1990.

The company's revised projection for the fiscal year ending Feb. 28, 1991, indicates earnings will be charged approximately 44 cents per share due to acquisition cost write-offs net of tax benefits.

The company estimates that earnings for the first quarter ended May 25, 1990 will equal the first quarter of last year at 31 cents per share. With the market at record levels, we are seeing favorable increases in retail investor activity.

The first stage of this agreement will bring 150 travel counselors from Boston; Syracuse, Buffalo, Rochester and Albany, N.Y.; and Hartford, Conn. for a luncheon aboard Apple's SS Meridian before she sails to Bermuda. Following the June 10 luncheon, guests will be treated to a tour of Philadelphia before returning home from Midway's newest hub -- Philadelphia.

Recently cited by Mayor W. Wilson Goode for his efforts to promote cruising and tourism from Philadelphia, Apple President John Mullen stated "This new agreement with Midway Airlines has the potential to make Philadelphia one of the country's top cruise ports."

"This week, with a 5 percent share of the nation's cruise passengers, Philadelphia is claiming an ever-growing segment of the multibillion-dollar cruise vacation market," said Mullen.

Philadelphia-based Apple Vacations is one of the nation's largest, most successful vacation companies. In 1990, Apple will make vacation dreams come true for more than 300,000 Americans.

RESTON, VA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Visix Software Inc. today announced that it has signed agreements with The BIM Corporation of Belgium, X Open Technology, a subsidiary of The Lionel Singer Co. of Australia and Workgroup Technologies Corporation (formerly CAD/CAM Technologies) of Massachusetts.

According to the agreements, Looking Glass will be marketed and distributed by these companies throughout Belgium, Australia, Canada, and the United States.

Implemented in full compliance with the OSF/Motif look-and-feel standard, Looking Glass is an icon- and mouse-driven graphical interface for UNIX which runs on workstations and X Window System terminals. Looking Glass provides the full power of UNIX with an ease-of-use previously associated only with microcomputer operating environments.

"BIM, The Lionel Singer Co. and Workgroup Technologies Corp. have repeatedly demonstrated their ability to recognize and penetrate emerging markets and to become major suppliers within them," said George Hoyem, Visix's vice president of sales. "The demand for Looking Glass in the European, Australian, and North American marketplace has been overwhelming and we are very excited to have these companies as our strategic partners."

Commenting on their agreement, Lionel Singer, managing director of the Lionel Singer Corporation, said: "We are happy to be associated with Visix Software Inc., and with their truly leading-edge user interface software, Looking Glass. Through our exclusive distributorship agreement with Visix, Looking Glass now becomes a key product in our plans to expand and develop the X Window marketplace in Australia."

Lou Guercia, vice-president of marketing, Workgroup Technologies Corporation, said: "We are very excited to be carrying Visix's products. The quality, ease-of-use and compatibility of Looking Glass on a Sun workstation will do for the workgroup what the Macintosh did for the individual."

BIM's president and chief executive officer, Michel Vanden Bossche-Marquette, added, "Looking Glass' unmatched performance and features as a desktop manager, and its availability on a number of different platforms make it the market leader."

BIM is a $25 million, high growth, privately held Belgium group specializing in information technology. BIM distributes and supports Sun Microsystems, Convex, NCD, Retix, Wellfleet, Sybase, Frame and IDE in Belgium and Luxembourg. These leading vendors have all been identified by BIM at their earliest stage, underlying one of BIM's key characteristics, its ability to anticipate industry trends.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Arie L. Kopelman, president and chief operating officer, Chanel, Inc., today announced a sweeping corporate reorganization which will have significant impact on how the company does business on a worldwide basis.

With the explosive business increases that Chanel has enjoyed, it has become clear to the company that there is a need to strengthen its international management organization. This has become particularly true because the growth is as dramatic in Europe and the Pacific Rim countries as it has been in the United States.

The changes, effective June 25, are the result of a thorough analysis of Chanel's worldwide sales needs. The restructuring will provide for continued growth of the company on an intelligent, step-by- step basis and will help to efficiently manage the pace of growth around the world in a period of rapid change.

According to Kopelman, the restructuring has one basic goal: "to put even more distance between Chanel and the competition. A strengthened international management group, working with buttoned-up profit centers, positions us well to continue moving forward professionally on all fronts."

Jean Hoehn Zimmerman has been promoted to the newly created position of senior vice president, marketing and sales; she maintains responsibility for marketing, advertising and public relations and assumes responsibility for sales and sales administration. The consolidation of sales and marketing is a major restructuring for Chanel, Inc. and addresses the dramatically changing retail environment. Hoehn Zimmerman is currently senior vice president, marketing and advertising.

William Spence has been named senior vice president Administration, International, and will move into a major role with Chanel's management corporation (this group monitors the activities of Chanel's companies around the world). He will supervise efforts, on a worldwide basis, directed at protecting trademarks and counteracting gray market and counterfeit activity. Spence is currently senior vice president, Sales and Administration.

Robert Roof has been promoted to senior vice president and is elected a member of the operating committee, where he will share in the management of the overall American company. He will continue to run the sales force at Chanel, Inc. and will now report directly to Hoehn Zimmerman. Roof is currently vice president, national sales.

WHITE PLAINS, NY (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - NYNEX Corporation (NYSE: NYN) today announced that approximately 4,000 of its employees had taken advantage of the company's special retirement incentive program for managers, which ended May 31.

Of the total, approximately 2,100 managers retired from New York Telephone about 900 from New England Telephone, some 600 from NYNEX Service Company and the remainder from other parts of the business.

A pre-tax charge of approximately $41 million will be taken against the company's second-quarter financial results in connection with the retirements.

The company previously had taken pre-tax charges of $71 million in the fourth quarter of 1989 and $39 million in the first quarter of 1990 to account for the program.

"We have accomplished everything we set out to do," said NYNEX Chairman William C. Ferguson. "Our intent was to 'right-size' the management workforce consistent with the requirements of the marketplace and to control costs. A reduction of 4,000 managers -- without layoffs -- was a positive step for both the company and its employees.

"While we lose the valued experience these employees have brought to the corporation and its customers, the overall benefit to the company will be realized in reduced costs and increased operating efficiencies," he said.

Ferguson pointed out that, in general, work performed by retiring employees will be reassigned to current employees. However, a certain number of people will be hired over the next few months on an as-needed basis.

The plan, which began Jan. 1, provided that employees would receive an additional five years toward their ages and toward their service dates in calculating their pensions. The company also adjusted the five-year base salary period used for calculating an employee's pension to 1983 through 1987, from the previous period of 1981 through 1985. The shift in the base period is now a permanent part of the pension plan.

The management retirement incentive plan was in addition to a special non-management retirement incentive the company conducted at the end of 1989. Approximately 1,500 non-management employees retired under that plan.

JACKSON, MS (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The state of Mississippi and Georgia-Pacific Corp. (NYSE: GP) today jointly announced plans to greatly expand the company's use of the Port of Pascagoula, primarily for export of pulp to North European and Mediterranean markets.

Georgia-Pacific's use of the port could more than double in the next few months as the company implements its plan to consolidate shipment of export products through the Mississippi port.

Georgia-Pacific's newly acquired pulp manufacturing facility at New Augusta, Miss., Leaf River Operations, has used the Port of Pascagoula to export about 85,000 metric tons of market pulp per year.

"We have additional cargoes we can direct to Pascagoula, which should boost that total to the range of 150,000 to 175,000 tons per year," according to T. Marshall Hahn Jr., Georgia-Pacific's chairman and chief executive officer.

"It means Georgia-Pacific will be continuing its service to North European markets and adding charter vessels to markets such as Spain and Scotland. We'll also add shipments of about 60,000 to 70,000 tons of business each year to Italy," he said.

"We welcome this increased business and appreciate Georgia-Pacific's continuing commitment to our state," said Mississippi Gov. Ray Mabus. "The state and the community have pledged their full cooperation in making the port and the company successful.

"Georgia-Pacific's increased business will have a multiplier effect for our port," the governor added. "Their business will attract additional ships and shippers to Pascagoula, which will make our port a much more attractive export point for other companies. We value this decision because of the increasing importance of making our ports more vital business centers."

Georgia-Pacific's decision to increase export shipments through the Port of Pascagoula coincides with current construction of a new terminal which will expand the port's capacity. The company plans to phase in its consolidation of shipments through the port over the next few months as that construction project is completed.

The company's first additional business for the port will occur June 14 or 15 with loading of 1,800 tons of pulp on a vessel bound for La Pallice, France. That will be followed by another 4,000 to 5,000 tons bound for the Mediterranean to be loaded during the first week of July.

ST. LOUIS (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - McDonnell Douglas (NYSE: MD) has promoted Peter J. Von Minden to vice president and general manager of the F-15 Eagle program. He had been the program's deputy general manager since 1988.

Von Minden, 50, joined McDonnell Douglas in 1962 as a spares planner. In 1978, Von Minden became product support manager for the Peace Sun program, in which export versions of the F-15 were delivered to Saudi Arabia. In 1980, he was named product support manager for all international F-15 programs.

Von Minden became manager of integrated logistics support for McDonnell Douglas' Advanced Tactical Fighter (ATF) program in 1984 and was later promoted to director. In 1988, he became deputy general manager of the F-15 program.

Von Minden received a bachelor's degree in aircraft maintenance engineering in 1962 from Parks College of St. Louis University. In April 1990, he received a master's degree in business administration from Maryville College.

Von Minden served in the Missouri Air National Guard from 1959 to 1966. He is a private pilot and licensed aircraft and engine mechanic. In 1986, the Society of Logistics Engineers honored Von Minden with the D.J. Arbuthnot Award for Innovative Logistics Management.

McDonnell Douglas builds the F-15 in St. Louis. More than 1,200 F-15s are in service with the U.S. Air Force, U.S. Air National Guard, and with the air forces of Israel, Japan and Saudi Arabia.

- ConAgra Sees Beatrice as Major Strategic Opportunity
- Beatrice Will Add Many Prominent National Branded Consumer Food Products
- Beatrice Will Bring ConAgra A Strong Sales and Distribution System For Shelf-Stable Grocery Products
- ConAgra Expects Beatrice Will Not Dilute ConAgra's Earnings Per Share in New Fiscal Year
- ConAgra Expects Record Earnings and Return on Common Equity Over 20 Percent in New Fiscal Year

ConAgra Inc. (NYSE: CAG) and Beatrice Co., two leading U.S. food companies today jointly announced a definitive agreement for ConAgra to acquire Beatrice from Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. partnerships and management investors for a combination of cash and stock valued at $1.34 billion. The companies expect to conclude the transaction following federal government review under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Act.

Charles M. Harper, ConAgra's chairman and chief executive officer, commented, "This is clearly a major strategic opportunity for ConAgra. Beatrice brings an array of leading consumer food products with well-known brands such as Hunt's, Wesson, Manwich, Orville Redenbacher's, Peter Pan, Snack Pack, Swiss Miss, La Choy, Swift Premium, Butterball, Eckrich, Reddi-Wip and others.

"One of ConAgra's most important long-term objectives has been to establish a strong sales and distribution system to the shelf-stable section of the grocery store. Beatrice will fulfill that objective."

Harper continued, "We are enthusiastic about the full range of Beatrice businesses, and we believe Beatrice offers long-term value to ConAgra and our stockholders. We are also optimistic about near-term earnings prospects.

"In ConAgra's fiscal year 1991 which began May 28 we presently expect record earnings per share, including Beatrice's results. Moreover, based on anticipated results and the transaction structure, we presently expect Beatrice will be non-dilutive to the earnings per share level in our pre-Beatrice fiscal 1991 plan."

Frederick B. Rentschler, president and chief executive officer of Beatrice, said, "We are delighted that Beatrice will be part of a successful, fast-growing food company which has a long-term commitment to continued growth of our businesses. The potential for enhancing the strength of both companies' operations is substantial. Our management teams are excited about the future for Beatrice as our company joins the ConAgra family."

PALO ALTO, CA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Dialog Information Services Inc. today asked a federal court to order the American Chemical Society to provide full access at reasonable rates to its taxpayer- subsidized database of chemical information.

In a suit filed in Washington, Dialog charges that restrictions on access to the database, which was developed with the aid of more than $15 million in federal funding, violate the antitrust laws and prevent free and open competition between the Society and other suppliers of online chemical information.

Dialog, of Palo Alto, is a pioneer in the field of providing electronic information retrieval services to scientific, academic, business and government researchers. Since 1974, Dialog has provided online access to portions of the chemical information database as a licensee of the Society.

Since 1980 ACS has competed in the distribution of the database by offering access through its own tax-exempt retrieval service, operated by the Society's Chemical Abstracts Service division (CAS).

The CAS database is the world's most comprehensive electronic source of chemical information and covers the literature on over 10 million chemicals. It is an essential research tool for chemists around the world.

Dialog's lawsuit charges that through the Society's government- subsidized monopoly over the database, CAS is seeking total control over the online chemical information market here and abroad.

"As a customer and a competitor of CAS, we at Dialog are unfairly disadvantaged by the Society's determination to limit the flow of information to our 100,000 customers in over 100 countries worldwide," said Dr. Roger K. Summit, Dialog's president. "CAS's actions have severely damaged our business and poorly served consumers of online chemical information.

"The Society's not-for-profit status does not give CAS the right to engage in practices which result in forcing tax-paying companies out of the market," Summit said.

In its lawsuit, Dialog charges that the Society has damaged the company by limiting Dialog's access to information in the CAS database, by withdrawing access to previously available data, and by other monopolistic practices.

In its legal complaint, Dialog seeks an injunction that will restore a fair licensing structure for the future. The complaint charges that the Society's monopolistic practices violate the Sherman Act and have caused Dialog to suffer damages exceeding $50 million.

SALT LAKE CITY (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Bonneville Pacific Corp. (NASDAQ: BPCO) today announced the completion of the capacity test and declaration of commerical operation for the 28.5 megawatt combined cycle cogeneration plant at Watsonville, Calif. The plant, which cost approximately $38 million is expected to add approximately $12 million to the company's revenues for the current fiscal year.

Bonneville Pacific owns 100 percent of the project through its ownership interests in Watsonville Cogeneration Partnership. The Watsonville plant will sell power to Pacific Gas and Electric under a 20 year standard offer contract and will sell steam to Norcal-Corsetti, one of the largest vegetable processors in the state of California.

The project, which had a 16-month construction schedule, was completed on time, despite the impact of the October 1989, San Francisco earthquake.

Bonneville Pacific is a developer and owner of independent power facilities. The Watsonville facility represents the 29th project which has been successfully developed by Bonneville Pacific. The 29 completed projects represent 214.5 megawatts of generating capacity.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - At 6 p.m. EDT today, Robert J. Herrmann senior deputy comptroller for Bank Supervision, Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC), declared Texas National Bank, El Paso, Texas, insolvent. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) was appointed as receiver.

The bank became a matter of concern to the OCC in 1989. Loans directly and indirectly related to former bank directors and officers resulted in an excessive amount of losses. Lax administration of the bank by these former directors led to further deterioration in the bank's condition.

The OCC obtained commitments from the board of directors to undertake measures to correct the bank's problems. However, these efforts were unsuccessful and losses finally exhausted the bank's capital funds, resulting in its insolvency.

Texas National Bank received a national bank charter on Oct. 3, 1983. On April 30, 1990, it had total assets of approximately $125 million.

The FDIC is expected to release additional information later today.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Granges Inc. (AMEX: GXL) is pleased to announce that ore is now being hoisted through the newly commissioned 2,100 foot shaft at the Trout Lake mine in Manitoba.

The three-year shaft project was commenced in August 1987. The first phase of the project, which provides connection directly from the North Zone to the shaft was completed on schedule.

The final phase, which will allow connection directly to the South Zone, is expected by the mine's operator, Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co., Limited, to be completed in October 1990. In the meantime, ore from the South Zone is being transported indirectly to the shaft through the North Zone ore handling system.

The shaft replaces truck haulage as the primary means of transporting ore to the surface and is expected to allow more efficient recovery of ore at depth. Granges has a 29 percent interest in the Trout Lake mine which is expected to produce 860,000 tons of ore in 1990.

DETROIT/TOGLIATTI, USSR (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - General Motors Corporation (NYSE: GM) and Volga Auto Works (VAZ), the leading vehicle manufacturer in the Soviet Union, have signed agreements enabling GM to become the first American-based auto manufacturer in modern times to establish a working relationship with the Soviet auto industry.

VAZ has agreed to purchase engine management emissions control subsystems and components from GM valued at nearly $1 billion (U.S.) over the life of the contract. In addition, VAZ and GM will discuss the formation of a joint venture to manufacture catalytic converters in the USSR. VAZ operations are located in Togliatti, 700 miles southeast of Moscow.

"Pollution respects no international boundaries; neither should the proven technology to control it," said William E. Hoglund, executive vice president of GM's Automotive Components Group and the Power Products and Defense Operations Group. "VAZ selected General Motors for this program because of GM's expertise in emissions control, led by AC Rochester Division, and because of our global perspective and technological resources."

General Motors will supply fuel injection and emissions control subsystems and other engine management components, initially for two VAZ models.

VAZ intends to use GM technology to equip its vehicles to meet current and expected worldwide emissions standards. Engine management systems for several other Soviet passenger cars may be added to the program within a few years.

The VAZ-GM agreement includes applications engineering necessary to adapt fuel injection and emissions control systems to the 1.5 and 1.7 liter engines used in Lada models and, potentially, to other Soviet engines.

Engineering support will be provided by the European Technical Center of GM's Automotive Components Group in Bascharage, Luxembourg, and by GM divisional engineering centers in the United States.

GM shipments to VAZ could begin in early 1992, extending through 1997. Initially, components will be manufactured in GM plants in the United States and Europe. Final sourcing decisions have not been made at this point.

The engine management components will be manufactured by AC Rochester, the lead division in the VAZ-GM venture; Delco Remy and Packard Electric, other divisions in GM's Automotive Components Group, and Delco Electronics Corporation, a GM-Hughes Electronics subsidiary.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Oppenheimer Capital, L.P. (NYSE: OCC) today reported net income of $12,839,000 or $1.60 per unit for the fiscal year ended April 30, 1990, compared to net income of $11,045,000 or $1.38 per unit for the fiscal year ended April 30, 1989, an increase of 16.2 percent.

Net income for the fiscal quarter ended April 30, 1990 amounted to $3,201,000 or $.40 per unit compared to net income of $2,835,000 or $.35 per unit for the fiscal quarter ended April 30, 1989, an increase of 12.9 percent.

The partnership owns a 32.3 percent general partnership interest in Oppenheimer Capital (the "operating partnership"), one of the largest independent investment management firms in the United States.

Joseph M. La Motta, Oppenheimer Capital's president and chief executive officer, reported that the Operating Partnership reached new highs for the year for assets under management, investment management fee revenue and operating income.

- Total assets under management were $19.4 billion at April 30, 1990, up 17.0 percent from $16.6 billion at April 30, 1989.

- Investment management fee revenue increased 25.4 percent to $67.8 million for the year ended April 30, 1990 from $54.1 million for the year earlier period.

- Operating income for the year ended April 30, 1990 rose 23.2 percent to $31,969,000 from $25,943,000 for the year earlier period.

La Motta stated that Oppenheimer Capital has one of its best years ever in the growth of assets under management from new accounts, client additions and market appreciation. Of the $2.8 billion increase in assets under management, $1.0 billion came from market appreciation and $1.8 billion from net new business and net client additions to existing accounts.

"We are pleased with the results of operations for the fiscal year just ended with investment management fee revenue and operating income growing faster than assets under management," La Motta said.

"During the past two years we have been developing new products which represent an important investment in future asset and earnings growth. While continuing to strengthen our position in the pension market, we are extending our services to smaller institutions and individual investors through our Quest for Value Family of Mutual Funds. We are also pleased with the progress of our Quest Cash Management Services division," La

CANTON, MA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Hills Department Stores, Inc. (NYSE: HDS) today announced that sales for the four-week period ended June 2, 1990 decreased 3.4 percent to $137.1 million from $141.9 million for the corresponding period in 1989. Same store sales for May 1990 decreased 4.1 percent. The comparable 1989 period was bolstered by grand opening sales and heavy advertising in the 33 converted Gold Circle locations.

Sales for the 17-week period ended June 2, 1990 increased 9.3 percent to $589.6 million from $539.4 million for the corresponding 17-week period a year ago. Same stores sales increased 5.4 percent during this period.

Hills reported sales for fiscal 1989 based on a 53-week year. Consequently the ending dates for 1990 fiscal months are one calendar week later than the corresponding 1989 fiscal month ending dates. Fiscal May 1990 total and same store sales results would have reflected decreases of 3.0 percent and 4.0 percent, respectively, on a comparable calendar basis. Results for the comparable 17-week calendar period would have reflected increases of 6.1 percent and 2.9 percent, respectivley.

Hills Department Stores, Inc. is a discount store chain, operating in 14 states, with 210 locations compared with 200 stores a year ago.

AMSTERDAM, NETHERLANDS (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Wolters Kluwer today released the following:

Teleroute - the leading transaction databank for the transport world in Europe - will become available to the approximately 1,200 international transport companies in Switzerland.

Wolters Kluwer has marketed Teleroute in various countries in Europe. In 1986, Teleroute started in France, after which Belgium, the United Kingdom the Netherlands, and - since last year - Germany followed. In Switzerland Teleroute will be represented by TELEWAYS (formerly Transpotel AG) in Zurich.

Every day Teleroute now offers approximately 6,000 freight offers from all European countries, through its approximately 15,000 users. In traffic to and from Germany and Italy alone, Teleroute exceeds the number of 2,000 daily offers. In 1989, Teleroute was consulted for over two million hours.

With the expansion into Switzerland Teleroute, with its open, neutral and European character, takes a new step ahead in the direction of Europe 1992. The Teleroute transaction system anticipates the need of the transport market - for economic as well as environmental reasons - for optimal use of load capacity.

GERMANTOWN, MD (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Rymac Mortgage Investment Corporation (AMEX: RM) today declared a 40 cent per share dividend for the second quarter of 1990 to be paid on July 16, 1990, to stockholders of record on June 29, 1990.

Representatives of management said that they are pleased with the continued outstanding dividend performance of the portfolio, and projections for the foreseeable future indicate that dividends in this range are likely.

Since its formation over one year ago, Rymac has declared seven consecutive 40 cent quarterly dividends. Management's strategy of self-hedged portfolio of mortgage derivatives has proven itself to be effective over a wide range of interest rate movements. This strategy was implemented by the company at the time of its initial public offering.

MOBILE, AL (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Mobil Exploration & Producing U.S. Inc. (MEPUS), an affiliate of Mobil Corporation (NYSE: MOB), today announced its Outer Continental Shelf Block 823 A-3 well flowed natural gas at a rate nearly twice the previous record for wells offshore Alabama.

The development well in 44 feet of water approximately four miles south of Dauphin Island tested natural gas at a daily rate of 62.3 million cubic feet per day (mmcfd) -- the energy equivalent of more than 11,000 barrels of crude oil. The previous record for an Alabama offshore well was about 36 mmcfd.

The Mobil well was drilled to a depth of 23,010 feet and tested the Norphlet formation through a 48/64-inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure during the test was 5,067 pounds per square inch. Total net pay was 322 feet.

Mobil's interest in the well is 50 percent. Partners are Texaco (25 percent), Conoco (12-1/2 percent), Exxon (7-1/2 percent), and AGIP (5 percent).

"We are delighted with these test results," said MEPUS President Charles

Spruell. "There is increasing demand throughout the country for clean-burning natural gas and this outstanding test of our OCS Block 823 Field is one more indication offshore Alabama is fast becoming one of the nation's most important new natural gas producing provinces."

Plans were announced earlier this year to construct the Block 823 Field gas treatment plant at the site of Mobil's existing Mary Ann field facility near Coden. Fabrication of an offshore platform is underway and production of natural gas from Block 832, the first field in the federal sector offshore Alabama, is to begin during the third quarter of 1991.

DALLAS (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Texas Instruments (NYSE: TXN) announced today that it is expanding its U.S. minority procurement thrust with special emphasis in those communities where TI has a significant presence.

The purpose of the program is to help bring more minority firms into the economic mainstream. This action will help strengthen the local supplier base and improve the social and economic climate of the community.

"Minority business development is more than an opportunity, it's a competitive necessity," said TI Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer Jerry R. Junkins. "Texas Instruments is committed to providing quality products that satisfy the needs of our customers throughout the world. As we enter the 1990's, it is clear that a strong supplier base in the United States is essential to compete successfully on a global scale."

In the United States, minority groups are now the fastest growing segment of the workforce and of the population as a whole. These demographic trends suggest that, in the coming years, a growing percentage of TI's suppliers will be minority-owned firms. TI's Minority Procurement Program is designed to identify those minority firms with real potential and target them for development.

TI has established a Minority Procurement Office to facilitate this program. This office will provide support for minority sourcing efforts and will be the focal point for training that will show TI employees how to identify and develop minority suppliers.

This office will also direct TI employees to sources such as trade fairs and minority business organizations in their local area. Dolores Connor, former manager of TI's Defense Systems & Electronic Group's Small Business Programs, has been named manager of this new office and has extensive experience in minority procurement.

In 1989, TI purchased $34 million worth of goods and services from more than 300 minority suppliers. Much of this volume was purchased through the successful minority procurement program in TI's Defense Systems & Electronics Group. TI expects to surpass its 1989 performance by a considerable amount in 1990.

TI defines a minority supplier as one that is at least 51 percent owned, controlled, and operated by U.S. citizens of a minority group. Minority group members are Black Americans, Hispanic Americans, Native Americans, Asian-Indian Americans, and Asian-Pacific Americans.

For years, TI has been a leader in bringing small businesses - including minority-owned companies - into the economic mainstream. "These relationships have helped increase the quality, flexibility and service of our supplier base," said TI's Dolores Connor, manager of the corporate minority procurement office. "We expect to reap these same benefits from our Minority Procurement Program."

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Consul Restaurant Corporation (NASDAQ: CNSL) today announced it expects to report improved revenues and earnings for the fiscal year ended May 31, 1990.

The company said it expects revenues to increase 12 percent for the fourth quarter and 10 percent for the fiscal year, compared with the year-ago periods. The improvement comes in large measure from comparable-unit revenue growth and new restaurant development, the company said. Full results will be released in about 30 days.

Last year the company reported revenues of $80,024,000 and net earnings of $65,000, or 1-cent per share.

Consul is the largest Chi-Chi's franchisee and operates 51 Chi-Chi's Mexican restaurants and one Magnolia's seafood dinner house in the Upper Midwest and Canada. Its common shares are traded on the NASDAQ National EXTON, PA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Intelligent Electronics Inc. (NASDAQ: INEL) announced today that the 1990 payment for its August 1989 acquisition of Connecting Point of America will be $12 million and that 90 percent of the value will be paid with Intelligent Electronics' common shares.

"The board of directors' decision to remit 90 percent of the payment with common shares will improve Intelligent Electronics' tangible net worth by approximately $10.8 million. Additionally, it reduces our debt to equity ratio from 32.5 percent at April 30, 1990, to 29.1 percent for the same period on a pro forma basis," said Richard D. Sanford, chairman and chief executive officer.

According to Sanford, the payment represents the maximum consideration possible, based on Connecting Point's earnings from operations for the period ended March 31, 1990. A final amount up to an additional $18 million may be payable based on Connecting Point's earnings for the period ending March 31, 1991.

Payment will be made this month with approximately $1.2 million in cash and the balance with common shares.

Intelligent Electronics is the nation's largest network of personal computer dealers. The network has more than 880 centers in three chains, including Connecting Point of America, Entre' Computer Centers and Todays Computers Business Centers.

EL SEGUNDO, CA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Hughes Electro-Optical Operations Inc., a subsidiary of Hughes Aircraft Co., has been awarded a $43.7 million contract to produce night targeting equipment for the U.S. Navy's primary aircraft, the F/A-18 Hornet.

The system is configured in a pod and is comprised of 12 weapon replaceable assemblies (WRAs) that can be readily accessed and replaced without the need for calibration, alignment, special tools or handling equipment.

The pod contains a FLIR (forward-looking infrared), and is mounted on the port nacelle. It will eventually be equipped with a laser and be used to deliver a variety of laser-guided and conventional weapons to their targets.

The firm-fixed-price contract awarded to Hughes was for various quantities of WRAs, two forward-looking infrared pods, and associated documentation for the pods, which are designated AN/AAS-38A.

The potential sales for night targeting pods is estimated between $500 million and $2 billion.

Production work will be performed at Hughes' Electro-Optical and Data Systems Group, El Segundo. Deliveries are scheduled to begin in September 1991 and will be completed in March 1992.

The Navy's Aviation Supply Office located in Philadelphia is administrating the contract.

In addition to the U.S., several countries operate F/A-18s, including Australia, Canada, Kuwait, and Spain. Korea and Switzerland have also selected F/A-18s for their forces.

LAWRENCEVILLE, NJ (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - A $7 million contract for refurbishing 35 commuter coaches has been awarded ABB Traction Inc. (ABB), a unit of Asea Brown Boveri Inc., by the Maryland State Railroad Administration (MSRA).

The contract involves the light overhaul of 22 cars currently in operation on the Maryland Rail Commuter Service (MARC) and medium overhaul of 13 cars that MSRA purchased from New Jersey Transit (NJT). The NJT cars will enable MSRA to extend service to Perryville on its Penn Line early next year.

Work on the first six New Jersey Transit cars to arrive at ABB's Elmira, N.Y. manufacturing facility is scheduled to begin at once. Delivery is scheduled to begin in March 1991, when ABB Traction will deliver the first four refurbished cars to MSRA, with the order to be completed in December 1991.

The work on the MARC cars involves a 40-year truck overhaul, interior and exterior cleaning, and some minor modifications to the electrical system. In addition, the work on the NJT cars will include restroom upgrades, seat cushion replacement, and other cosmetic changes.

ABB Traction Inc. designs, manufactures and markets rolling stock and electrical equipment for the rail transportation and mass transit industries throughout North America.

Asea Brown Boveri, headquartered in Stamford, Conn., with sales of approximately $7 billion and some 35,000 employees in the United States, provides products and services for the power, process, automation, environmental control, transit and other markets. It is part of the ABB Group, Zurich, the world's leading electrical engineering company with total annual sales of about $25 billion and 215,000 employees in 140 countries.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, IL (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Motorola learned today that its speech coder ranked first in the tests carried out by the Research and Development Center for Radio Systems (RCR) and was selected as the standard for Japan's next generation digital cellular technology.

Motorola won the contest against one European and six Japanese cellular manufacturers, based on the best speech quality of the device, which is very critical for the performance of a digital cellular system.

The key attributes of a speech coder are the quality of reproduced sound in terms of users' satisfaction and perception of its fidelity, coding and decoding delay time, ease of manufacturability and connectivity to the public network.

"We are pleased to have been invited to participate in the digital cellular standard setting process in Japan. We believe that we have contributed positively to it," said John P. Salcius, corporate vice president of Motorola, Inc. (NYSE: MOT) and general manager of the Cellular Subscriber Group's International Subscriber division.

"We will offer licensing of our essential speech coder technology for the Japan digital cellular market to all manufacturers on a royalty-free basis to help promote the continuing evolution and advancement of the cellular industry," added Salcius.

"This victory in Japan against a number of leading cellular manufacturers demonstrates once again Motorola's world leadership in digital cellular technology," said Morton Stern, vice president of Motorola, Inc. and director of the Radio-Telephone Systems Group's Digital Systems organization.

The Japan contest represents the second positive evaluation of Motorola's digital speech coder technology. Earlier this year the TIA (Telecommunications Industry Association) announced that Motorola's speech coder tested best for the U.S. Digital Cellular standard.

The European region will soon be evaluating this class of speech coders as a future enhancement to their GSM or Pan-European Digital Cellular System. Motorola is the world's leading designer, manufacturer and supplier of cellular systems, infrastructure equipment, and subscriber products.

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Norstan, Inc. (NASDAQ: NRRD), announced today that it is currently negotiating with a major supplier to work jointly in the sale of refurbished telecommunications equipment. The pending agreement provides that Norstan will be involved in the refurbishment and sale of secondary market equipment in the United States.

Norstan also announced that it expects operating income for the fourth quarter and year ended April 30, 1990, to be in line with security analysts' projections.

Norstan has been advised that New Summit, Inc., the company which purchased the assets of Summit Gear, Inc., from Norstan in 1987, is in default on certain of its loan covenants with its principal lender. Norstan is reviewing various alternatives and assessing the impact this situation may have on its $5.65 million investment in notes receivable and preferred stock of New Summit, Inc. Any potential reduction in carrying value of this investment would be recorded in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 as a non-operating loss.

Due to the timing and uncertainty of the New Summit, Inc., situation, Norstan, Inc., may delay its planned June 19, 1990, earnings announcement for the fourth quarter and year ended April 30, 1990.

Norstan, Inc., based in Maple Grove, Minn., is a multi-product communications services company that sells, services, installs and supports new and secondary market business telephone systems. The company has 1,200 employees in 10 states and 21 cities and serves over 8,000 customers.

UPPER SADDLE RIVER, NJ (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Western Union Corporation (NYSE: WU) and EDS announced today that they have signed a new 10-year agreement under which EDS will continue to provide information technology services in support of Western Union's management information systems.

The agreement has an approximate value of $250 million over the term of the contract, making it one of EDS's largest facilities management contracts.

Replacing a 10-year agreement signed by the two companies in 1985, the new contract aligns the data processing services provided by EDS more closely with Western Union's current business activities. EDS will furnish management and financial applications systems expertise to Western Union in addition to redesigning the company's major management information systems over the next two years.

"This new contract marks the beginning of a totally new relationship between Western Union and EDS," said Western Union President and Chief Executive Officer Robert J. Amman. "It realistically addresses the need to redesign systems with two major objectives in mind: the lowering of costs for both companies and the provision of management information systems that are aligned with our changing operational requirements."

John Harris, president of EDS's Communications Industry division, said, "We welcome the opportunity to extend our relationship with Western Union and are looking forward to participating in the development of the company's modern information systems."

EDS, which is based in Dallas and has operations in 27 countries, is the world leader in providing information technology services. Stock reflecting EDS's performance is traded on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol GME. EDS reported revenues of $5.5 billion in 1989.

Western Union Corporation provides a broad range of messaging, financial and other services, both domestically and internationally, to meet specific needs of business customers and individual consumers. Its wholly owned subsidiary, Western Union Financial Services, Inc., offers a variety of consumer financial services and is the world's leading provider of consumer money transfer services. HOUSTON (JUNE 7) PRNEWSWIRE - Browning-Ferris Industries, Inc. (NYSE: BFI), one of the world's largest waste services companies, announced today an agreement with Weyerhaeuser Paper Company to recycle up to 10,000 tons of paper per month in the Western United States.

The agreement, effective immediately, represents one of the nation's largest-scale paper recycling programs undertaken to date.

"This agreement marks another step in providing BFI's recycling customers with assured markets for the materials that we collect," said Bruce Ranck, executive vice president for North American Operations of BFI. "This program will bolster BFI's paper collection programs in the West and provide Weyerhaeuser with a valuable and renewable commodity."

Under the contract, Weyerhaeuser will buy newspaper, cardboard and office paper collected by BFI in participating recycling programs in Arizona, California, Nevada, Oregon and Washington. The paper recycling program will also extend to British Columbia, Canada. The newspaper portion of the collected material will be shipped to Weyerhaeuser's NORPAC Mill in Longview, Wash., for processing. The NORPAC facility features a new modern de-inking system that can process 500 tons of newspaper per day.

The BFI-Weyerhaeuser contract guarantees a tonnage purchase for newspaper, cardboard and high-grade office paper of approximately 120,000 tons per year.

"We anticipate that the demand for recycled fiber will continue to grow and Weyerhaeuser is committed to using this material where it is economically and technologically feasible to do so," said Jay Phillips, vice president of the Secondary Fibers Division for Weyerhaeuser.

"We believe that regional programs are the key to successful paper recycling programs," said Ranck. "The BFI-Weyerhaeuser paper recycling program will both promote the use of renewable resources and extend the lives of landfills by diverting millions of pounds of paper into the recycling stream."

This agreement is another in a series of steps taken by BFI to guarantee markets for the recyclable material it collects. In May 1989, BFI and Wellman, Inc., the nation's largest plastics recycler, announced that BFI would collect and transport post-consumer plastics to Wellman's recycling plants in South Carolina and Pennsylvania. The BFI-Wellman program was the first of its kind between a major waste services company and a major recycling company. BFI is currently shipping just under 100 tons of HDPE and PET plastics to Wellman for recycling each month. To date, BFI has shipped more than 1,150,000 pounds of plastics to Wellman.

RICHMOND, VA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Crestar Financial Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: CRFC) today announced a series of senior management promotions and assignment changes in connection with the upcoming retirement of vice chairman Samuel P. Cardwell.

Cardwell, who as previously annnounced will retire on July 1, oversees Crestar's mortgage subsidiary, bank card services, and government relations function.

"The reconfiguration of responsibilities we are announcing today reflects not only the flexibility of Crestar's organizational structure, but also our progress in building the management depth necessary to achieve our strategic and business goals," said Richard G. Tilghman, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Crestar Financial Corporation and Crestar Bank. The changes, effective July 1, are:

Marc C. Smith has been promoted to president and chief executive officer of Crestar Mortgage Corporation, a subsidiary of Crestar Bank, and will now report directly to James. M. Wells III, Crestar President.

Smith has been with the mortgage subsidiary since 1974, and most recently served as executive vice president and chief operating officer. Crestar Mortgage Corporation offers residential first mortgages to consumers through 15 offices in Virginia and Maryland.

Thomas N. Hammelman has been promoted to executive vice president-card services, and also will report directly to Wells. Hammelman joined Crestar Bank in early 1989 as manager of card services. Crestar's Card Services Group is responsible for delivering VISA and MasterCard products to consumers and retail businesses.

Kent A. Smack, who has served as president and chief executive officer of Crestar Mortgage Corporation since 1984 and most recently acted as merger manager for Crestar's acquisition of three Perpetual Bank offices, will transfer to Crestar's Lynchburg bank to become senior vice president and manager of the retail division. He will report to the president of the Lynchburg bank, A.S. Kemper, III.

Also in Lynchburg, Bernell G. Miller, currently manager of the Lynchburg retail division, will become senior vice president responsible for small business lending in the Lynchburg bank, and will report to Stuart J. Turille, executive vice president of commercial-Lynchburg.

J. Thomas Vaughan, senior vice president and corporate government relations officer, will now report to John C. Clark, III, senior vice president, general counsel and secretary.

MIAMI (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Grand Bay Hotels has formed a joint venture partnership with the current owners of the Hotel Jerome, the famous landmark property in Aspen, Colo.

As part of the agreement, Grand Bay Management Company will assume operating responsibilities for the Hotel Jerome.

"We are pleased that Grand Bay Hotels, a distinguished hospitality organization, has joined our team," said Jim McManus, general partner of the Hotel Jerome Limited Partnership, current owners of the property. "Together, we'll bring this historic hotel into a new era of renown."

Grand Bay Hotels is the five-star luxury hotel division of The Continental Companies (TCC) which operates such distinguished hotels as the Mobil Five Star Grand Bay Hotel in Coconut Grove, Fla., and the Stanhope Hotel, N.Y.

Sherwood M. Weiser, chairman and chief executive officer of TCC said, "I am personally delighted to be associated with the prestigious Hotel Jerome. I've known and admired the property as a frequent visitor to the area over the past 20 years. We want the local Aspen community to remain proud of this magnificent landmark. So, we plan to introduce many of the five-star features and services for which Grand Bay Hotels is known, while maintaining the property's historic character."

Grand Bay Hotels already has a presence in Aspen through Herron-Weiser Realty Enterprises, a company operated by Weiser's son, Douglas, and Isabel Herron. Weiser said Grand Bay Hotels also plans to continue its program of civic involvement and to remain a good corporate citizen serving the people of Aspen.

For more than 100 years, the Hotel Jerome has stood in the heart of Aspen. It was built during Aspen's silver boom of 1889 to rival the great hotels of Europe. Its Victorian style was carefully refurbished from 1985 through 1987 to preserve its original romantic ambience.

The Continental Companies, which was founded in 1970, currently has more than 50 hotels operating and/or under construction with approximately 16,000 rooms under management. Its hotels and projects are located throughout the United States, Canada, the Caribbean, Latin America and Europe.

BALTIMORE (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) has noted continued performance improvements in most areas in two recently released inspection reports of Baltimore Gas and Electric's (NYSE: BGE) Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant.

The reports covered time periods from late March to late May, including when Calvert Cliffs Unit One was restarted and in operation for ten days in April. They were received by BG&E earlier this week and are a topic of discussion in a meeting today between BG&E and the NRC in King of Prussia, Pa. The company is reporting to the NRC on its self-assessment of the start up.

According to the NRC report, the results of the inspections indicated that overall licensee performance during the inspection period was good, and performance improvements were noted in most areas.

The NRC reported that plant management proceeded through the unit start up and operation in a cautious and deliberate manner. BG&E's independent self-assessment agreed with this NRC observation.

The NRC report observed that Calvert Cliffs staff did identify some problems during the operating period and, in general, thoroughly evaluated each one. Continued attention to improving plant performance is warranted, according to the NRC.

"The operation period demonstrated that we are ready for safe and reliable operation after the current outage," said BG&E Vice President of Nuclear Energy George C. Creel. "This is an important step for Calvert Cliffs."

Calvert Cliffs Unit One is currently out of service due to a planned testing outage. It is scheduled to return to service in July. Calvert Cliffs Unit Two is currently undergoing repairs to its pressurizer sleeves and is scheduled to return to service by the end of the year. The units have combined to save BG&E customers $4.7 billion in fuel costs since they began operations in the mid-1970s.

SEOUL, KOREA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - United Airlines today called for expansion of passenger handling facilities at Kimpo International Airport that currently constrain the ability of United and other U.S. airlines to provide efficient service in Korea.

United Chairman and President Stephen Wolf is in Korea this week meeting with senior government officials. He noted that progress has been made to resolve some of the facility issues he addressed when he visited Seoul a year ago.

"We need to go much further to ensure that all airlines serving Korea have adequate facilities to serve their customers," Wolf said. "The U.S. has negotiated liberal bilateral agreements with a number of countries, including Korea, that give us the ability to operate our aircraft freely in and out of those countries. As our flights expand, it is equally important that our ground facilities expand accordingly to keep pace with our operations."

Wolf discussed United's facility needs at Kimpo International Airport with Chang-Shik Kim, Minister of Transportation; Dr. June-Bong Kim, chairman and president, Korea International Airport Authority, and other government officials.

The issue of inadequate airport ground facilities is critical for United and other U.S. carriers, such as Northwest, which are expanding their flight schedules to Seoul this summer, Wolf noted. Neither carrier has a proportionate share of ticket counters available in Kimpo's Terminal One.

United, for example, is expanding its operation at Kimpo in August to 49 flights weekly from its current schedule of 34 flights weekly. "United currently has 18 percent of the weekly flights at Terminal One, but only 10 percent of the ticket counter space," Wolf said. "In August, we will have 22 percent of the flights, but the same amount of ground facilities.

"U.S. carriers need to work hard to ensure they get a sufficient share of the resources available at Kimpo Airport," he added. "And United is prepared to work with the airport authority and the Korean government to see that an equitable plan is achieved."

CHICAGO (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Midway Airlines (NYSE: MDW) is making summer vacation travel easier -- and more affordable -- with a special fare that allows children to fly for $29 one-way to Florida, John P. Tague vice president of marketing and planning, announced today.

Midway's children's fares apply to youngsters aged 2 to 17 traveling with an adult who has purchased the applicable adult fare.

Fares range from $29 to $39 one-way for children and $89 to $109 one-way for adults based on round-trip purchase. A seven day advance purchase is required and tickets are non-refundable. Travel must be completed before Sept. 9. After June 27, adult fares will increase $10 each way. Other restrictions apply and seats are limited.

Kids' fares are valid for travel to Florida from Philadelphia; Boston; Detroit; Milwaukee, Wis.; Columbus, Ohio; Albany, Buffalo, and Rochester, N.Y.; Providence, R.I.; and Hartford/Springfield, Conn.

Midway also announced that it will offer senior citizen and student fares in selected markets where Midway competes with Eastern Airlines, according to Tague.

To qualify, senior citizens must be 62 years of age or older and students must be ages 12 to 21.

Round-trip fares for seniors and students range from $138 off-peak to $218 peak. Off-peak travel periods are Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday until noon and Saturday. Fares are based on mileage and vary by market.

No advance purchase is required, however, fares are non-refundable and require a minimum three-day or Saturday night stay. Travel must be completed by June 27. Seats are limited.

Midway Airlines offers coast-to-coast service from its hubs at Chicago's close-in Midway Airport and Philadelphia International Airport. Midway Airlines and its wholly owned subsidiary, the Midway Commuter, serve 59 destinations in the United States, Canada, U.S. Virgin Islands and the Bahamas.

LANSDALE, PA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - AEL Industries Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: AELNA) today reported sharply higher earnings and increased revenues in its first quarter ended May 25, 1990.

Net income jumped to $906,000 or $.23 per share on revenues of $33,768,000 compared to revenues of $30,865,000 and net income of $104,000 or $.03 per share in the first quarter of last year.

George King, chief financial officer, said, "Significant progress has been made toward improving the company's profitability here in the first quarter of fiscal 1991." In fiscal 1990, AEL had reported investments totalling $10.4 million on customer programs that offered long-term opportunities for profitable growth. The recording of these investments resulted in a reported loss of $9 million for that year.

King said that efforts are continuing to contain operating costs and improve productivity throughout the organization in order to increase the company's financial strength and competitive position. He also said, "Despite the current uncertainty in the defense budget and the highly competitive environment, we continue to identify bidding opportunities for AEL in the markets we serve." The company's backlog at the end of the first quarter was $204 million compared to $143 million a year ago.

AEL is a leading supplier of electronic defense systems and subsystems.

The company designs and manufactures sophisticated countermeasures, simulation and radar warning receiving systems, engages in the installation and integration of electronic and avionics equipment into military aircraft and provides state-of-the-art antenna systems, microwave integrated components and hybrid microelectronic circuits.

The Class A common stock of AEL Industries Inc. is traded in the over-the-counter market on the NASDAQ National Market System.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Marriott Corporation (NYSE: MHS) said today that it had completed the sale of the Munich Marriott Hotel to the Adachi Marriott European Venture, a joint venture formed between Adachi Enterprise Group and Marriott.

Marriott will continue to operate the hotel under a long-term management agreement.

Financing for the transaction was provided by Deutschebank. Terms were not disclosed.

The Munich Marriott Hotel is located in the Schwabing business district of Munich, West Germany. Opened in April 1989, it has 349 rooms.

Marriott said that the sale was consistent with its ongoing strategy of managing hotels rather than owning them as real estate. Last month, the company sold the Hamburg Marriott Hotel in Hamburg, Germany, to Fastighets AB Bohus, a subsidiary of AB Catena of Sweden.

The Adachi Marriott European Venture was formed in 1989 to acquire and develop up to nine Marriott hotels in Europe for approximately $400 million. The venture, which previously acquired the London Marriott Hotel, is interested in both full-service and Courtyard by Marriott properties.

Adachi Enterprise Group is a private company based in Tokyo, Japan, with interests in education, leisure activities and real estate.

Marriott Corporation, the world's largest operator of hotel rooms, has over 550 hotels around the world. The company's total sales exceeded $7.5 billion in 1989.

JOHNSTOWN, PA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Claude J. Incaudo, president and chief executive officer of Penn Traffic Co. (AMEX: PNF), said, "We are pleased to report that for the 13 weeks ended May 5, 1990, Penn Traffic achieved record first quarter sales, cash flow and operating income of $697.6, $36.8 and $20.3 million, respectively, compared to $508.9, $25.2 and $13.7 million in the prior year. The primary factor for the record levels was our acquisition of Big Bear in Apr. of last year and the continued growth of Penn Traffic's other supermarket businesses. Had we owned Big Bear for all of last year, our increases in sales, cash flow and operating income would have been 2.3 percent, 8.0 percent and 11.0 percent respectively. Obviously, we are very pleased with this outstanding rate of improvement.

The Penn Traffic Co. and its subsidiaries, excluding Grand Union, operate 209 supermarkets in Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio and West Virginia. The company owns and operates one of the largest dairy processing and ice cream manufacturing operations in Pennsylvania, along with two large bakery operations in New York and Ohio. It also operates 31 Harts department stores, along with four supermarket-discount department store combinations.

The company wholesales groceries to 124 independently-owned stores, which operate under the Riverside Markets, Bi-Lo Markets and Big M names, and provides wholesaling services to 114 independent supermarkets. Penn Traffic and its subsidiaries employ approximately 25,000. Grand Union operates 301 supermarkets and food stores under the Grand Union and Big Star trade names. Grand Union's stores are located in Vermont, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Georgia. Grand Union has approximately 22,000 employees.

VANCOUVER, B.C. (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Eureka Resources Inc. (Vancouver: EUK) and Asarco Exploration Company of Canada Ltd., a wholly owned subsidiary of ASARCO Inc., (NYSE: AR), ("Asarco"), reported today the companies have reached an agreement for the further exploration and development of Eureka's Frasergold Project in central British Columbia.

Asarco can earn a 50 percent interest in the property on completion of a feasibility study and a decision to place the project into commercial production. The agreement requires expenditures by Asarco of $1.4 million in 1990, and up to $2.0 million in each of 1991 and 1992, as necessary to provide the feasibility study.

The Frasergold Project is located in the Cariboo area of central British Columbia, approximately 60 miles east of Williams Lake, and consists of 27 mineral claims encompassing approximately 10,000 acres. A potential geological reserve in excess of 1,000,000 ounces of gold has been indicated by drilling over a 1 1/2 km. strike length to a depth of 150 meters.

Company president, J.J. O'Neill, said the objective of ongoing exploration is to upgrade the indicated reserves to a minimum of 1.0 million ounces of mineable reserves, and explore the full length of the geochemical anomaly which extends for 12 kms.

O'Neill said the company is pleased with the terms of the Asarco agreement and, "the quality of the partner that has displayed a similar confidence in the Frasergold project as we have". "Having had the property tied up in litigation for two years has been a major set back. This agreement allows for aggressive development plans, and an early production decision," he added.

According to John Kerr, Eureka's vice president, plans for the 1990 program are well under way. The $1.4 million budget is to consist of 4,000 meters of HQ diamond drilling and 4,000 meters of reverse circulation drilling. A 4.5 ton bulk sample is to be collected from the existing underground adit for further metallurgical tests. If the results of these tests are conclusive, a $250,000 contingency has been allowed for further bulk sampling in 1990. The 1990 program will be managed by Eureka.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Mark C. Hungerford, chairman and chief executive officer of Transcisco Industries Inc. (AMEX: TNI.A, TNI.B) announced that a letter of intent has been signed with Piper Aircraft Corp. of Vero Beach, Fla., whereby Transcisco would make a substantial investment in Piper and in cooperation with Piper, be directly responsible for the world-wide management and operation of Piper's aftermarket parts distribution business through the establishment of a separate company. In addition, the proposed agreement, when finalized, allows Transcisco to receive warrants to acquire an unspecified amount of stock in Piper Aircraft Corp.

Hungerford stated, "The possible acquisition of the aircraft aftermarket parts distribution business of Piper is moving towards the company's objective of expanding its base of operations into other transportation related industries, and will provide a solid platform for the distribution of proprietary parts and services worldwide. With more than 90,000 Piper airplanes (43 types of certificated aircraft) flying in over 50 countries and with the average age of smaller aircraft in excess of 23 years old, the steady and overlooked parts business is a real opportunity for Transcisco. This alliance also provides Piper Aircraft with needed working capital to allow it to deliver its order backlog of aircraft, which Piper estimates to be over $200 million, and develop several new models where Piper already has signed orders and the new designs are truly innovative. We view this situation as a true partnership with Piper Aircraft."

Transcisco will also be represented on the board of Piper Aircraft. Transcisco is no stranger to the aircraft industry, having launched the aircraft leasing operations of PLM International in 1981 and still owning 36 percent of PLMI's common stock.

The terms of the proposed acquisition were not disclosed. Piper Aircraft was bought by M. Stuart Millar in 1987 after Piper had been owned by Lear Siegler Corp. and Bangor-Punta Corp. It had been listed on the New York Stock Exchange prior to these acquisitions.

Transcisco Industries has a railcar maintenance and retrofitting division, and owns 36 percent of PLM International, an AMEX-listed diversified equipment leasing company, and 20 percent of SOVFINAMTRANS, a U.S.S.R. railcar leasing company that specializes in tank cars with Transcisco's Uni-Temp heating system. Transcisco expects to diversify, both in equipment-types and geography, to proprietary transportation equipment, parts and operating businesses using its own unique technologies and its proven financing skills.

PITTSBURGH (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - PPG Industries (NYSE: PPG) said today its Chemicals Group and Essilor International of France have agreed in principle to form a joint venture to manufacture and market Transitions ophthalmic-quality lenses for consumer eyewear.

Formation of the new company, in which PPG would hold 51 percent interest, was approved today by the board of Essilor. Approval of PPG's board is also required. The company would be headquartered in St. Petersburg, Fla.

The firm would focus on manufacturing Transitions optical plastic photochromic lenses, which darken when exposed to outdoor light, developed and patented by PPG and Essilor. They would be sold exclusively to lens casters for ultimate distribution to consumers.

"The joint venture would combine the production, distribution and marketing capabilities of Essilor with the technical expertise in ophthalmic plastics demonstrated by PPG through the development of the photochromic dyes and monomers used in Transitions lenses," said Richard M. Rompala, PPG's Chemicals Group vice president.

"PPG's proposed joint venture with Essilor is consistent with our strategy to generate 40 percent of total chemicals revenues from specialty products by 1994," he said.

Essilor, headquartered in Paris, is Europe's largest ophthalmic company and the world leader in ophthalmic lenses. Its 1989 sales were about US$800 million, 73 percent of which were from ophthalmic lenses. Essilor is highly regarded for its worldwide manufacturing and distribution capabilities, and has an extensive presence in North and South America, Europe and the Asia-Pacific region.

PPG has been involved in the optical industry since before World War II. CR-39 monomer, developed by the company, is the most widely used ophthalmic plastic in the world.

The lenses are available in western Pennsylvania, Vermont, southern New Hampshire, western Tennessee, and in parts of Arkansas, Kentucky and Mississippi. Distribution of Transitions lenses throughout North America is planned for 1991, with wider international sales expected to begin in 1992.

DALLAS (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - American Airlines today announced that it flew 6.40 billion revenue passenger miles (RPMs) in May, a 3.5 percent increase over the 6.18 billion RPMs the airline flew last May. The traffic volume made it the fifth busiest month in American's history.

Cargo traffic continued its strong performance in May by climbing more than 17 percent.

Michael W. Gunn, American's senior vice president-marketing, said the traffic results were driven by continued emphasis on service quality and "especially strong" results on routes to Mexico, Europe and Asia. Overall, American's international traffic jumped 15.4 percent in May, he said.

The airline last month expanded its international services at the Chicago hub by introducing daily nonstop service to Glasgow, Munich and Duesseldorf.

American's available seat miles increased 5.1 percent in May, to 10.34 billion from 9.84 billion a year earlier. Passenger boardings rose 2.0 percent to 6,235,846 from the 6,115,704 boarded last May. The system load factor declined to 61.9 percent from 62.8 percent.

During the first five months of 1990, revenue passenger miles increased 6.6 percent to 30.0 billion from 28.2 billion in the same months of 1989; available seat miles rose 7.1 percent to 49.5 billion from 46.2 billion; the load factor fell to 60.7 percent from 61.0 percent; and passenger boardings jumped 5.1 percent to 29,403,422 from 27,979,928.

Freight ton miles increased 17.1 percent last month to 65.0 million from 55.5 million, while mail ton miles rose 3.2 percent to 22.4 million from 21.7 million.

During the January-May period, freight ton miles rose 21.8 percent to 300.3 million from 246.5 million. Mail ton miles jumped 23.5 percent to 112.4 million from 91.0 million.

"We continue to see significant robust growth at a time when the overall cargo industry is down," said William R. Boesch, American's vice president-cargo. "Our emphasis on quality service is directly responsible for American's success in air cargo."

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Pan American World Airways today reported that scheduled traffic in May increased 2.9 percent compared with May a year ago, from 2.539 billion revenue passenger miles (RPMs) to 2.612 billion.

In May of last year, the company's traffic was stimulated by aggressive trans-Atlantic pricing actions that it did not offer this year. As a result, revenue yields in May this year will be considerably higher than a year ago, resulting in a greater revenue increase than the percentage increase in traffic alone would indicate.

Available seat miles (ASMs) were up five percent, from 3.886 billion ASMs to 4.082 billion, while load factor, at 64 percent, was down 1.3 points from 65.3 percent reported a year ago. Traffic statistics include Pan American World Airways operations only, and do not include the Pan Am Shuttle or Pan Am Express flights.

Atlantic RPMs were up 1.5 percent, ASMs were up three percent and load factor, at 65.8 percent, was down one point. Latin American RPMs were up 10.4 percent, ASMs were up 11.4 percent, and load factor, at 57.9 percent, was down 0.5 point. U.S. domestic RPMs were up 1.3 percent, ASMs were up 5.2 percent, and load factor, at 64.4 percent, was down 2.5 points from 66.9 percent last year. Scheduled freight ton miles decreased 5.4 percent, from 68.5 million to 64.8 million.

For the first five months of the year, traffic was up 14.3 percent, from 10.353 billion to 11.830 billion. Capacity was up 8.7 percent, from 17.704 billion to 19.247 billion. Load factor was up 3 points from 58.5 percent to 61.5 percent. Scheduled freight ton miles were up 0.2 percent, from 305.3 million to 305.9 million.

FORT WORTH, TX (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Fort Worth-based TNP Enterprises Inc. (NYSE: TNP) today announced that it had reached a settlement with Enron Corp. (NYSE: ENE) covering all outstanding issues pending before the courts and the Public Utility Commission (PUC) of Texas between the two parties.

Parties to the settlement were various affiliates and subsidiaries of Enron and TNP Enterprises. TNP Enterprises' subsidiaries include Texas-New Mexico Power Co. (TNP) and Bayport Cogeneration Inc., and Enron's subsidiaries include Clear Lake Cogeneration Limited Partnership.

Among the agreements reached was the settlement of a lawsuit regarding the 1988 sale of the Capitol Cogeneration Co. Ltd. cogeneration facility in Pasadena, Texas.

The lawsuit was filed Oct. 6, 1989, by Clear Lake Cogeneration Limited Partnership in the 269th Judicial District Court in Harris County, Texas, against Texas-New Mexico Power Co., Bayport Cogeneration, Capitol Power Inc. and Capitol Cogeneration Co. Ltd.

In the lawsuit, Clear Lake sought a rescission of its purchase of the 375 MW gas-fired cogeneration facility, monetary damages, and declaratory judgment of the rates to be paid for cogenerated power from the cogeneration facility.

The settlement agreement disposes of all outstanding disputes between the parties without rescinding the sale and continues the agreement under which TNP purchases power from the Clear Lake facility.

Another part of the settlement involved Enron's agreement to withdraw its opposition to TNP's current proceedings before the PUC. These proceedings include TNP's effort to have the PUC reaffirm its earlier granting of a Certificate of Convenience and Necessity (CCN) to construct a lignite-fired power plant in Robertson County, Texas, and its application for necessary rate treatment for the power plant.

Other intervenors continue to oppose the CCN and rate application, and TNP said it will continue to negotiate with them to reach settlement. TNP will also continue to pursue all legal and regulatory avenues to resolve these issues.

In a related legal action regarding the CCN, Texas-New Mexico Power Co. filed an application for Writ of Error with the Texas Supreme Court on June 1 seeking to reverse a March 7 order of the Court of Appeals affecting the status of the company's CCN.

The Court of Appeals upheld an earlier district court ruling that the Aug. 7, 1987, order of the PUC of Texas granting the power company a CCN was not final. TNP expects a decision from the Supreme Court in the fourth quarter of 1990.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - T Cell Sciences, Inc. (NASDAQ: TCEL) announced today that results reported at the American Association of Immunologists meeting in New Orleans, show that T Cell Sciences' complement blocker is a potent inhibitor of complement- mediated inflammation and tissue death. The complement blocker is now being tested in preclinical animal studies to determine its ability to limit "reperfusion injury", the damage to the heart which occurs following a heart attack. The data presented on June 6, 1990 provide evidence that the complement blocker limits the infiltration of unwanted white blood cells to tissue where complement proteins have been activated. Limiting white cell infiltration reduces inflammation which in turn reduces tissue death.

"A drug with the ability to limit inflammation and tissue death could have therapeutic use in treating many diseases including stroke, infection, and autoimmune diseases such as rheumatoid arthritis and lupus," said James D. Grant, chairman and chief executive officer of T Cell Sciences. "We believe our complement blocker could become a unique anti-inflammatory treatment because it treats the cause of inflammation and not just the symptoms."

The abstract of the presentation on Wednesday, June 6, made by T Cell Sciences' scientist Grace Yeh and co-authored by G. Carson, H. Marsh, L. Berman and S. Ip, is titled "Recombinant Soluble Complement Receptor 1 (CR1) Inhibits Complement-Mediated Inflammation in Rat Arthus Reaction Model."

The complement system of proteins is a portion of the immune system which assists in the identification, destruction and elimination of damaged tissue. In some situations, as in the case of a heart attack, activated complement proteins contribute to unnecessary tissue damage. If preclinical studies continue to be successful, the company anticipates the filing of an Investigational New Drug (IND) application to the FDA in late 1991 to commence human clinical trials.

T Cell Sciences, Inc., SmithKline Beecham p.l.c. and Yamanouchi Pharmaceutical Co., Ltd. have signed a product development and worldwide marketing agreement related to this complement blocker.

Utilizing proprietary T Cell receptor and soluble receptor technology, T Cell Sciences, Inc. is developing pharmaceutical products to treat heart disease and autoimmune diseases as well as products for diagnosing and monitoring immune system disorders and cancer. Located in Cambridge, Mass., the company currently markets products to the scientific community and an FDA approved test kit to the diagnostic market.

RESTON, VA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - DynCorp (NASDAQ: DYNPP), a diversified professional and technical services firm, will open for operation a commercial aviation maintenance facility at the Amarillo International Airport on Aug. 1.

The announcement was made today at a press conference held at the Amarillo Civic Center.

DynAir Tech of Texas, Inc., one of three maintenance and overhaul facilities operated by DynCorp, will offer aircraft maintenance, composite structure repairs, component overhaul, and long-term storage activities for airlines, aircraft manufacturers, and other owners of transport aircraft. The DynCorp property lease includes 13 acres and provides for further expansion to a total of 40 acres.

According to DynCorp president Dan R. Bannister: "There has been a recent and dramatic increase nationwide in the demand for quality aircraft maintenance services. Our new Amarillo facility is designed to capitalize on this demand. Its central location will allow access from both the East and West Coast. In addition, the facility will accommodate the growing requirements of both standard and wide-body aircraft.

Bannister added that DynCorp will draw its workforce from Amarillo and the surrounding communities. The company is expected to hire more than 400 mechanics and other technical personnel by 1992.

Speaking on behalf of the city of Amarillo, Mayor Keith Adams stated: "We are extremely pleased to welcome DynCorp to Amarillo. DynCorp is a proven world leader in providing professional and technical services to the aviation industry, and we are confident they will be an outstanding corporate citizen in our community. This new industry for Amarillo is obviously exciting, and it marks the beginning of the development of the Amarillo International Airport into a world class industrial aviation facility. We wholeheartedly welcome DynCorp to Amarillo, and we pledge our total support to make this new venture highly successful for DynCorp and for all of the citizens of Amarillo."

DynAir Tech of Texas, Inc., will be managed by Fain Kaspar, a long- time Amarillo resident. According to Bannister: "DynCorp is pleased to welcome Fain to the DynCorp team. He is a seasoned manager with more than two decades of experience in the aviation industry." Bannister added that Kaspar's successful aviation career and his diverse knowledge of aircraft maintenance and engineering, human resources, operations and control, and community relations made him the ideal candidate to head the DynAir Tech of Texas, Inc., operation.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Russ Togs, Inc. (NYSE: RTS), a leading apparel manufacturer, today reported a net loss for the 13 weeks ended May 5, 1990, of $1,485,000, or $.21 a common share, as compared to net earnings of $766,000, or $.10 a share, last year. Net sales for the quarter were $50,016,000 as compared to $56,982,000 for this period a year ago.

Kenneth Sitomer, president of the company, noted that the loss for the period was in line with management's previously announced expectations. The loss was contributed to by the generally depressed state of the retail market, start-up costs for new divisions of the company, and a charge to earnings from additions to reserve for bad debts. Sitomer further stated that he anticipates improvement as sales by new divisions begin in the third and fourth quarters.

CHICAGO (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Burton R. Abrahams, former president of First Chicago Credit Corp. and a senior executive with Heller Financial Inc., has joined Fremont Financial Corp. as senior vice president and manager of the commercial finance company's Chicago operations.

"Burt Abrahams has had a major influence on the commercial finance industry, particularly in the Midwest," said Robert N. Tenney, president and chief executive officer of Fremont Financial, which specializes in asset-based loans to middle market companies. "We are in a extremely high growth phase, and Burt is an excellent candidate to oversee that growth in the Midwest and Eastern United States."

Fremont Financial's Chicago and Atlanta offices and the firm's St. Louis marketing department will report to Abrahams.

Most recently, Abrahams, 68, was chairman of the board of The Randolph Group Inc., a corporate financial advisory firm that arranges financing and mergers and acquisitions for middle-market companies. In 1985, he joined First National Bank of Chicago as senior vice president and for three years was president of the bank's asset-based finance department, First Chicago Credit Corp.

Previously, Abrahams had a 25-year career with Walter E. Heller International Corp. (now Heller Financial Inc.) He held a variety of senior management positions with the Heller organization, including president of the Heller Overseas Corp., a network of factoring subsidiaries in 24 nations, and vice president in charge of the company's 15-state Midwest operations. Following the Fuji Bank acquisition of Heller in 1984, Abrahams was nominated to the Heller Financial board of directors and was a member of the company's executive credit committee.

Abrahams is a past president and chairman of the National Commercial Finance Association and holds a bachelor's degree in economics from Northwestern University. He is also a member of the board of trustees of Roosevelt University.

Founded in 1969, Fremont Financial Corp. is the commercial finance subsidiary of Fremont General Corp., a public financial services holding company traded on the National Market System with assets of more than $1.5 billion. Fremont Financial is based in Santa Monica, Calif. and has offices in Chicago, St. Louis, Atlanta and the San Francisco Bay Area.

FORT WORTH, TX (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The Western Company of North America (NYSE: WSN) today announced that it is studying, with the assistance of its financial advisor, Wertheim Schroder & Co., the advisability of separating, at least partially, its two principal business segments, pressure pumping services and offshore drilling. Among the alternatives being considered is a partial spin-off of the offshore business to existing stockholders of Western. No assurances can be given that the company's board of directors will decide to implement any such transaction.

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Sheldon R. Erikson stated that "The board's decision will depend upon whether separating the two businesses is determined to be in the best interests of Western and its stockholders."

The Western Company of North America provides pressure pumping services which include cementing, fracturing and acidizing, and offshore drilling internationally. Western's common stock is traded on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol WSN.

PLYMOUTH, MI (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Highland Superstores, Inc. (NASDAQ: HIGH) today reported a loss of $6,684,000, or $.37 per share, for the first quarter of fiscal 1990, compared to a loss of $8,518,000, or $.47 per share, for the first quarter of the prior year.

Results for the quarter reflect the continued industry-wide weak demand for consumer electronics and appliances and intense competition in the company's markets. The company expects these conditions to continue in the near term and is continuing its efforts to reduce expenses and increase sales. The first-quarter results do not include the results of four stores, one in Shreveport, La., and three in Milwaukee, which were recently closed as part of a previously announced plan. The company also noted that the first quarter historically reflects the weakest operating performance of the year due to seasonal factors.

The company continues to implement its strategy to further penetrate and strengthen its existing markets. Three new stores (two in Massachusetts and one in Chicago) are expected to be opened and two stores (one in Ann Arbor, Mich., and one in Dallas) relocated during the current fiscal year, although one of the relocations might take place in early 1991.

The company also plans to remodel a number of existing stores in both fiscal 1990 and 1991 and is negotiating leases for several additional store locations in existing markets for opening in fiscal 1991.

Highland Superstores, Inc., headquartered in Plymouth (Detroit), is one of the largest volume specialty retailers of consumer electronics and appliances in the United States. The company currently operates 89 retail stores in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, New York and Texas.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The Hallwood Group Incorporated (NYSE: HWG) earned $600,000, or 10 cents per share, in the third quarter ended April 30, compared to a loss of $10.6 million, or $2.27 per share, in the same quarter last year when the company reserved $11.5 million for losses related to Alliance Bancorporation.

Revenue in the 1990 quarter was $23.2 million, including $18.2 million from Brookwood Companies Incorporated, Hallwood's wholly owned textile products subsidiary. Third-quarter 1989 revenue was $8.9 million, including $6.7 million for 1-1/2 months of Brookwood operations.

At the end of nine months, Hallwood had reduced its loss for the year to $431,000, or 8 cents per share, compared to a loss of $9.6 million, or $2.05 per share for the same period a year ago.

Nine-month revenue for the current fiscal year was $61.3 million, including $52.5 million from Brookwood, vs. $14.8 million for the same period a year ago when Brookwood accounted for $6.7 million.

Third-quarter fees from financial services rose to $1.6 million, from $280,000 last year, as a result of recognizing a $1.1 million fee for guaranteeing financing for ShowBiz Pizza Time, Inc. Originally, the fee was amortized over the five-year term of the loan, but with refinancing now secured entirely by ShowBiz, the guarantee was released, thus allowing Hallwood to recognize the balance of the fee immediately.

The quarter's income from affiliates (ShowBiz, Integra - A Hotel and Restaurant Company and Hallwood Energy Corporation) declined to $244,000 from $475,000 last year because of substantial losses at Integra.

Real estate operations were boosted by revenue from the recently purchased Holiday Inn - Lido beach hotel in Sarasota, Fla. and the office-retail complex in Brighton, England.

Brookwood contributed $133,000 to third-quarter 1990 net income. During 1-1/2 months of the prior-year quarter, the company lost $27,000.

PITMAN, NJ (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - K-Tron International Inc. (NASDAQ: KTII), a major producer of gravimetric feeders, blenders and security systems, today officially announced the introduction of a major new line of feeders -- K-Tron modular feeders.

Following more than three years of research and development, customer surveys and product testing, K-Tron is introducing a modular line of feeders that meets the needs of a rapidly changing feeder marketplace. Process manufacturers indicate that their process lines have to become more adaptable to change, respond more quickly to changing market conditions and provide operating efficiencies such as flexibility in changing material, ease of cleaning and simple maintenance. The K-Tron modular feeders meet these customer needs.

Leo Beebe, chairman and chief executive officer, said, "The new K-Tron modular feeders were developed in response to our customers. This modular feeder line is simple in concept, versatile in design and efficient in execution. It is a feeder that can meet today's needs and yet has the flexibility to respond to the rapidly changing marketplace."

The president of K-Tron's feeder and blender business worldwide, Marcel O. Rohr, added, "We have expanded upon the best that K-Tron has provided with its standard feeder line -- state-of-the-art weighing technology, providing high quality products and offering service, training and support -- and further enhanced the feeder line with modularity, flexibility, accuracy, rugged design, simple mechanics, and perhaps most important, standardization of the product worldwide. We will build every feeder in the United States and Europe so that parts are interchangeable."

Meeting the challenge for higher productivity and efficiency in continuous process manufacturing, especially in the food, chemical and plastics segments, is more critical today than ever if companies expect to compete in the expanding global marketplace. For manufacturers looking to meet this challenge, modular loss-in-weight feeding now affords the flexibility needed to quickly and conveniently accommodate changing application requirements with minimum downtime and reduced expense.

Working with its customers, K-Tron now provides modular feeders that are designed to accommodate the frequent changes, shorter runs and unforeseen process requirements that have become the norm for the ever- increasing number of manufacturers.

K-Tron International Inc., through its subsidiaries, is a major producer of gravimetric feeders, blenders and security systems with facilities in the United States and Europe and customers throughout the world.

HIGHLAND PARK, MI (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Lee Iacocca announced today that he had met with the Nominating Committee of Chrysler's Board of Directors and that he has agreed to remain in his position as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Chrysler Corporation (NYSE: C) beyond the expiration date of his present contract.

"We have mutually agreed that my employment will be extended past December of 1991," Iacocca said. "When I came to Chrysler, I enlisted for the duration. Right now there's a battle raging and I'm not going to leave my troops in the field.

"That doesn't mean I'm indispensable to the battle, however. Nobody is. It means that I've got a responsibility, and I'm going to see it through. But I want to emphasize that I have no intention of being carried out of the place.

"We have an outstanding management team at Chrysler. One of my primary responsibilities is to put an orderly succession plan in place. We're going to do that according to our own time table, and it won't be driven by a big X on a calendar."

Chrysler's Board of Directors expressed extreme pleasure that Iacocca has reached this decision in the best interests of employees, dealers and shareholders of the company.

VALLEY, NE (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Valmont Industries Inc. (NASDAQ: VALM) announced that it expects this year's second quarter earnings to exceed the earnings for the first quarter, but currently it does not appear that it will equal last year's excellent second quarter results. The company said the lower performance versus 1989 is the result of sales activity in our irrigation markets slowing sooner than expected due to an early spring planting season and abundant rainfalls in many markets, as well as the slowing of activity in the construction markets served by the company's industrial products segment. While performance for the quarter will be lower than last year, the company expects earnings for the full year 1990 to exceed 1989.

Valmont's president and chief executive officer, William F. Welsh II commented, "We are seeing the return to a normal seasonal pattern in our irrigation business versus the drought influenced conditions we experienced the last two years. Our ballast and pole businesses are being negatively impacted by a softness in the domestic construction economy effecting sales activity and earnings. To reduce the impact of these market conditions, we have introduced new marketing programs to stimulate sales and are reviewing our controllable expenses. While the second quarter is down, we expect the year 1990 to exceed 1989, and surpass our objective of 20 percent return on beginning equity."

FARMINGTON, NM (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Mesa Airlines Inc. (NASDAQ: MESA)

today released its May traffic figures. The airline carried 61,164 passengers in May which is an 88 percent increase over May 1989. Revenue passenger miles increased 107.9 percent to 12,293, and available seat miles were up 92.2 percent at 25,101 as compared to May 1989. Load factors also increased to 49 percent. For 14 months running the air carrier has posted traffic increases.

"This month we completed our initial contractual commitment to provide service to cities as an United Express carrier out of the Denver hub. It has meant hard work for all of us from station agents to administration, but it has been an exciting time to watch this growth transform our company," commented Larry Risley, president and chairman of Mesa Airlines. "The result of our labors has been beyond our expectations."

Mesa Airlines operates as an independent carrier out of its Albuquerque and Phoenix hubs and as an United Express carrier out of its Denver hub. Skyway Airlines, a wholly-owned subsidiary, operates as a code-share with Midwest Express Airlines out of its Milwaukee hub.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - With the opening of New York City's first Journey's End Hotel only three weeks away, budget conscious vacationers planning a "Big Apple" summer getaway will have an affordable alternative to the city's high-priced hotels without sacrificing quality or location. The newly built, 189-room Journey's End Hotel (Manhattan) is ideally situated at 3 East 40th Street, just off Fifth Avenue in the heart of midtown Manhattan.

At $115.88 (single) and $125.88 (double) plus applicable taxes, the tariff for a room at Journey's End Hotel (Manhattan) will be considerably less than the area's prevailing average rate.

Journey's End guests will have the choice of comfortably appointed accommodations with one or two double beds or one queen-sized bed. All rooms will include a well-lit work area, individual climate controls, telephone with extra-long cord for ease of mobility, plus remote control color television with complimentary cable service and AM/FM radio, and a roomy private bathroom with tub/shower combination.

The 29-floor Journey's End Hotel (Manhattan) features a two-story lobby with a ground floor sitting area and a second floor gallery where guests can relax, enjoy complimentary morning coffee and newspaper, or just unwind after a full day of business or sightseeing. The property also offers laundry and dry cleaning services, clothes irons, in-room movie service, and Canadian/American currency exchange. Vending machines will be conveniently located on select guest room floors.

Guest room privacy and security will be ensured with a state-of-the- art electronic locking system, which automatically re-programs the lock after each check-out. Rooms with a queen-sized bed also feature a sitting area with a sofa-bed. Children 12 and under stay free when accompanied by an adult and additional rollaway beds and cribs are available upon request.

Founded in 1978, Journey's End Corporation presently owns and operates 120 hotels, motels and all-suite properties in the northeastern United States and throughout Canada. The corporation plans to add between 20 and 30 new properties a year to its rapidly expanding portfolio over the next five years.

For more information or reservations at Journey's End Hotel (Manhattan), call 212-447-1500 or 800-668-4200 toll-free, from anywhere in the continental United States or Canada.

OSLO (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - During the first four months of 1990 the Christiania Bank Group returned a net profit of NOK 326 million, which is much the same as the corresponding figures for the same period in 1989 (NOK 329 million), the group announced today.

The result reflects lower loan losses, NOK 356 million (0.75 percent of average total assets) against NOK 510 million last year (1.30 percent of average total assets).

Realized capital gains on sales of securities were NOK 216 million down on last year's exceptionally good first period results.

Group profit for the period from January to April 1990 amounted to NOK 728 million before loan losses and taxes, corresponding to a return on total assets of 1.53 percent annualized.

Net profit after actual and estimated loan losses and estimated taxes totalled NOK 326 million, against NOK 329 million in the first four months of 1989. On an annualized basis, this corresponds to a net return on total assets of 0.73 percent, earnings per share of NOK 28.12 and a return on equity of 21.95 percent. Including change in deferred taxes, the net return on total assets, earnings per share and the return on equity for the period were 0.68 percent, NOK 26.42 and 24.05 percent respectively, as against 0.84 percent, NOK 34.41 and 34.99 percent in 1989.

Net interest income during the period totalled NOK 1,137 million, corresponding to an interest rate margin of 2.38 percent. The figure for the same period last year was 2.59 percent.

During the period the group realized capital gains of NOK 178 million on sales of equities, while realized losses on bonds amounted to NOK 35 million. At the end of April the trading portfolio of equities contained unrealized gains of NOK 221 million, against NOK 338 million at year-end, while unrealized losses on bonds totalled NOK 38 million, against unrealized year-end losses of NOK 9 million.

Operating expenses during the period totalled NOK 1,053 million, of which NOK 70 million relates to Sunnmorsbanken. Operating expenses amounted to 2.21 percent of average total assets, including the expense ratio of 3.43 percent for Sunnmorsbanken. The corresponding figure for the Christiania Bank Group for the same period in 1989 was 2.25 percent.

ATLANTA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Telecom USA, Inc. (NYSE: TTT) and Avis Rent A Car System Inc. today announced an agreement to offer selected Avis customers a new Telecom USA calling card featuring a number of enhanced telecommunications services.

The Telecom Card offered through Avis will allow cardholders access to domestic and international long distance calling, voice messaging, speed dialing and conference calling. Through Telecom USA's special network architecture, the card will also provide a direct link to the Avis Worldwide Reservation Center.

Other services which can be selected include financial news, stock quote updates, weather around the country, and sports and entertainment news. By dialing a single 800 number, callers can access any service and select from the feature menu. Voice prompts will guide callers through the card selections, for easy use and accuracy.

Ronald Masini, vice president of product and program development at Avis, stated: "We are pleased to be the first in our industry to offer a card with these services to our customers. Our reservation system can be accessed as part of a total package of telecommunications services, offering greater flexibility and convenience to people who are traveling. In addition to making specific arrangements with Avis, customers can also keep in touch while away from home, all through one 800 number."

Under the terms of the agreement, Telecom USA and Avis will introduce a pilot program to a select group of existing Avis customers, From July 1 through Dec. 31. There is no membership charge associated with the card, and calls to Avis Reservation Center are free. Other services such as long distance and conference calling incur charges only when used.

Telecom USA is the nation's fourth-largest long distance company providing service to over 500,000 customers throughout the country. Telecom USA introduced the Telecom Card to its existing customer base beginning in January 1990, and in May 1990 made the card available to the general public.

Avis Rent A Car System Inc. is a worldwide leader in the car rental industry, and the only major car rental company owned by its corporate employees. The company is known for its commitment to quality service, and continually seeks "value-added" services to enhance the rental experience for its customers.

WILMINGTON, DE (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Six chlorofluorocarbon (CFC) producers are undertaking the fourth in a series of joint toxicity tests on alternatives to fully halogenated CFCs.

The hydrochlorofluorocarbon alternatives -- HCFC-225ca and HCFC- 225cb -- are candidates for solvent cleaning of metals, microcomputer equipment and printed circuit boards. In some uses, the compounds are characterized as "drop-in" replacements, because no equipment modifications are required.

Because they contain hydrogen atoms, the alternatives do not persist as long as CFCs in the atmosphere and have greatly reduced ozone depletion potential.

Participating companies are Allied-Signal and Du Pont, Asahi Glass, Central Glass and Daikin of Japan and ICI.

The Program for Alternative Fluorocarbon Toxicity Testing (PAFT) was inaugurated in January 1988 to test HFC-134a and HCFC-123, targeted to replace CFCs in applications such as refrigeration, air conditioning, insulating foams and cleaning solvents. Also being tested are HCFC- 141b, a potential alternative for insulating foams and cleaning solvents, and HCFC-124 and HFC-125, alternatives for refrigeration applications.

Preliminary results of tests on HCFC-123, HFC-134a and HCFC-141b, announced in September 1989, showed no significant signs of toxicity.

CFC producers voluntarily established PAFT to expedite toxicity testing on CFC alternative compounds. The testing usually takes five to seven years. Final results for HCFC-123, HCFC-141b and HFC-134a will be available in 1992 or 1993, about two years ahead of a normal schedule. Results for HCFC-124 and HFC-125 should be completed in 1994 or 1995. Testing of HCFC-225ca and HCFC-225cb is expected to be completed in 1995 or 1996.

Fifteen potential producers also are examining the possible environmental effects of CFC alternative compounds on the atmosphere and the earth's surface.

ANAHEIM, CA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Rockwell International Corp.'s Defense Electronics organization today announced a major restructuring that realigns its diverse businesses along market lines and technical strengths to increase its capability to penetrate worldwide military electronics markets.

The new organization structure takes maximum advantage of the varied capabilities within Defense Electronics, said Kent Black, Rockwell executive vice president and chief operating officer. Black noted that the combined businesses have had major competitive wins in the past few years, both domestically and internationally.

These include the HELLFIRE missile, F-111 aircraft avionics upgrades, the combat system for the Royal Australian Navy's new submarine program, and the inertial measurement unit for the Peacekeeper and Small Intercontinental Ballistic Missile (ICBM) programs.

The Defense Electronics organization was formed in March 1990 by combining the former Autonetics Electronics Systems and Collins Defense Communications businesses. With the addition of the Collins Government Avionics Division in May 1990, all of Rockwell's defense electronics businesses are now under the singular leadership of McLuckey.

The new divisions formed under the realignment are headquartered in Anaheim, and Duluth, Ga., with plants in San Bernardino and Sacramento, Calif.; El Paso, Texas; Norcross, Ga.; Anniston, Ala.; and Sydney and Melbourne, Australia.

Rockwell International is a $12 billion multi-industry company applying advanced technology to a wide range of products in its aerospace, electronics, automotive and graphics businesses.

TROY, MI (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - K mart Corporation (NYSE: KM) today reported a sales increase of 10.4 percent for May 1990 over sales during the same period of last year.

Consolidated sales for the four-week period ended May 30, 1990, amounted to $2,437,440,000 vs. sales of $2,208,487,000 for the four weeks ended May 31, 1989. Sales on a comparable store basis -- those stores open at least one year -- were up 0.9 percent.

Sales for the 17 weeks ended May 30, 1990, were $9,481,592,000, up 12.0

percent from the $8,462,705,000 for the first 17 weeks of 1989. Comparable store sales for the 17-week period rose by 2.4 percent.

K mart Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer Joseph E. Antonini said, "Considering the unseasonably cool weather which hampered sales of seasonal merchandise in both hardline and apparel departments, sales were respectable. Good comparable store sales gains were achieved by most of the specialty store businesses."

K mart Corporation serves America with over 4,000 retail outlets in all 50 states in the United States and in Puerto Rico and Canada. K mart, currently operating 2,323 K mart stores, is also the parent company for Pay Less Drug Stores, Builders Square, Waldenbooks, PACE Membership Warehouse Clubs and The Sports Authority.

COSTA MESA, CA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Parker Automotive Corp. (OTC) today revealed that it has negotiated and executed an exclusive distribution agreement for the countries of Liechtenstein and Switzerland. The agreement names Halco Trade, S.A., as exclusive distributor of Parker's CarbonClean products for the next five years. Halco Trade, S.A. (Halco), is headquartered in Zurich, Switzerland, and is under the direction of Marco Halter, managing director.

The agreement calls for annual purchases of CarbonClean products by Halco of approximately $1 million annually. Michael E. Parker, president and chief executive officer of Parker Automotive, said, "Although Switzerland is a small country, our success there will undoubtedly have repercussions valued in excess of the dollars involved. This is because Switzerland is noted (and rightfully so) as one of the cleanest countries in the world, and the fact that a successful and reputable company such as Halco is marketing CarbonClean is a powerful endorsement."

Marco Halter commented, "As everyone knows, Switzerland is a beautiful country, and the Swiss community is willing to spend money to try to keep it that way. We believe that the use of CarbonClean by our automotive, trucking and bus entities will help us to attain that goal."

Halter continued, "In our position as a leading engine-related supplier in Switzerland, we have seen many products represented as being beneficial to the environment. After conducting our own tests, we are happy to be able to confirm that CarbonClean is one of the few products that actually performs as advertised, " he added.

COSTA MESA, CA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Parker Automotive Corp. (OTC) has executed an exclusive distribution agreement for the Kingdom of Sweden and the Kingdom of Denmark with a division of the Middelboe companies located in both Sweden and Denmark. The exclusive agreement calls for an annual minimum purchase of CarbonClean products by the distributor of approximately $2 million.

Lars Middelboe, managing director, revealed that his companies will establish two new divisions: CarbonClean Denmark A.P.S., and CarbonClean Svenska A.S. to market the products throughout both countries.

The Middelboe companies and their subsidiaries are noted for their expertise in fuel metering and monitoring equipment and automotive and truck parts, and they maintain sales and service facilities in Iceland and the Faroe Islands. Middelboe will also distribute CarbonClean in these regions.

Michael E. Parker, president and chief executive officer of Parker Automotive, said, "Everyone is aware that the Scandinavian countries pay particular attention to the environment. What is not commonly known is that these countries are very particular about which products they allow to be sold, and that each product sold as an environmental aid must be registered and cataloged by the government." Parker went on to say that CarbobClean has been so registered, and he is confident that Middelboe's organization has the market experience, stature and resources to fully deploy the CarbonClean product line throughout the area covered by the agreement.

Founded in 1905, Katsaris is one of the leading importers and distributors of chemicals, automotive parts and accessories. A.G. Katsaris, grandson of the founder and managing director of the firm, said, "It has become painfully clear to the people of Greece that exhaust emissions have caused -- and continue to cause great harm to our temples and antiquities. I am convinced that CarbonClean will not only improve our air quality, but used throughout the country as a standard maintenance tool it will, over the long term, reduce the damage to those antiquities."

Katsaris went on to say that the CarbonClean family of products conforms to his company's existing product line, which includes TRW automotive parts, Alcan engine parts, Borgonova engine parts, Somax of West Germany car care products and certain other chemical products. In discussing his relationship with Parker, Katsaris stated, "It is an exciting business and I am proud to be associated with it."

Michael E. Parker, president and chief executive officer of Parker Automotive, said, "We are indeed delighted to add a firm of this stature to our distributor network. They have a long and successful history, and that assures us that CarbonClean's introduction into the Greek marketplace will be most professional and credible," added Parker.

CarbonClean is a patented system that cleans harmful pollutants from the fuel systems of internal combustion engines. In tests of an independent nature, CarbonClean has proven to reduce engine exhaust emissions in both gasoline and diesel engines by as much as 95 percent. In addition, the cleaning process restores fuel economy and engine performance and greatly improves overall engine efficiency.

Parker Automotive Corp. is headquartered in Costa Mesa. Manufacturing facilities are in Fountain Valley, Calif., and regional sales offices are maintained throughout the world. The CarbonClean family of products is currently distributed in more than 50 countries. Domestically, the products are approved, and in some cases marketed by major oil companies, auto makers, tool companies and the like.

ATLANTA (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Following the destruction of its 327-mile plant by Hurricane Hugo last fall, St. Croix Cable TV in the U.S. Virgin Islands found that the rebuild was made easier thanks to the durability of its Scientific-Atlanta Inc. (NYSE: SFA) distribution and headend equipment.

Many units were salvaged and put back into use almost immediately. It is expected that 80 percent of the existing plant will be rebuilt by July 1990.

"Scientific-Atlanta makes a quality product which is good and dependable," said Don Bridgeman, general engineer of St. Croix. "After the storm we picked up many of the S-A amplifiers off the ground and were able to reinstall them as they were.

"Some of our S-A headend equipment located in a trailer withstood the storm as well," Bridgeman continued. "Two rack mounted units were physically damaged by the storm but they still worked, so we performed some minor repairs and put them back in service."

Scientific-Atlanta is also supplying additional new distribution electronics equipment totaling 100 trunk amplifiers and standard trunk housings for the 330 MHz system.

Scientific-Atlanta offers a complete line of 400, 450 and 550 MHz trunk stations in conventional push-pull, distortion improving parallel hybrid, or feed forward configurations. They are designed to plug into a standard trunk housing with amplifier modules that can be easily exchanged for increased channel capacity or upgrading.

Scientific-Atlanta Inc. is a leader in cable television electronics, satellite-based communications networks, and instrumentation for industrial, telecommunications and government applications.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Woolworth Corporation (NYSE: Z) today reported that total sales for the four weeks ended June 2, 1990, rose 9.6 percent to $672 million from $613 million in the comparable year-earlier period. Domestic sales for the four-week period increased 6.1 percent to $371 million from $350 million, and foreign sales, expressed in U.S. dollars, rose 14.3 percent. If foreign exchange rates had remained constant, foreign sales would have increased 6.9 percent and total sales would have increased 6.4 percent. Domestic comparable store sales for the four-week period rose 3.0 percent.

For the cumulative seventeen weeks ended June 2, total sales rose 10.6 percent to $2,796 million from $2,528 million in the corresponding year-earlier period. Domestic sales increased 8.6 percent to $1,625 million from $1,496 million, and foreign sales, expressed in U.S. dollars, rose 13.4 percent. If foreign exchange rates had remained constant, foreign sales would have increased 8.3 percent and total sales would have increased 8.5 percent. Domestic comparable store sales for the seventeen-week period rose 5.8 percent.

Harold E. Sells, chairman and chief executive officer, stated, "Due to unseasonably cool and wet weather in many parts of North America, May sales were lower than planned. We were very pleased, however, with the results of our West German subsidiary, which continues to register double-digit comparable store sales gains."

KANATA, ONTARIO (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Newbridge Networks Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: NNCXF) announced that revenues for the fiscal year ending April 30, 1990, were recorded at $121,199,000, compared with total revenues of $67,385,000 for fiscal year 1989.

Net income for the year totalled $3,889,000 (13 cents per share basic and fully diluted -- CDN GAAP) compared with net income of $9,148,000 (49 cents per share basic and 37 cents fully diluted -- CDN GAAP) for fiscal year 1989. Revenues for the fourth quarter totalled $31,833,000, compared to $23,833,000 for the fourth quarter of fiscal year 1989. Net loss for the quarter was $6,913,000 (21 cents per share basic and fully diluted -- CDN GAAP) compared to a net income of $3,817,000 (18 cents per share basic and 15 cents fully diluted CDN GAAP) for the same period of fiscal year 1989.

The disappointing financial results were caused in part by significant costs incurred in establishing an improved technical support infrastructure required to achieve customer satisfaction and service the growing number of intricate networks installed by Newbridge for large corporations and telecommunications companies worldwide.

In addition, sales were approximately 20 percent below the company's expectations with most of the shortfall occurring during the third and fourth quarters. The complex technical and logistical issues surrounding large networks caused longer than anticipated re-order cycles between the initial installation phase and network expansions. Many of these issues were resolved in the fourth quarter.

Newbridge has been particularly successful in pioneering the business opportunities in international networks. In implementing global networks Newbridge has been determined to maintain the highest level of customer service and support. Through the third and fourth quarters, the company opened 10 new sales and service offices, including offices in New York, London, Tokyo, Moscow and Leningrad. The costs incurred in expanding the company's international presence were substantial and represent a significant investment in the company's future. With this additional service capability, Newbridge can better address the growing networking needs of large organizations.

In response to the poor results of the third and fourth quarters, management is taking a tough line companywide to work toward a more efficient utilization of resources and a return to profitability. Tighter controls have been placed on expenditures, and all members of management have agreed to salary cuts of 10 percent. In addition, the company has implemented organizational changes to improve sales, service and operational effectiveness.

The company is seeking to strengthen the management team on a day to day basis by appointing a chief operating officer. Notice of the appointment will follow. An executive committee of the board of directors has been appointed to help the company in its efforts to restore profitability.

During the fourth quarter, receivable collections improved significantly over the third quarter period resulting in a major reduction in the average age of the accounts receivable. The improved collections also contributed to an increase in the cash balances for the fourth quarter.

Although these results are a setback, the company believes it is in the best position to benefit from a general market shift toward public carrier based systems, major growth in international networks, and increasing demand for feeder products, integral LAN bridging and high capacity T-3 connectivity.

Newbridge Networks is an international company which specializes in the design, manufacture and marketing of voice and data communications equipment for global networks. Offices and manufacturing facilities are located in Canada, the United States, the Soviet Union, Europe and Asia.

Newbridge Networks Corporation is a public company whose common shares are listed for trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange (NNC) in Canada and quoted for trading on the NADSAQ National Market System (NNCXF) in the United States.

DANIA, FL (JUNE 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Carnival Air Lines today announced that it has entered into a charter agreement with Caribbean USA, Inc., a tour wholesale operator, to supply it with a 737-200 jet for charter flights between San Juan, Puerto Rico and Orlando, Fla., beginning May 23 through mid-August.

The 737-200, which has a seating capacity of 125, will fly, round trip, from San Juan to Orlando seven times a week. Carnival Air Lines recently enlarged its fleet to five aircraft utilizing Boeing 727s and Boeing 737s for scheduled and charter service. This past April, Carnival Air Lines earned over one million dollars in revenue from its charter service alone. "Our charter service continues to grow," said Daniel Ratti, president of Carnival Air Lines. "In addition to the new San Juan to Orlando service, we recently leased a jet to Egypt Air, and we provide charter service from the Northeast to Freeport, Grand Bahamas, for the Lucayan Beach Resort & Casino."

Carnival Air Lines scheduled service provides non-stop flights from New Orleans, Nashville, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Baltimore, to Nassau, The Bahamas and Carnival's Crystal Palace Resort & Casino.

Carnival Air Lines also offers a $59 round-trip "Play Day" package to Carnival's Crystal Palace Resort & Casino, the newest and most complete mega-resort on "The Bahamian Riviera." The special round-trip package is available to one-day vacationers departing from Fort Lauderdale or West Palm Beach airports.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) UPI - Turmoil between Eastern Airlines Inc. and its two warring pilots unions prompted the airline's court-appointed trustee to seek a federal injunction Wednesday to keep pilots from striking or causing other economic harm to the strikebound carrier.

In a 40-page motion filed in U.S. Bankruptcy Court, trustee Martin Shugrue asked Judge Burton Lifland to enjoin the Airline Pilots Association, which represents the carrier's striking pilots, and the new Eastern Airlines Pilots, which represents those who crossed the picket lines after the March 4, 1989, strike, from taking action against the carrier.

The two unions are fighting over who should represent pilots in contract negotiations and both have threatened to take action, including another strike, against Eastern if the other is picked to represent the pilots.

''Eastern finds itself in an untenable position in that the working pilots (EPA) have threatened job actions if the bargaining does not end, which in my judgment could jeopardize the existence of the airline,'' Shugrue said in his motion.

''ALPA, on the other hand, can be expected to picket or take other concerted actions harmful to the company in the event that Eastern voluntarily recognizes the EPA. Such action also would jeopardize the survival of the company.''

Although ALPA is recognized by Eastern as the legitimate representative for its pilots, 915 of the company's pilots now on the job were recruited as replacements for Eastern pilots who went on strike, and the other 860 defied ALPA by crossing the union's picket lines.

Negotiations for Eastern and ALPA are holding labor talks in Washington under the supervision of an examiner appointed by Lifland. But the EPA claims it should be the bargaining agent since its represents the majority of the carrier's pilots.

''At the same time that EPA is insisting that the trustee halt all bargaining with ALPA, ALPA has been insisting that the trustee continue to bargain with it,'' the motion said. ''ALPA has taken the position that it continue to be the exclusive representative of all of Eastern's pilots.''

The International Association of Machinists walked out March 4, 1989, after contract negotiations reached an impasse, and the pilots and flight attendants joined the IAM in a sympathy strike. Five days later the company was forced to seek federal bankruptcy protection.

The pilots terminated their sympathy walkout Nov. 22 and sought to get their old jobs back, but the company said new hires and pilots who crossed the picket lines filled all available vacancies. The striking pilots were put on a waiting list.

Eastern now employs 1,775 pilots and another 1,200 to 1,400 pilots are waiting to return to work, according to ALPA figures.

(JUNE 7) UPI - A White House source says NO decision has been made on evacuating U-S citizens from war-torn Liberia. On condition of anonymity, a White House spokeswoman Wednesday night denied a report that the United States plans to move all Americans out of the West African country. Liberian rebels claim they have shut down the international airport near the capital.

Official news reports say ethnic fighting between minorities in the central Soviet Union Wednesday claimed 25 more lives. The battles between Uzbeks and Kirghizians went on for a third day in the central Asian republic of Kirghizia. The bloodshed began in a fight over land, but now seems to have little to do with the original dispute.

The daughter of American hostage Terry Anderson sent her father a letter Wednesday on her fifth birthday. The letter is to be published by Beirut's leading newspaper. In it, Sulome Anderson notes that her journalist father was kidnapped before she was born, and has NEVER seen her. But she writes that she prays for him every night and asks him to come home. In Beirut, a ranking Shiite Moslem said two Swiss hostages are expected to be released soon.

(JUNE 7) UPI - Police say a tornado ripped through Limon, Colorado, Wednesday, causing ''major damage.'' The twister damaged a state police station, knocking out all communications, but there were NO immediate reports of injuries. Winds gusted to 75 miles an hour in Kansas, overturning a tractor-trailer truck and blowing eight railroad cars off their tracks. Again, NO injuries were reported.

The House Wednesday passed a bill to make it easier for U-S companies to export computers and high-tech fiber-optic telephone systems to Eastern Europe. The more lenient regulations passed would NOT apply to the Soviet Union as long as it continues its crackdown on Lithuania. The amendment also carries NON-binding language saying the restrictions should continue if the Soviets restrict Jewish emigration.

Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said political leaders made ''some progress'' Wednesday in talks to keep Quebec from seceding. Leaders of three provinces oppose an accord they say would give Quebec too much power to promote its French language and culture. But the Meech Lake Accord becomes void if it is NOT approved by all provinces before June 23rd. Negotiations continue Thursday.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Homosexuals and lesbians were victims in 7,031 incidents of defamation and violence ranging from verbal abuse to homicide in 1989, according to a report released Thursday.

The National Gay and Lesbian Task Force study reported incidents in 40 states and the District of Columbia. The study, the group's fifth, said the total number of incidents last year represented a slight decrease from 1988.

Kevin Berrill, report author and director of the group's Anti-Violence Project, said gays remain ''under seige, battling an epidemic of bigotry and violence.'' He called for a major battle on the state level to end all forms of hate crimes.

The report noted that attacks against lesbians and gay men in 1989 ''occurred in a context of pervasive violence against Jews, people of color and women.'' Along those lines, the report said that in 1989 there was a record high of 1,432 anti-Semitic incidents and 65 violent incidents directed at abortion providers.

Of the incidents reported against gay men and lesbians, approximately two-thirds were acts of verbal harassment. The report also listed 795 physical assaults, 726 threats of violence, 395 acts of vandalism, 330 incidents of reported police abuse, 62 homicides and 11 arsons.

Berrill noted that 19 percent of the incidents occurred on college campuses, revealing a ''dangerous intolerance and prejudice that threatens an academic environment of enlightenment.''

About 15 percent of the cases were classified as ''AIDS-related.''

Berrill also noted that expressions of anti-gay bigotry by public figures were also ''disturbingly commonplace.''

He applauded passage of the recent hate-crimes act, which will for the first time require the federal government to collect statistics on crimes rooted in anti-homsexual bias.

However, the report noted that only nine states, the District of Columbia and seven cities have hate crime laws that include sexual orientation. In 13 states, hate crime laws specifically exclude anti-homosexual crimes.

''Shamefully, homophobic bigotry blocked hate crime legislation (in 1989) in Georgia, Illinois, New York and New Jersey,'' Berrill said.

''In recent years, sexual orientation provisions also were deleted from bills in Michigan, Texas and Washington. This reinforces the already widespread perception that the victimization of lesbians and gay men is acceptable.''

(JUNE 7) UPI - The Maritime Safety Agency says a Japanese tuna boat has been seized by Libyan patrol craft in the Mediterranean Sea. The agency reports the 299-ton Japanese trawler was seized while fishing in waters about 420 miles southeast of Malta Wednesday morning. It was ordered to proceed to a Libyan port. It was NOT immediately known why the vessel was captured.

A Canadian researcher says children born to older women appear much more likely to be left-handed than those born to younger women. A study of 22-hundred college freshmen found those whose mothers were age 40 and above when they were born had more than twice the rate of left-handedness as those whose mothers were between 17 and 29. The findings by a University of British Columbia researcher were published in a letter to The New England Journal of Medicine.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 7) UPI - In spite of recent friction over drug smuggling, the United States and Mexico have quietly established a U.S. military counternarcotics unit in Mexico City to help plan operations for a new Mexican strike force, it was reported Thursday.

The Los Angeles Times cited U.S. and Mexican sources as saying the unit could play a key role in intercepting cocaine shipments before they cross the border.

It is the closest anti-drug coordination between the two nations, which have been at odds recently over the alleged abduction of a Guadalajara doctor by bounty hunters who turned him over to U.S. agents to face charges in the torture-slaying of Drug Enforcement Administration Agent Enrique Camarena.

The Times said an eight-man ''tactical analysis team'' was sent to the American Embassy in Mexico City in March under the auspices of the U.S. Forces Command, and is credited with contributing to previously undisclosed cocaine seizures near the border.

The military team has been used to channel intelligence gathered by Air Force surveillance planes to a Mexican strike force that tries to intercept drug-laden planes flying up from Colombia. The information, the Times said, has contributed to at least nine major interceptions in the last four months in which seven planes and nearly 10 tons of cocaine were sezied, mostly at landing strips near the border.

Those landing strips are the principal transit points for cocaine bound from Colombia to the United States.

The newspaper said the team would be expanded with troops that would help plan counternarcotics missions for other Mexican anti-drug units, including the recently established Northern Border Response Team based in Monterrey, Mexico.

The Times quoted Mexican sources as saying at least four drug-smuggling planes have been shot down in the last six months, a practice that is illegal in the United States. At least two suspected drug smugglers were killed in one operation, the Times said, but there is no indication that information provided by the U.S. intelligence unit played a role in the attacks.

The newspaper said the Defense Department would not comment on the presence of the military squad, but a U.S. Embassy spokesman confirmed the existence of a ''small tactical analysis team ... to further counternarcotics cooperation with Mexico.''

The Times quoted a senior U.S. official as saying the two governments are concerned that disclosure of the military team's role could have serious domestic repercussions in Mexico, where national sovereignty is a sensitive issue.

The newspaper said the U.S. team has installed communications gear in the embassy to collect information from a variety of military sources, including the North American Air Defense Command based in Colorado Springs Colo., and the Southern Command in Panama.

''The purpose is to sort, convert, classify and sanitize information for the Mexicans to act on,'' a senior U.S. counternarcotics official told the Times.

The sources said the military team will be able to pass along a wider range of information, some of it from highly classified military sources, than the DEA has been able to do alone.

Tactical analysis teams are also in place at the American embassies in Peru, Bolivia and Colombia, but U.S. government sources said they do not participate directly in anti-drug operations in any of the countries.

''This isn't some kind of covert action,'' a U.S. official insisted.

(JUNE 7) UPI - Cecil Fielder might be an imposing presence at the plate, but it's not just his size that scares pitchers.

The 6-foot-3, 230-pound, power-hitting phenom showed why Wednesday night in Detroit's 6-4 win over Cleveland.

Fielder drove in five runs with a pair of solo blasts and a 470-foot three-run homer to left center in the fifth inning that proved to be the game-winner.

''What amazes me about him is that everybody thinks a big guy like that is a big bozo,'' Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said.

''He's not. He knows what he's doing up there at the plate. He's not swinging for himself. He's not a guy that goes up there wailing.''

Fielder now leads the majors with 22 home runs and 53 runs batted in and is the first Tiger in history to hit three home runs in a game twice in one season.

Tracy Jones drove in the other Detroit run with a solo homer in the fifth, and Jack Morris, 4-7, picked up the win.

Mike Henneman pitched the final two innings to earn his 14th save.

Cleveland starter Greg Swindell, 2-5, gave up all six Detroit runs in five innings.

The last time Fielder hit three homers was on May 6 at Toronto.

Only nine men in history have accomplished that feat, the last being Joe Carter of the Indians last year.

Besides blasting a shot in the fifth, Fielder homered in the second and fourth innings.

When he came up with none on and one out in the eighth, reliever Cecilio Guante threw him four straight balls far out of the strike zone.

Fielder's blast in the fifth came about 15 to 20 feet short of landing in the center field bleachers, where no batted ball has ever landed at Cleveland Stadium.

''That's not my goal, to hit balls in the bleachers,'' Fielder said.

''My goal is to win games for my team. The main objective is just to hit the ball hard. That (hitting four home runs) wasn't even on my mind.''

In four years with Toronto, Fielder hit 31 homers and drove in 84 runs in 506 at bats.

When every team passed on him, he opted to play last season in Japan. He hit 38 home runs with Hanshin, but more importantly, he gained his confidence.

''I'm getting to play,'' Fielder said, ''that's the bottom line. When you're sitting on the bench, you can't do anything.

''I got the opportunity to go to Japan and I just feel it helped me tremendously. I don't understand what is going on (this year). Hopefully, it keeps coming as it is. I'm really thrilled.''

Everyone except American League pitchers that is.

Elsewhere in the American League, Minnesota crushed Toronto 12-5, Boston tripped New York 4-1, Chicago zipped Seattle 5-0, California downed Kansas City 6-4, Baltimore shaded Milwaukee 8-7, and Oakland scalped Texas 5-4.

In the NL, it was: San Francisco 3, Cincinnati 2 in 11 innings; San Diego 3, Houston 2; New York 4, Montreal 2; Pittsburgh 6, Chicago 1 in 6 1/2 innings; St. Louis 12, Philadelphia 11, in 10 innings and Los Angeles 7, Atlanta 5.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Twins 12, Blue Jays 5

At Toronto, Greg Gagne belted a two run homer and added an RBI single and Fred Manrique also drove home three runs to power Minnesota. Kirby Puckett went 5-for-5 as the Twins collected 19 hits off of four Toronto pitchers. John Candeleria, 7-1, hurled three shutout innings of relief for the win. Willie Blair, 0-2, gave up seven runs over 3 2-3 innings to take the loss.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 1

At Boston, Mike Boddicker pitched a two-hitter and Tom Brunansky drove in two runs to lift the surging Boston Red Sox and spoil the debut of Stump Merrill as New York Yankees manager. Merrill replaced Bucky Dent, who was fired earlier in the day. Boddicker, 7-3, posted his six straight victory and his first complete game of the season.

White Sox 5, Mariners 0

At Chicago, Melido Perez pitched a four-hit shutout and Scott Fletcher delivered a two-run double to spark a five-run first inning to lift Chicago. Perez, 5-4, pitched his first shutout since Oct. 1, 1988 and his first complete game since Sept. 20, 1989. Loser Matt Young fell to 1-6 and has not won since May 13.

Orioles 8, Brewers 7

At Milwaukee, Craig Worthington homered with one out in the ninth inning to propel Baltimore. Worthington drove a 1-0 pitch from Bill Krueger, 2-3, over the left field wall for his fourth homer and first since May 4. Mark Williamson, 4-1, pitched two innings for the victory. Gregg Olson notched his 13th save.

A's 5, Rangers 4

At Arlington, Texas, Jose Canseco and Dave Henderson homered off Nolan Ryan to guide Oakland. It was the first start for Ryan, 4-3, since May 17. Ryan had been disabled with back spasms. Scott Sanderson, 7-2, picked up the win. Dennis Eckersley earned his 18th save. Canseco's homer was his 20th.

(JUNE 7) UPI - Murphy's Law prevails in San Diego. ''Jack Murphy's Stadium Law,'' that is.

''People say on 0-2 you shouldn't give up a hit,'' said Houston Astros reliever Larry Anderson, who surrendered the game-winning hit to Garry Templeton with two outs in the ninth as the San Diego Padres defeated the Astros 3-2.

''But I made the pitch I wanted to make,'' Anderson added. ''Give him (Templeton) the credit. If I had missed with it, I would've come back with the same pitch. I thought I made the perfect pitch. It must be Murphy's Law - Jack Murphy Stadium's law.''

Templeton's single capped a three-run inning for the Padres, who swept the three-game series.

The Padres, trailing 2-0, had tied the score on Joe Carter's two-run homer in the ninth. Roberto Alomar led off the inning with a single off Mark Portugal, 1-6. One out later, Carter belted a 2-2 delivery into the left-field stands for his ninth homer of the year.

Santiago then singled and Portugal was relieved by Dan Schatzeder, who gave up a walk to Mike Pagliarulo. Anderson came on and struck out pinch hitter Jack Clark as the runners executed a double steal. Templeton then followed with his run-scoring bloop into short left field.

''It's a very good feeling,'' Carter said. ''Two out of three would've been good, but it's great to take all three (games of the series). It didn't look good going into the ninth 2-zip, but we put a few things together. Sometimes you'll get the home run. A lot of times you won't.''

Craig Lefferts, 3-1, worked the ninth and got credit for the win.

Glenn Davis had given Houston a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning with his National League-leading 17th home run of the season and seventh in the last six games.

With two outs, San Diego starter Mike Dunne walked Ken Oberkfell and Davis followed by clubbing a 2-0 pitch deep into the left-field seats. The home run was the 61st given up by San Diego pitchers this season, who lead the majors in the category.

Portugal scattered seven hits over 8 1-3 innings in losing for the fifth straight start. He walked three and struck out six. Dunne gave up just two hits over six innings, walking one and striking out four.

''We have to find a way to turn it around,'' said Houston Manager Art Howe. The Astros have lost seven of their last nine games and six in a row. ''Portugal pitched an excellent game. He threw everything for a strike.''

San Diego's Tony Gwynn went 2-for-4, giving him 14 hits in his last 26 at-bats. Bip Roberts went 0-for-2 to end a 13-game hitting streak.

In other NL games, San Francisco edged Cincinnati 3-2, New York eeked by Montreal 4-3, Pittsburgh defeated Chicago 6-1, St. Louis beat Philadelphia 12-11 in 10 innings, and Los Angeles topped Atlanta 7-5.

In AL games, it was: Minnesota 12, Toronto 5; Boston 4, New York 1; Detroit 6, Cleveland 4; Chicago 5, Seattle 0; California 6, Kansas City 2; Oakland 5, Texas 4; and Baltimore 8, Milwaukee 7.

-- AROUND THE NL --

Giants 3, Reds 2

In San Francisco, Kevin Mitchell hit a solo home run with two outs in the 11th inning to rally San Francisco to a victory over Cincinnati Reds and a sweep of their three-game series. Jeff Brantley, 2-1, earned the victory. Rob Dibble, 3-1, suffered the loss. San Francisco won in extra innings for the third time in six games.

Mets 4, Montreal 3

In New York, Kevin Elster drove in two runs with a seventh-inning bases-loaded single to lift New York and help Frank Viola become the NL's first nine-game winner. Viola, 9-2, worked seven innings before getting relief from Alejandro Pena and John Franco, who earned his ninth save. Elster's single came off of loser Kevin Gross, 7-4.

Pirates 6, Cubs 1

In Pittsbrugh, Andy Van Slyke hit a three-run homer to highlight Pittsburgh's five-run first inning, sending the Pirates to a victory and three-game series sweep of Chicago in a rain-shortened contest. Doug Drabek, 8-2, has allowed only 16 earned runs in 65 2-3 innings. Greg Maddux, 4-6, didn't make it through the first inning in his sixth attempt at his 50th major league victory.

Cardinals 12, Phillies 11 (10 innings)

In St. Louis, Willie McGee hit a two-run double in the 10th inning to lift the Cardinals. Lenny Dykstra, who went 2 for 5 and is hitting .415, extended his hitting streak to 19 games. Von Hayes drew five walks, tying a major-league record. In the 10th, McGee belted the second pitch from Terry Mulholland, the sixth Phillies pitcher, to the warning track in left-center to score Milt Thompson and Jose Oquendo. Frank DiPino, 3-0, pitched the 10th for the win. Roger McDowell, 2-1, suffered the loss.

Dodgers 7, Braves 5

In Los Angeles, Eddie Murray belted a three-run double in the eighth inning to lift the Dodgers. With Los Angeles trailing 5-4 in the eighth, Stan Javier singled and Chris Gwynn and Kirk Gibson walked off Charley Kerfeld, 3-3. Joe Boever then replaced Kerfeld and gave up the game-winning double. Jay Howell, 2-3, came on in the eighth and allowed two hits, giving up one run and walking one.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 7) UPI - A federal court has given states the power to control the multibillion-dollar market in computerized telecommunications, a ruling that may force the Bell companies to set up subsidiaries to handle such services as automatic banking and alarm systems.

The decision Wednesday by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overruled the Federal Communications Commission, which had put regulation of the industry in the hands of the federal government.

State regulators now may require the nation's Bell operating companies to set up independent subsidiaries to provide specialized computer services that use the same telephone lines as regular consumer phone service.

The decision goes to the heart of control over the decade-old, multibillion-dollar market in such computerized communication services as automatic bank teller machines, electronic mail, voice mail, computerized database services, alarm services and electronic meter reading, according to Pacific Telesis spokesman Steve Harris.

The ruling may be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Mark Fogelman, attorney for the California Public Utilities Commission, which led the charge against the FCC preemption of state control said, ''We are delighted with the victory. This is a big win for the states.''

The court overturned an August 1985 FCC decision that held federal law preempted state regulation of intrastate computerized services.

The FCC would have allowed the Bell companies to merge the regulated telephone service - basic consumer telephone services - with specialized, non-regulated computer services.

States feared the Bell companies would use their monopoly control of local telephone exchanges to pass on costs to consumers that should have gone to purchasers of unregulated computerized services.

The state regulators also feared Bell companies would exercise their power over access to local telephone lines to gain an unfair competitive edge by putting their own computerized services on limited telephone line space ahead of independent competitors.

The Bell companies and other telecommunications concerns maintained it would be cheaper and more efficient to offer the services under federal regulation only.

Judge William Norris found the FCC's abrupt 1985 about-face on the issue of regulating computerized services ''arbitrary and capricious'' and therefore a violation of the Administrative Procedure Act.

The ruling pushes the FCC back to a ruling in 1980 that had required Bell companies to set up separate subsidiaries for computerized services.

Norris pointed out that the 1980 FCC decision originally held that the possible unfair charging of consumers for the unregulated costs of computerized services, called ''cross subsidation,'' would be impossible to monitor.

By 1985, the FCC reversed itself and said increased competition in the computerized service market reduced the threat of monopoly abuse. The agency rested its action on the proposal that new accounting procedures would protect consumers.

Dozens of the nation's leading computer and telecommunications companies joined in the lawsuit, including the MCI Telecommunications Corp., IBM, NyNex Telephone Companies, AT&T, and GTE Telephone Operating Companies.

Joining the California PUC in the attack on the FCC decision were New York state and the Michigan Public Service Commission.

Harris said it was unclear whether all Bell companies will be required to operate separate subsidiaries. ''It will be up to the individual states to decide,'' he said.

Harris said Pacific Telesis, unlike the majority of other Bell companies, was in favor of state regulation.

''State commissioners are closer to the market and understand the needs of markets in their jurisdiction,'' Harris said. He said the preliminary indications from the California PUC are that the state will not require the separate subsidiaries.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (JUNE 7) UPI - Attackers fired grenades at the Romanian Embassy in an assault believed linked to the immigration of Soviet Jews to Israel, police reported Thursday.

The gunmen hit the embassy balcony in the Syrian-patrolled seafront area of Rawshe in Moslem west Beirut, inflicting some material damage and wounding a passerby with rocket-propelled grenades, police said.

Embassy officials were not immediately available for comment.

Analysts believe the rocket attack may have been linked to a wave of bombings in Beirut targeting missions of East European countries that allow Soviet Jews passage as they emigrate to Israel.

Lebanon-based Arab and Moslem hard-line groups have threatened to attack targets of countries facilitating the Jews' influx to Israel.

Romania, even under the hard-line communist rule of executed dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, has for years allowed Soviet Jews to emigrate to Israel through Bucharest. The Soviet Union does not have direct flights to Israel.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FL (JUNE 7) UPI - A sheriff won a partial victory in federal court when an album by the rap group 2 Live Crew was ruled obscene but he was told he acted unconstitutionally by threatening to arrest people selling it.

U.S. District Judge Jose Gonzales issued his judgment on the album 'As Nasty As They Wanna Be' Wednesday in a 62-page ruling. He said the album - already ruled obscene in eight Florida counties - was legally obscene because it depicts sexual acts and has no redeeming social value.

Broward County Sheriff Nick Navarro tried earlier this year to block the sale of the album by threatening to arrest store operators selling it in his jurisdiction.

Gonzalez ruled the sheriff's action amounted to ''an improper prior restraint of free speech'' and enjoined him from similar actions in the future.

''It is the court's and not non-judicial officials who must decide whether a specific work is obscene,'' he said.

And Gonzalez decided the album was obscene. Although he said 2 Live Crew had not necessarily committed any crime, he left open the possibility of future prosecution.

Gonzalez said his ruling did not constitute a criminal finding. ''It must be emphasized at the outset that this decision does not criminalize the plaintiff's conduct, nor does it charge anyone with a crime. That is a matter for the police and the criminal courts to determine,'' he said.

It is a first-degree misdemeanor to manufacture, distribute, sell or possess with intent to sell obscene material in Florida, sheriff's spokesman Al Gordon said. Violators face up to one year in jail and a fine of $1,000.

The judge heard two days of testimony in May after 2 Live Crew challenged Navarro's action in U.S. District Court. Wednesday's ruling applies to Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties.

Bruce Rogow, a lawyer for the rap group, said the ruling would be appealed.

Robyn Blumner, executive director of the Florida chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, denounced the decision.

''This is a record album, this is music, and in Broward County today an adult cannot chose to indulge in a certain form of music that some judge has determined ... is criminal,'' he said.

The judge said he considered the album as a whole when judging it. ''2 Live Crew has 'borrowed' components called 'riffs' from other artists,'' Gonzalez's ruling said. ''Taking the work in its entirety, the several riffs do not lift 'Nasty' to the level of a serious artistic work.

''Once the riffs are removed, all that remains is the rhythm and the explicit sexual lyrics, which are utterly without any redeeming social value,'' he said.

Gonzalez also said the album appealed to prurient interests, and was patently offensive, two other tests used by federal courts to determine obscenity.

''The recording depicts sexual conduct in graphic detail. The specificity of the descriptions makes the audio message analogous to a camera with a zoom lens, focusing on the sights and sounds of varous ultimate sex acts '' the judge said.

''The depictions of ultimate sexual acts are so vivid that they are hard to distinguish from seeing the same conduct described in the words of a book, or in pictures and periodicals and films,'' Gonzalez said. ''The evident goal of this particular recording is to reproduce the sexual act through musical lyrics. It is an appeal directed to 'dirty' thoughts and the loins, not to the intellect and the mind.''

ANGELES, Philippines (JUNE 7) UPI - An investigation is under way to determine if a top communist guerrilla leader shot by soldiers was involved in the killing of two U.S. servicemen last month, police said Thursday.

Police Col. Julius Yarcia identified the guerrilla killed in the encounter Wednesday afternoon in nearby Porac town as Ramon Punzalan, provincial secretary of the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines.

Another suspected rebel, Alfredo Duvivar, was captured.

Yarcia said police were trying to determine if Punzalan was part of a communist hit team that killed Airmen John H. Raven, 19, of Delta Junction Alaska, and James C. Green, 20, of Craig, Colo., on May 13.

The New People's Army, the communist party's 19,000-strong armed wing, took responsibility for the killings in Angeles outside the U.S. Clark Air Base, 50 miles north of Manila.

The NPA said it would continue killing Americans unless Washington dismantles its six military facilities in the Philippines. The leases on the bases expire next year.

U.S. officials restricted travel among the 40,000 American troops, Defense Department employees and dependents assigned in the Philippines following the slayings.

The officials also allowed the voluntary return of military dependents to the United States before completion of the tour of duty of the soldiers.

Lt. Kim Urie, a Clark spokesperson, said a questionaire was sent to military personnel to determine how many dependents would return to the United States. But Urie stressed there would be no mass evacuation and that those returning would leave on scheduled flights.

TOKYO (JUNE 7) UPI - A Japanese fishing boat with a crew of 15 aboard sank Thursday in a collision with a Norwegian freighter in the Pacific south of Tokyo, leaving 11 crewmen missing, the Maritime Safety Agency reported.

The agency said four crewmen from the Japanese vessel, the 59-ton Yugen Maru No. 8, were rescued but one was in serious condition.

It was not immediately known if there were injuries among crewmen aboard the Norwegian vessel, the agency said.

The collision between the fishing boat and the 10,986-ton Nopal Cherry occurred at midday about 45 miles east of Miyake Island, a tiny volcanic island 120 miles south of Tokyo, the agency said.

The Japanese boat broke in two and sank shortly after the collision, agency officials said.

An air-sea search was under way for the missing fishermen, the officials said.

It was not immediately known what caused the collision.

LIMON, Colorado (JUNE 7) UPI - Authorities brought in dogs Thursday to search for people possibly trapped in the rubble left by a tornado that nearly wiped out downtown Limon.

The twister, one of at least seven that crashed through eastern Colorado late Wednesday, injured at least 14 people, three of them seriously, as it battered its way through a 12-block section of town.

''The center of town is completely destroyed,'' Police Chief Jim Trahern said on NBC's ''Today'' show. ''We know about 75 to 90 percent of the business area is destroyed.''

Only limited communication had been restored early Thursday, as telephone service was knocked out in a wide area of sparsely populated eastern Colorado. Electricity was knocked out in Limon, a town of 2,000 about 75 miles southeast of Denver, making it difficult for officials to assess the damage.

''We've got a lot of things to set up, clean up,'' Trahern said. ''We've got dogs coming in from other counties to make sure we don't have somebody under the debris. That's the first thing we're going to do when daylight comes.''

Gov. Roy Romer surveyed the tornado-ravaged town Thursday.

''The Colorado State Patrol in Limon is now back on line,'' he said. ''Police and the Fire Department are being coordinated by CSP.''

An unidentified firefighter said the tornado sersiously damaged the Fire Department, police station, town hall, post office, two banks and a grocery.

At least 25 trailer homes in a mobile home park on the edge of town also were hit, Tolar said.

Dozens of windows were blown out and numerous vehicles were overturned, including two 18-wheelers, Tolar said.

Several patrons of a tavern just outside of the downtown area huddled in a walk-in cooler to wait out the storm, he said.

''I heard a roar,'' an unidentified woman told Denver television station KCNC. ''It's just like they always say. It sounded just like a train. There was rain and hail but the noise was just amazing.''

''We were sitting in the house and it started hailing real bad, pounding hard on the roof,'' said resident Dave Grimes. ''We went outside and the trees started snapping''.

Colorado Highway Department spokesman Dan Hopkins said much of Interstate 70 between Denver and the Kansas state line was closed to keep traffic away from the violent weather.

(JUNE 7) UPI - Warsaw Pact countries open a meeting today in Moscow with an entirely new look compared to a year ago. Communist governments were swept from power in every member country except the Soviet Union in 1989. The future of the alliance is at stake with calls for a united Germany in NATO.

NATO foreign ministers open a two-day meeting today in Scotland to plan the future of the Western alliance in the face of changes in the Warsaw Pact. NATO heads of state meet July 5th and 6th in London... so any major announcements on changes in NATO policy are expected to wait until then.

White House and congressional budget negotiators have agreed to study a possible 25-percent, five-year reduction of U-S military forces. A nine-member subcommittee, including Defense Secretary Cheney ... will examine such a cut in military capability and report to the larger negotiating group in a week.

Liberian rebels claim to have captured an international airport 35 miles outside the nation's capital yesterday in a full-scale assault. Four U-S ships remain anchored off Liberia's coast to rescue Americans and other Western nationals who are unable to get out of Liberia by air.

Canadian researchers report that children born to women in their 30's and 40's appear significantly more likely to be left-handed than those born to younger women. It says mothers between the ages of 35 and 39 were 69 percent more likely to have left-handed children.

(JUNE 7) UPI - General election campaigns for governor in California and senator in North Carolina began with all signs pointing to battles that would likely be very close, nasty and extraordinarily expensive.

And while Democrats emerged Wednesday from Tuesday's primaries speaking of unity and trying to heal self-inflicted intra-party wounds, they also acknowledged that large amounts of money would be needed as Republicans geared up for some stronger-than-expected challenges in the two races.

In Iowa, meanwhile, abortion loomed as a critical general election issue in the race between incumbent Republican Gov. Terry Branstad, who opposes abortion, and Democratic nominee Don Avenson, who is strongly backed by abortion rights forces.

Overall, nine states held primaries Tuesday. Incumbents faced little trouble in any place they were challenged.

In California, former San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein captured the Democratic gubernatorial nomination and immediately set out Wednesday to showcase her differences with Republican Sen. Pete Wilson, who easily won the GOP gubernatorial nod.

Although some Democrats have complained that the moderate Feinstein is too close in outlook to Wilson, she argued Wednesday that the two were ''from different political philosophies'' and she tried to paint Wilson as an ally of big-money interests.

Referring to his expensive 1988 Senate re-election bid, she contended: ''Three weeks after he took the oath of office he talked to the 'big cigars' and said, 'I want to be governor.'''

In defeating Attorney General John Van de Kamp 52 percent to 41 percent, Feinstein, 56, became the first female gubernatorial choice of a major party in the Golden State.

As the general election race began, all signs showed it to be near a dead heat.

Exit polling conducted by KCBS-TV in Los Angeles Tuesday showed a Wilson-Feinstein race too close to call. Pollster Mervin Field, director of the California Poll, predicted Wednesday: ''It's going to be a very tight race, one where style will be prominent because there's just an incredible lack of difference in the issues and points of view.''

''I can't remember when two gubernatorial candidates in the general election were so alike on the issues,'' Field said.

In Washington, National Democratic Chairman Ron Brown conceded that the race would be extraordinarily expensive, and he conceded Democrats would have to scramble for cash to keep up with the GOP.

But Brown added that he hoped ''the fact that our candidate happens to be a woman ... will be helpful in fund-raising.''

Brown likewise said he hoped that liberal out-of-state money would go to North Carolina, where former Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt Tuesday won the Democratic Senate nomination and the right to challenge conservative Republican Sen. Jesse Helms.

But even while Gantt, 47, was euphoric at becoming the first black to win nomination for any major post in the Tarheel state, he recognized that he may be hard pressed to outspend Helms and he began outlining what could be a bitter race.

''When he tries to tag me a 'liberal,' I'm going to talk about issues - like education, a clean environment, affordable health care. Those issues are Jesse-proof,'' said Gantt.

Gantt added that his race should not be an issue, although Brown indicated that he hoped it would help Democrats draw money to defeat Helms, who has a record of opposing various civil rights measures and affirmative action programs.

''It (race) has never been an issue in any race I've run. It certainly will not be an issue in our case,'' Gantt told reporters. ''If race is brought up, I'll respond to it in a way that will set the record straight. I really think people want to talk about issues.''

Buoyed by the margin of Gantt's 58 percent to 42 percent win over attorney Michael Easley, Brown pumped up the significance of the general election race against Helms.

''It certainly will be a race of national importance. We know that Jesse Helms has a record of buying victories,'' he said, conceding Democrats would not be able to compete ''dollar for dollar'' with Helms, who won his third term in 1984 in the most expensive Senate race in state history.

On the CBS ''This Morning'' program Thursday, Gantt said, ''I've asked Mr. Helms to consider not spending the obscene amount of money they spent in 1984. Let's go around to every court house in North Carolina and talk to the people about the issues. We believe we'll have enough money in case he decides not to do that, to run the kind of modern campaign that's necessary.''

But even though Democrats are worried about money in North Carolina, there are signs that a Helms-Gantt race could be a cliffhanger. According to a poll last week by the Greensboro News & Record, Gantt was favored by 44 percent of North Carolinians to 43 percent for Helms.

In Iowa, abortion, which was a key issue in the Democratic primary, shaped up as an even more important matter in the general election. National abortion rights groups wasted little time pushing Avenson, although the National Abortion Rights Action League said it did not underestimate ''the difficulty of unseating entrenched, anti-choice incumbents.''

Avenson's Democratic opponents - John Chrystal and Tom Miller - joined in a show of unity for Avenson.

''I've been a Democrat for a long time,'' Chrystal said. ''I've supported every Democrat that has run on the Democratic ticket and I intend to do that again this year without qualifications.''

Also at stake in Iowa is a hot Senate race between incumbent Democrat Tom Harkin and Republican Rep. Tom Tauke.

(JUNE 7) UPI - Tornadoes hit Colorado and Indiana... President Bush heads for the Midwest... the latest news details and developments from the wires of United Press International.

Thunderstorms swept the central Plains last night... creating seven tornadoes that slashed across eastern Colorado and left 14 people injured.

Colorado Governor Roy Romer surveyed storm-ravaged downtown Limon ... where a tornado cut through the middle of town and injured at least 14 people. Police report three of the injured were taken to a hospital. NO fatalities have been reported.

Further east, 75-mile-an-hour winds gusted in Kansas, overturning a tractor-trailer truck and blowing eight railroad cars off their tracks. NO injuries were reported. 65-mile-an-hour winds hit Kansas City, Missouri.

Authorities say at least three people were injured when tornadoes, high winds and thunderstorms swept through extreme southern Indiana yesterday afternoon.

The hardest hit area was Corydon... which already has been declared a federal and state disaster area because of weekend tornadoes and flooding last month. Three people in the Corydon area suffered minor injuries.

President Bush begins a two-day, four-state campaign swing in the Midwest today on behalf of three G-O-P gubernatorial candidates and one Senate hopeful.

Bush stops first in Milwaukee with a pitch for the re-election of Wisconsin Governor Tommy Thompson... followed by visits to Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska.

In Illinois, Bush hopes to help pump one-Million dollars into the campaign of Jim Edgar, who hopes to succeed retiring 14-year Governor James Thompson.

Bush also will try to lift the third-term hopes of Governor Terry Branstad in Iowa and generate a needed infusion of cash for struggling Senate hopeful Hal Daub in Nebraska.

The Bush trip into America's breadbasket comes on the heels of his summit with Soviet President Gorbachev GOHRB'-ah-chawf... and the signing of a U-S-Soviet treaty for the Kremlin to buy more U-S grain in the next five years. That plays especially well in Iowa and Illinois, which are top grain-producing states.

(JUNE 7) UPI - The Senate is scheduled to vote this morning on whether to limit debate on an anti-crime bill.

If lawmakers decide to limit debate on the legislation, passage is virtually guaranteed, possibly by the end of the week. Those who oppose a ban on assault-type weapons favor additional debate on the issue.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine warns time has expired and says if the attempt fails, ''that's it'' for the anti-crime bill.

The measure includes three key points- an expanded federal death penalty covering 30 crimes, a limit on the number of appeals to federal court a death row inmate can make, and the most divisive- a ban on semi-automatic weapons.

If approved, the bill would prohibit for three years the importation of semi-automatic weapons and the manufacture of four U-S semi-automatic guns.

The Senate voted 54-37 Tuesday to limit debate on the proposal, six votes short of the necessary 60 to impose the so-called cloture.

President de Klerk is convening a joint session of South Africa's Parliament today... apparently to lift a nationwide state of emergency.

The expected announcement ending the nearly four-year-old nationwide state of emergency would meet a key demand of the African National Congress before it agrees to full power-sharing talks with the white-minority government.

The state of emergency was imposed June 12th, 1986, to curb an uprising in the country's black townships.

De Klerk's apparent decision to rescind the state of emergency follows a slim parliamentary by-election victory. His ruling National Party held onto a middle-class and blue-collar constituency in an Indian Ocean port city.

Since February, de Klerk has released black leader Nelson Mandela following 27 years in prison... lifted a 30-year ban on the A-N-C and the South African Communist Party... and embarked on an program to abolish apartheid.

BUCHAREST, Romania (JUNE 7) UPI - The next battleground in a long-running conflict between ethnic Hungarians and Romanians may be the new Parliament a spokesman for a minority-rights political group said Thursday.

The Democratic Union of Hungarians, the largest opposition party to emerge from Romania's May 20 elections, fears it may be ''drawn into conflict again'' when the legislature convenes for the first time Saturday, spokesman Odon Bitay said.

A centuries-old rivalry between Romania's ethnic Hungarians and Romanian nationalists flared in March with deadly clashes in the Transylvanian city of Tirgu Mures.

Some ethnic Hungarians accuse the National Salvation Front, which won a landslide victory in last month's elections and dominates Romania's provisional government, of encouraging anti-Hungarian violence.

''The forces in the Front responsible (for the Tirgu Mures violence) were unmasked in the days that followed,'' Bitay said. ''Our relations are forever injured. We don't trust them anymore.''

Party members have indicated they will continue to press measures safeguarding minority rights as well as separate schools and publications in the Hungarian language.

The Romanian nationalist group Vatrea Romaneasca cites these demands as evidence that ethnic Hungarians want cultural and political autonomy for Transylvania, which was once part of Hungary.

The Democratic Union of Hungarians surprised many observers by winning more votes in the May 20 election than either of the two historical opposition parties, the National Liberal Party and the National Peasants Party.

But the minority-rights group remains a tiny force in comparison to the Front, which holds two-thirds of the seats in the new Parliament. Bitay said some party members now wish they had not done so well.

''We're laughing with one eye and crying with the other,'' he said.

Bitay said the party's biggest task would be getting the Front to regard it as a serious opposition force, not just a special interest group.

''(This is) the last chance for democracy,'' he said. ''This government has all the factors to lead us back to totalitarianism.''

National Salvation Front spokesman Ion Ilie said the Democratic Union's relatively strong showing in the May 20 polls - winning 41 out of 505 parliament seats - was a reaction to the recent violence in Transylvania, where most of Romania's 2.5 million Hungarians live.

''After the elections, in two years time, things will settle,'' Ilie said. ''Then the minority party will have its proper place.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - American businesses plan to increase capital spending by 5.5 percent in 1990, a slower pace than previously estimated and the lowest level in three years, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

The slowdown reflects the sluggish national economy.

The 5.5 percent projection for spending on plants and equipment - not counting inflation - is lower than the department's Census Bureau initial April estimate of 7.6 percent, which was revised up to 7.9 percent.

It is also the worst showing since a gain of about 4.2 percent in 1987, a Commerce Department spokesman said.

The government attributed the decline to higher inflation. Private economists had expected the capital spending figure to remain at its earlier level.

''Real spending increased 1.8 percent in the first quarter of 1990, following a 0.6 percent increase in the fourth quarter of 1989,'' the Commerce Department said in its quarterly report.

''It is expected to increase 1.1 percent in the second quarter of 1990, to increase 0.7 percent in the third quarter, and to decrease 0.4 percent in the fourth quarter,'' the department said.

In 1990 dollars, American businesses plan to increase overall capital spending by 6.7 percent in 1990, by 3.4 percent in manufacturing and 8.7 percent in non-manufacturing industries, the government said.

In the durable manufacturing sector, ''the largest planned increases are in fabricated metals and nonferrous metals,'' the Commerce Department said.

''Increases are also planned in blast furnances, electrical machinery, aircraft and other durables,'' the department said. ''Decreases are planned in motor vehicles, stone-clay-glass, and non-electrical machinery.''

In the non-durable sector, ''the largest planned increase is in petroleum

'' the government said. ''Increases are also planned in paper and chemicals. Decreases are planned in rubber, textiles and food and beverage.''

Starting with the Thursday report, the Census Bureau will no longer provide industry-by-industry estimates in 1982 dollars - or not accounting for inflation.

The report is based on a survey mailed to number of American companies corporations March 30.

PARIS (JUNE 7) UPI - Top seed Steffi Graf and No. 2 Monica Seles both won in straight sets Thursday to easily gain the final of the French Open.

Graf won eight games in a row midway through her match to sweep away Jana Novotna, 6-1, 6-2, and gain the French final for the fourth consecutive year. Seles ended the run of 14-year-old Jennifer Capriati, 6-2, 6-2.

Capriati, a pro of two months making her Grand Slam debut, showed her nerves in the Center Court match, three times double-faulting on break point.

Capriati, cheered on by the crowd, staved off five match points in the final game before sending a forehand long.

''I'm a little disappointed that I didn't win the match, but I'm happy to have made the semifinals,'' Capriati said. ''In the first set she was playing well and didn't miss, and I was making all the errors. I wasn't going up to the ball and closing my points off.''

Graf, the French Open champion in 1987 and 1988 before losing last year's final to Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario, defeated Seles in the 1989 semifinals at Roland Garros. However, Seles ended Graf's 66-match winning streak in Berlin last month, and now owns a 31-match string of her own.

The men's semifinals are scheduled for Friday, with third seed Andre Agassi playing Jonas Svensson and No. 4 Andres Gomez facing No. 7 Thomas Muster.

Capriati double-faulted away the opening game of the match, and Seles broke again at love in the third game for a 3-0 lead. Capriati got one of the breaks back in the fourth game when Seles was long with a backhand, but Seles easily took the set.

There were five consecutive service breaks to start the second set, with Capriati double-faulting on the final point of the first and third games.

Seles, a 16-year-old Yugoslavian who lives in Florida, finally held at love to go up 4-2, and she broke again in the next game with a forehand service return down the line.

''The score looked easy but the game was very tough,'' Seles said. ''I can tell you, at 14 I wouldn't have gone into the semifinals.''

Graf's victory boosted her match record for 1990 to 31-1, and she is 7-0 for her career over Novotna.

After squandering triple break point in the second game, allowing Novotna to hold, Graf swept the final five games of the opening set.

The 20-year-old West German, still suffering from a cold, broke service in the fourth game when Novotna netted a forehand, and again in the sixth game with a backhand volley.

Graf closed out the 26-minute set with a love game, including a pair of aces.

Following early-morning rain and cool conditions, there was a trace of brightness as the second set began.

Graf jumped to a 3-0 lead in the second set on the strength of two service breaks before Novotna began to assert herself.

A pair of double-faults by Graf in the fourth game helped Novotna achieve her initial break point of the match, and the seventh seed from Czechoslovakia cashed in on her second opportunity when Graf sliced a backhand side.

Novotna followed by holding serve at love to narrow her deficit to 3-2, but Graf captured the final three games.

Graf delivered five aces in the match, but also committed five double-faults.

''I was leading very easily 6-1, 3-0, and I had a short letdown,'' Graf said. ''I had two double-faults on my serve, maybe I just wasn't concentrated.

''It's true I'm making more mistakes, but usually in situations that aren't so important. But even with my cold, I won every match very easily, so I can't complain.''

Graf said she was unhappy with the weather conditions, explaining she ''wasn't feeling 100 percent. When you have a cold, you don't like to play in cold weather.''

Novotna said the first set ''was really easy for Steffi. She played shorter balls and was moving quite easy. In the second set I had a chance, but she proved she was No. 1.''

WARSAW, POLAND (JUNE 7) UPI - Solidarity ideologist Adam Michnik said Thursday that Solidarity founder Lech Walesa is acting like an emperor and warned him against ruling Poland like ''a monarch of a post-communist empire'' if elected president.

Michnik, angered by Walesa's attempt to fire him as editor in chief of the Solidarity newspaper Gazeta Wyborcza, published two of Walesa's letters to him along with a reply lashing out at the union leader.

''Instead of being Solidarity leader, a mass movement of Polish democracy, you are slowly becoming an emperor who is sending instructions to his friends saying you are fired,'' Michnik said in his letter.

''He will have a chance to win on condition he will be president of democratic Poland but not a monarch of a post-communist empire,'' Michnik said.

Earlier Walesa fired Solidarity activist Henryk Wujec as the secretary of the Civic Commitee - a group of union activists and intellectuals led by Walesa - complaining he had lost control of the group.

Michnik called Wujec's dismissal a ''political mistake'' and urged Walesa to reverse his decision.

The letters also revealed a conflict between the union leader and Solidarity Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki.

Walesa is trying to have presidential elections held under the old Parliament this fall instead of waiting for election of a new Parliament next spring.

Backers of the prime minister want the current alignment of forces under communist President Wojciech Jaruzelski to last until elections are held under a new Parliament.

But whether the first or second option will win, Walesa still wants to become president to crown his career, Michnik suggested.

Political analysts said Walesa has been campaigning for the presidential election this fall because former communists, who have a majority in the lower house, or the Sejm, would vote for him.

''Walesa is less dangerous to him (Mazowiecki) than the leaders of the new emerging anti-communist parties who will be taking part in the spring parliamentary elections,'' one analyst said.

''What is this conflict about,'' Michnik said in the commentary carried by Gazeta. ''It is the new shape of the political scene, the attitude toward Mazowiecki's government, the persistent attempts at destabilization taken by supporters of Lech Walesa's election for president by the Parliament this autumn.

''We did not support this idea in our paper,'' Michnik said. ''Personally, I think like Premier Mazowiecki does. The election of the new president should be held in a fully democratic way by a general ballot or by a democratically elected parliament.''

MIAMI (JUNE 7) UPI - Immigration and Border Patrol investigators said they have evidence linking deposed Panamian leader Manuel Noriega to selling fake visas and passports and smuggling illegal aliens to the United States.

"He was involved and could be charged," Robert Harris, chief investigator for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Miami, said Wednesday. "We can go and seek an indictment."

But federal prosecutors in Miami, who are seeking to convict the deposed Panamanian leader on drug smuggling charges, said there is not enough proof to charge Noriega with immigration crimes. "There is no indictment against Gen. Noriega, nor is there one contemplated for allegations of alien smuggling," said U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen.

Harris reiterated allegations made earlier this year by the new Panamanian government, which said Noriega converted Panama's immigration service into a cash machine that generated tens of millions of dollars annually by selling false passports and visas.

The business operated from the early 1980s until Dec. 19, 1989, one day before U.S. troops invaded Panama and overthrew Noriega's government, Harris said. At its peak, the operation may have smuggled 1,000 illegal aliens a month. The aliens, mainly Chinese and Cubans, paid $3,000 to $20,000 to use Panama as a transit point to the United States, Harris said.

"The document suppliers are in Cuba and Miami and the quality is very good " said Tom Hampson, special agent with the Border Patrol's anti-smuggling unit, who worked on the case for four years.

"A complete package consisted of a visa, passport, U.S. birth certificate, Social Security card and sometimes a military identification card. The down payment is made in Panama and other payments are made after safe arrival."

Duke Austin, an INS spokesman in Washington, said the Chinese used Panama as a gateway to Florida because Noriega had relatives working in Panamanian consulates in Hong Kong and Taiwan. "This is probably the only alien-smuggling opration run wholly by a government," Harris said.

Many illegal aliens came through the Bahamas, first aboard Panamanian Air Force planes then on boats operated by smugglers, Harris said. "There may be as many as 7,000 Chinese and 3,000 Cubans stranded in Panama since Noriega was brought to the country," Austin said.

Harris said the INS received information about the smuggling operation from former officers who served under Noriega. Maj. Felipe Camargo, who headed Panamanian immigration for four months, said he received $300,000 during that time for his help. He said the immigrant pipeline has resumed operation on a smaller scale, but refused to identify the participants.

SRINAGAR, India (JUNE 7) UPI - Kashmiri militants attacked a waterfront hotel Thursday in northern Kashmir, wounding at least four Indian paramilitary policemen as they swam in picturesque Lake Dal.

A spokesman for the outlawed Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front claimed in a telephone interview that seven policemen were killed.

''We saw at least seven blood-soaked bodies floating on the surface of the lake,'' he said.

But official reports said only four members of the paramilitary Central Reserve Police Force were wounded, all of them critically, the Press Trust of India news agency reported.

Indian paramilitary troops reportedly have taken over a number of hotels along Lake Dal, one of the main attractions for tourists visiting the picturesque Kashmir Valley. Ten hotel owners demanded Wednesday that the troops be withdrawn.

Thursday's attack was the latest confrontation between Indian security forces and Moslem Kashmiri militants, who stepped up a drive for independence in mid-January after a clash between protesters and police left more than 30 people dead.

Residents of the predominantly Moslem region of Kashmir demand the right to self-determination, charging that successive Hindu-dominated administrations in New Delhi have discriminated against them.

The latest violence came as about 1,000 Moslem women staged a sit-in in three separate sections of Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir state. The protest snarled traffic in the city for about three hours.

In Safa Kadal, on the western outskirts of the city, about 300 women chanted anti-India slogans and demanded the release of a shopkeeper, Muzaffar Shah, who was arrested by security forces Tuesday. There were no details on the reason for his arrest.

In the Shaheed Gunj section of the city, another 300 women demonstrated, carrying placards demanding ''Indian forces get out of Kashmir'' and ''Stop army repression in Kashmir.''

In the center city, about 400 women protested outside two houses where Indian security forces were stationed. The houses belong to Kashmiri Hindus who fled the region after the Moslem uprising began in January.

The protests lasted for about three hours during the morning. At all three sites, police watched without interfering and the demonstrators dispersed peacefully.

About 900 Moslem workers at the government-owned Hindustan Machine Tools Watch Factory launched a hunger strike Thursday to protest the closure of the facility, which shut down after the killing of the general manager in mid-April.

A spokesman for the workers rejected plans under way to shift the factory to southern city of Bangalore, saying they would not be able to work outside the region because of prejudice against Kashmiri Moslems created by the current conflict.

Also Thursday, hundreds of doctors and other medical workers called a one-day hunger strike Monday to protest the detention of two paramedics by the security forces, a spokesman for the group said.

Canadian political leaders will meet for a fifth day today in an effort to reach agreement on a constitutional amendment granting special powers to Quebec. Prime Minister Mulroney labeled the talks ''constructive'' and says ''some progress'' has been made. Debate centers on the so-called Meech Lake accord which would give the mostly French-speaking province of Quebec recognition as a ''distinct society'' and power to preserve its language and culture.

Alaskan officials say last week's train derailment has left 70-thousand gallons of fuel oil between the tracks and a wildlife refuge. The spokesman adds the Alaska Railroad has a long way to go before the clean-up is complete. A handful of oily birds and beavers have been rescued.

The National Academy of Sciences says pregnant women with healthy diets do NOT need to take vitamin supplements, despite popular opinion. The guidelines say vitamins can adversely interact with nutrients obtained through a healthy well-balanced diet. KUWAIT (JUNE 7) UPI - The Bush administration is on the verge of halting an 18-month dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization because of a recent guerrilla attack on Israel, a senior Palestinian leader said in remarks published Thursday.

''We have received information that the Bush administration has virtually taken a decision to halt dialogue with the PLO and it is now drafting the decision before making an official announcement,'' said Khalid Al Qabas, an associate of PLO leader Yasser Arafat, in an interview with the independent daily al Qabas.

The United States entered talks with the PLO after Arafat renounced violence and recognized the state of Israel. But an aborted raid on a Tel Aviv beach last week, which Arafat has not directly condemned, prompted U.S. diplomats in the region to say they believed the talks in Tunis could be in danger.

''If the Bush administration has taken the decision, it means that it has dealt a blow to the peace process in the region,'' said Al Hassan, chairman of the foreign relations committee of the Palestine National Council and a member of the central committee of Arafat's Fatah organization, the largest PLO faction.

Al Hassan criticized last week's attack, saying: ''The operation has dealt a blow to the peace process and has paved the way for an explosion in the region.''

Abul Abbas, the leader of the radical Palestinian Liberation Front and a member of the PLO's executive committee, claimed responsibility for the beach attack but said he had not consulted with Arafat beforehand.

But al Hassan also blamed the Bush administration for not taking the U.S.-PLO talks seriously.

''The Palestinian message we send to the Bush administration is this: the Palestinian people cannot be dealt with through humiliation and peace cannot be established except on the basis of justice and dignity,'' he said in the al Qabas interview.

''For us, it is better to halt the U.S.-Palestinian dialogue which has been going on since December 1988, because it has not been a real dialogue. We consider the real dialogue the PLO and the United States has not started yet,'' said Al Hassan, considered close to Arafat.

Farouk Kaddoumi, chief of the political department of the PLO, told the same newspaper in a separate interview that a U.S. decision to abandon the dialogue would not prompt the PLO to drop its peace initiative launched two years ago.

''Any American decision to halt dialogue with the PLO will not motivate the organization to give up its peace initiative,'' the newspaper quoted Kaddoumi as saying.

Kaddoumi told the same newspaper that the United States should abandon its biased stance at the U.N. Security Council.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) UPI - Prices opened higher Thursday in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues, rebounding from Wednesday's pullback.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 13.35 Wednesday, was up 6.55 to 2918.20 shortly after the market opened.

Advances led declines 527-297 among the 1,341 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 12,000,000 shares.

Analysts said they expected prices to stabilize after Wednesday's weakness and continue the upward trend which has taken the Dow industrials to 10 record highs in the past four weeks.

Stocks closed lower Wednesday in moderate trading, unable to fight off profit takers after the market's broad-based rally Monday.

For the second day in a row, the market was unable to shake off profit taking after rallying to all-time highs in the Dow industrials and other major indexes Monday.

The Dow fell about 10 points in early trading before regaining most of that loss, but the recovery attempt ran out of steam. Prices extended their declines even further and oil issues, which were lower after Tuesday's sharp drop in oil prices, continued to weaken even as oil prices turned slightly higher on the day.

Analysts said they expected buying interest to remain in check since many investors expect more of a pullback after the record highs, making stocks available at lower prices.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - American businesses plan to increase capital spending by 5.5 percent in 1990, a slower pace than previously estimated and the smallest investment gain in three years, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

The slow growth reflects the sluggish national economy.

''I think the basic message is so far at least business spending remains a positive,'' said Robert Dederick, chief economist at Northern Trust in Chicago. ''It's not dymanic or anything. But it is a source of strength in the economy.''

The 5.5 percent projection for spending on plants and equipment - not counting inflation - is lower than the department's Census Bureau initial April estimate of 7.6 percent, which was revised up to 7.9 percent.

It is also the worst showing since an advance of about 4.2 percent in 1987 a Commerce Department spokesman said.

Nonetheless, Dederick said, ''Businesses still haven't seriously pulled back ... and plan to boost their spending, albeit moderately.''

But he added, ''This can turn on you if expectations are disappointing and sales growth is less than you expect.''

The government attributed the decline in the estimate to higher inflation. Private economists had expected the capital spending figure to remain at its earlier level.

''Real spending increased 1.8 percent in the first quarter of 1990, following a 0.6 percent increase in the fourth quarter of 1989,'' the Commerce Department said in its quarterly report.

''It is expected to increase 1.1 percent in the second quarter of 1990, to increase 0.7 percent in the third quarter, and to decrease 0.4 percent in the fourth quarter,'' the department said.

In 1990 dollars, American businesses plan to increase overall capital spending by 6.7 percent in 1990, by 3.4 percent in manufacturing and 8.7 percent in non-manufacturing industries, the government said.

In the durable manufacturing sector, ''the largest planned increases are in fabricated metals and nonferrous metals,'' the Commerce Department said.

''Increases are also planned in blast furnances, electrical machinery, aircraft and other durables,'' the department said. ''Decreases are planned in motor vehicles, stone-clay-glass, and non-electrical machinery.''

In the non-durable sector, ''the largest planned increase is in petroleum '' the government said. ''Increases are also planned in paper and chemicals. Decreases are planned in rubber, textiles and food and beverage.''

Starting with the Thursday report, the Census Bureau will no longer provide industry-by-industry estimates in 1982 dollars - or not accounting for inflation.

The report is based on a survey mailed to number of American companies March 30.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (JUNE 7) UPI - A U.N. official urged the Philippines Thursday to grant temporary asylum to 101 Vietnamese boat people who have been housed on a U.S. Navy supply ship for more than a week.

Sri Wijaratne, representative of the U.N. high commissioner for refugees in Manila, appealed to the Philippines to take in the Vietnamese, who were plucked from two leaky boats off the coast of Vietnam in late May by a U.S. salvage ship.

The boat people were later transfered to the USS White Plains, a supply ship anchored near the U.S. Subic Bay Naval Base, 50 miles north of Manila.

U.S. officials said that in past cases the Philippines immediately granted temporary asylum to boat people but was dragging its heels this time, perhaps because of increasing concern among southeast Asian nations that the United States is not doing its fair share to solve the refugee problem.

The Philippines was among Asian countries that recently endorsed the forced repatriation of Vietnamese refugees back to Vietnam, a move the United States has condemned on humanitarian grounds.

However, Washington's refusal to set up its own temporary camp for the refugees in the region has prompted southeast Asian countries to threaten unilateral action for the forcible return of the refugees to Vietnam.

Philippine officials said Tuesday the 101 boat people would not be allowed entry unless the United States gave assurance they would be resettled within a reasonable period.

MOSCOW (JUNE 7) UPI - The man who lowered the nation's last four leaders into their graves laid to rest Thursday a rumor that he dropped Leonid Brezhnev's corpse.

''The sound people heard that day was the sound of the Kremlin clock and a cannon salute,'' Georgy Kovalenko, gravedigger for Communist VIPs, told the Sobesednik supplement to the Komsomolskaya Pravda newspaper.

Ever since Brezhnev was buried Nov. 15, 1982, Soviet citizens have disputed what caused a thud just as the Soviet leader was lowered into the grave.

One word-of-mouth story said the bottom of the coffin was faulty, as were most manufactured products during Brezhnev's time, and gave way under the bulky Brezhnev. Another blames the gravediggers.

But Kovalenko said that he lowered the now-loathed Brezhnev ''by the book'' as he did Nikita Khruschev, Yuri Andropov and Konstantin Chernenko: ''Quickly and gently as if by a high-speed elevator.''

Kovalenko's duties as the burier of the top Communist Party leadership also includes digging the graves for their relatives.

When Brezhnev's mother died, the Novodeviche cemetery was cleared of all private citizens, Kovlenko recalled.

But Brezhnev lingered after the ceremony and told the cemetery workers not to ''forget to thank the gravedigger,'' he said.

Recalling the comments from the high-and-mighty, he said former Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov promised to give him a book after one funeral.

A Brezhnev relative, former Interior Minister Nikolai Shchelokov, asked how much he made. Kovalenko says he made 300 rubles, or $480 a month, ''plus tips.''

''For fulfilling a very important task, there are bonuses,'' he said.

LONDON (JUNE 7) UPI - Gold dropped to its lowest level in nearly four years Thursday in spot trading in London, with observers citing waning demand as further sapping a weak market.

Gold dropped $4.75 an ounce to $352.50 at midday in London, the lowest level since July 1986 when the price was $353 an ounce. Some analysts expected the price to fall more.

''The market is sagging under its own weight,'' said Ted Arnold, a precious metals analyst with Merrill Lynch. ''It's a matter of excess supply in the face of falling demand.''

Jewelry demand had eased and investment demand also has fallen in the Far East and Middle East, he said.

Analysts expected the price to drop more in the next few weeks before buyers will be tempted to buy again.

''The market's been looking nervous for a while and today it could break the critical $350-an-ounce barrier, and then it could fall as far down as $340 or even $330,'' Arnold said.

A loss in confidence among traders after falls in New York and Hong Kong overnight pushed the price down in morning trading in London, dealers said.

The gold market has weakened since the beginning of the year when the price stood at $420 an ounce. Analysts said the falls were triggered by two waves of selling from the Middle East, and recent bouts of selling by the Soviet Union to cover foreign debts.

The price of gold fell sharply March 26 to $368 an ounce, a drop of $26, and slipped $11 to $363.75 an ounce May 23 as Middle Eastern traders dumped gold on the market.

The Soviet Union, the second largest producer of gold in the world, sold gold through swap transactions to pay its foreign debts in recent weeks.

''The Russians already have around 200 to 300 metric tons of gold tied up in swap deals,'' said Arnold.

Under a swap deal, gold is deposited in a lender's vaults in return for foreign exchange credit.

Peter Wolfe-Johnson, gold analyst at Willaims de Broe, said loss of market confidence was sending the price down, but indicated the bottom of the market was near. He did not expected the price to dip below $340 an ounce, a figure he expected within a week.

Wolfe-Johnson added the fall was partly due to a boom at the end of last year, when most trading had been on futures contracts, and not in actual physical purchases of gold. The market is paying for the technique now, he said.

TEHRAN, IRAN (JUNE 7) UPI - Iranian security forces seized 50 tons of narcotic drugs in the past 16 months of its war on traffickers, officials said Thursday.

Interior Minister Abdullah Noori, speaking to reporters at the end of Iran's latest nationwide operation to round up traffickers, said the security forces seized 50 tons of opium, heroin and hashish.

Some 960 suspected drug traffickers and 8,000 suspected addicts were rounded up when Revolutionary Guards assisted by rural police made a nationwide sweep last month as part of Iran's 16-month war on drugs.

The traffickers face the death sentence under stiff anti-narcotics laws that went into effect last year.

Last month, the Tehran newspaper Kayhan said 13 people were executed in Shiraz, in southern Iran, after a special anti-narcotics court found them guilty of drug trafficking.

Kayhan listed their names but not the charges they were found guilty of. Drug trials are normally not open to the public, but the sentences were carried out after approval of the High Judicial Council.

Officials said traffickers are executed only as second offenders. Since January 1989, Iran has executed more than 1,370 convicted drug traffickers and at least another 360 people found guilt of other serious crimes, including murder, armed robbery and rape.

Iran has come under criticism abroad because of its high record of executions.

Noori said U.N. Human Rights Commission investigator Reynaldo Galindo Pohl would make a second visit to Iran shortly, and would be welcomed. Pohl visited Iran in January to investigate charges of human rights violations.

HOUSTON (JUNE 7) UPI - It appears likely that at least three foreign leaders will join President Bush at a rodeo and barbecue he is sponsoring before the start of the international Economic Summit next month.

The summit planning staff has confirmed receiving ''positive reactions'' from representatives of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu. But no formal acceptances have yet been given.

Bush has invited all of the summit participants to attend the rodeo, barbecue and country-western concert July 8, but it is not an official summit function.

Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti has declined the invitation, and French President Francois Mitterrand's representatives have said he more than likely will not attend.

There has been no word yet from West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, but summit organizers have received ''a fairly positive response'' on the possible attendance of Jacques Delors, president of the European Communities Commission.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) UPI - Stock prices headed higher in moderate trading early Thursday, bouncing back from Wednesday's decline, but off their early highs.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 13.35 Wednesday, was up 6.31 to 2917.96 at 11 a.m. EDT.

Advances led declines 648-518 among the 1,723 issues crossing the NYSE tape.

Volume amounted to about 51,000,000 shares at 11 a.m., compared with 88,140,000 in the same period Wednesday.

Prices opened higher in an attempt to rally after the declines of Tuesday and Wednesday. Profit taking, which was responsible for the pullback of the last two sessions, cut into the gains but the market rebounded to modestly higher levels.

Analysts said they did not expect any major moves, that the market needs more time to consolidate the gains from the rally that has taken the Dow industrials above 2900 and to 10 record highs in the last four weeks.

They did add that money managers remain under pressure to enter the market after its run to all-time highs, and are looking to secondary issues for a place to commit funds.

On the trading floor, Ohio Edison was the most active issue, down 1/8 to 20 1/2.

Computer Associates International followed, up 1/2 to 16 3/4. American Express was third, up 1/2 to 31 3/4.

Among the other blue chips, Philip Morris was up 3/8 to 45 1/4 and Eastman Kodak was up 5/8 to 42 1/2 in active trading. Kodak rose sharply Wednesday but the company said its policy is not to comment on unusual market activity or rumors. Analysts said the stock has been a laggard in the market's rally and is now attracting investors. AT&T was up 3/8 to 43 1/8 and IBM was down 3/8 to 120 1/2.

Elsewhere, NCH, which plunged Wednesday, extended its decline to 57 1/4, down 1 1/2. Late Tuesday, the company reported earnings for the quarter ended in April below expectations. Some analysts said they felt the market overreacted to the news.

Prices were narrowly mixed in light trading on the American Stock Exchange.

PaineWebber's call warrants on the Tokyo stock market's Nikkei index led the Amex issues, up 1/8 to 5 3/4.

KATMANDU, NEPAL (JUNE 7) UPI - About a dozen people were injured when members of the pro-democracy Nepali Congress Party clashed with supporters of the ousted monarchist regime who had just formed their own political party, leaders said Thursday.

Leaders of the new monarchist group, called the National Democratic Party, said the fighting started when members of the Nepali Congress and communist parties tried to prevent them from meeting in Katmandu earlier in the week.

''Anybody who tries to attempt to foil a peaceful meeting, whether they be from the Congress or the communist parties, are the new mandaleys (hooligans) in the country,'' said Pashupati Shumshere Rana, a former minister in the ousted government.

Nepal's King Birendra bowed to massive pro-democracy demonstrations this spring and agreed to dissolve his absolute monarchy in favor of an interim government that will draw up a new constitution for the Himalayan nation.

Birendra is still king and has numerous supporters in his impoverished kingdom.

KUWAIT (JUNE 7) UPI - Kuwait geared up Thursday for what has been billed as the first free elections in the Persian Gulf since the East European pro-democracy movement caught the attention of the world last fall.

A major opposition group met in the capital Thursday to renew calls that the June 10 balloting be boycotted because it contends the 75-member National Council up for election is an unconstitutional body.

Sheikh Jaber al Ahmed al Sabah, the emir of Kuwait, announced the creation of the council last April after three months of sometimes violent pro-democracy demonstrations that analysts said were touched off by the events in Eastern Europe.

Al Sabah has decreed that 50 members of the council will be elected Sunday and that he will appoint the other 25. There are 348 candidates running for the positions in the Moslem country of 1.7 million. Women, along with police and soldiers, are not allowed to vote.

North Yemen, which recently combined with the Marxist South Yemen, has elected members to a People's Council but most Gulf states are ruled by sultans, emirs or un-elected presidents who hold absolute authority.

The new Kuwait council is designed to be a four-year transitional body that will study the pitfalls the tiny oil-producing Persian state would encounter if it were to return to a parliamentary system, al Sabah said.

Past Parliaments have had stormy relationships with Kuwait's ruling emirs, who dissolved the country's last Parliament in the mid-1980s at the height of the Iran-Iraq War, saying it was destabilizing the country.

Senior Kuwaiti officials have said repeatedly that the new council will not be a substitute for the dissolved Parliament.

The so-called Group of 32, which began the pro-democracy campaign to restore the Parliament last November, has rejected the council as unconstitutional and urged that the election be boycotted.

But the Kuwaiti government appears confident the election will proceed without problems. It has erected tents throughout the country for civic banquets where citizens can question the candidates and launched its own campaign to convince Kuwaitis that it is honorable to vote.

''Taking part in the elections of the National Council is a national duty for every citizen,'' says one government slogan.

Sources said opposition leaders met at the house of the speaker of the dissolved Parliament to renew its stand on the boycott, but said police did not intervene even though there is a ban on unauthorized political gatherings.

Police arrested 12 opposition activists last month for attending unauthorized meetings but al Sabah pardoned them as a goodwill gesture.

Political analysts said if the voter turnout exceeds 50 percent, the government would consider the election a success.

OTTAWA (JUNE 7) UPI - Canada's political leaders, trying to staunch a rising tide of separatism in Quebec, began a fifth day of negotiations Thursday over a constitutional amendment that would recognize the French-speaking province as a distinct society with powers to promote its French language and culture.

The ''distinct society clause,'' embodied in the constitutional amendment formally known as the Meech Lake accord, has given rise to one of the most emotional debates in Canadian political history.

Manitoba Premier Gary Filmon, one of three leaders opposed to the accord, said before entering the talks he wants to ensure that the distinct society clause does not override the nation's Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

There is deep concern that Quebec will use the clause to pass laws that favor 6.2 million Francophones while violating the rights of English-speaking and other ethnic minorities in the province.

''Charter rights must be accurately portrayed in our Constitution,'' Filmon said.

A proposal apparently under discussion, according to sources close to the negotiations, was a ''Canada clause,'' which would recognize linguistic minority rights and the country's cultural diversity while confirming the supremacy of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

The Canada clause would appear in the preamble of the Constitution, giving it much less legal force than the distinct society clause, which would appear in the main body of the Constitution. It was unclear whether Quebec would accept that proposal.

Late Wednesday, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and several provincial leaders indicated they have not reached final agreement on any issues, but have made progress on several fronts.

''We had another long day,'' Mulroney said Wednesday after talks went on for 12 hours before recessing until Thursday. ''It was constructive. We made some progress.''

The leaders are racing against the clock to complete the negotiations. The Meech Lake accord becomes void if it is not approved by all provinces before June 23.

The accord was drafted three years ago by Mulroney and the 10 provincial premiers after Quebec refused to sign the Constitution on grounds it did not recognize the province's French-speaking population.

Quebec has warned it will secede unless the Meech Lake accord is approved without changes.

''Meech Lake is the biggest roller-coaster ride in the world. One day you're up, the next day you're down,'' said New Brunswick Premier Frank

McKenna, one of three provincial leaders opposed to the accord because they feel it gives Quebec too much discretionary power.

An aide to Manitoba Premier Gary Filmon, who also opposes the accord, said the mood was more pessimistic than Tuesday's talks, which concluded with an informal agreement on a process of reforming the Senate, the upper chamber of Parliament.

''There's not the same sense of momentum today,'' the aide said.

MOSCOW (JUNE 7) UPI - Warsaw Pact leaders met in Moscow Thursday for a summit on the future of an alliance drastically changed in the aftermath of the democracy movement that swept Eastern Europe.

Except for the Soviet hosts, most of the heads of government, heads of state and defense and foreign ministers at Thursday's meeting were new to the Warsaw Treaty Organization's ''political consultative committee.''

Old-style Communist governments were swept from power throughout Eastern Europe in last fall's democracy movement, and the new leaders no longer take their orders from Moscow.

The new Warsaw Pact governments have been demanding better trade deals and more equal relations with their former bosses in Moscow and are pushing Soviet troops out of their territory.

One new leader, Hungarian Prime Minister Jozsef Antall, has called for his country to withdraw from the Warsaw Pact.

The focus of Thursday's meeting was the issue of the future of European alliances in general and specifically the possible NATO membership of a united Germany. President Mikhail Gorbachev was also to brief the leaders on his recent summit with President Bush.

Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel said he had brought a draft declaration to the meeting that ''would mean a fundamental transformation of the whole Warsaw Pact and its function,'' the Czechoslovak news agency CTK said.

He did not give details of the draft document.

The future alliance membership of a united Germany was also the focus of a meeting of foreign ministers of NATO countries in Scotland Thursday.

During a trip to Moscow April 29, new conservative East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere disagreed with the Soviet stance against NATO membership for a united Germany.

De Maiziere repeated his position that Germany could be a member of a changed NATO in an interview Thursday with the East German news agency ADN.

''A united Germany could belong to such a notably changed NATO for a transitional period and with a special military status for today's German Democratic Republic territory,'' he said.

The Soviets have opposed full NATO membership for Germany, but in recent weeks officials have indicated they may accept a compromise allowing membership in the political alliance but not participation in the Western unified military command.

Outside of the formal meetings, Gorbachev held separate talks with Polish President Wocjiech Jaruzelski - one of the few familiar leaders at the summit - and met Romanian President Ion Iliescu to congratulate him on his victory in recent elections.

''The two presidents reaffirmed their interest in reorganizing the activities of the Warsaw Treaty Organization and the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, and in turning them into institutions actively promoting international stability,'' the official Tass news agency said of the meeting with Iliescu.

At the last meeting of the political consultative committee, held in Bucharest in July 1989 amid the first signs of massive reforms in Eastern Europe, participants called for ridding Europe of military blocs and the eventual disbanding of both alliances.

''Their call ... remains valid,'' Tass said.

AMRITSAR, INDIA (JUNE 7) UPI - Sikh extremists paralyzed northern Punjab state with a general strike and killed six people in attacks on police stations Thursday on the anniversary of the Indian army's assault on Sikhdom's holiest shrine.

Sikh separatists, waging a bloody campaign for a theocratic state in Punjab since 1983, attacked police and paramilitary posts with rockets and submachine guns but police said there were only six casualities because virtually all of the rockets missed their targets.

In a related development, police said Sikh militants killed five people they suspected of being police informers in and around Amritsar, the capital of the northern state of Punjab.

The general strike was called to mark the sixth anniversary of the army's June 4, 1984, assault on the Golden Temple of Amritsar in an attempt to flush out Sikh militants.

On the morning of June 7, Indian forces announced they were in control of the temple and that the charismatic preacher Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale, who led the resistance, was dead.

More than 700 Sikhs were killed in the attack, which outraged the Sikh community. Four months later, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, who ordered the assault, was assassinated by two Sikh security guards.

The strike Thursday left businesses and medical facilities closed, shops shuttered and streets deserted, police said.

Militants issued a statement earlier this week saying strike breakers would be punished with death.

The strike activists disrupted rail traffic by bombing tracks at 13 sites in the state.

The official said militants erected road blocks, allowing only ambulances and journalists' cars to move unhindered.

Authorities have arrested nearly 1,200 people since Tuesday in an effort to prevent violence during the anniversary period. Most are likely to be released after the anniversary ends.

ELMONT, N.Y. (JUNE 7) UPI - Kentucky Derby winner Unbridled was installed Thursday as the 4-5 program favorite and drew the No. 5 hole for Saturday's Belmont Stakes - a perfect starting point for his attempt to win a second jewel from the Triple Crown.

The fifth position puts Unbridled right in the middle of the nine-horse gate and just outside Thirty Six Red and Go And Go, the two speed horses in the race. Thirty Six Red drew the rail, with Go And Go alongside in the No. 2 hole.

The positioning should enable Unbridled jockey Craig Perret to follow the strategy of trainer Carl Nafzger, who wants Unbridled to race closer to the lead than he did in the Kentucky Derby and during his second-place finish behind now-vacationing Summer Squall in the Preakness.

At 1 1/2 miles, the Belmont is the longest of the Triple Crown races, as well as the most dangerous to horses who race from well off the pace. Aware of the grueling distance, jockeys on speedsters tend to race their horses to a slow, energy-saving pace that frequently precludes successful rallies by closers.

With Summer Squall sitting out the Belmont, Unbridled needs only to cross the finish line to collect the $1 million bonus awarded to the horses with the best overall performance in the Derby, Preakness and Belmont.

Summer Squall, who has suffered several pulmonary bleeding episodes, is skipping the Belmont because New York prohibits Lasix, the diuretic used to combat such bleeding. Unbridled also usually races on Lasix, but he has had just one bleeding episode and Nafzger believes the colt can safely race once without the drug.

The ongoing debate over the need and benefit of Lasix, coupled with rules that allow Unbridled to back into the $1 million, have overshadowed the colt's attempt to become the 11th 3-year-old to win the first and third jewels of the crown.

Nafzger, however, insists he is more interested in seeing his colt maintain a strong campaign for the 3-year-old championship by winning Saturday than in collecting the bonus. He also is confident the lack of Lasix will not compromise the colt's chances or his health.

Only one other veteran of the first two Triple Crown races entered the Belmont - Land Rush, who was seventh in the Derby and sixth in the Preakness.

The entire field for the race, with jockeys and odds, from the rail:

1, Thirty Six Red, Mike Smith, 8-1;
2, Go And Go, Michael Kinane, 12-1;
3, Baron de Vaux, Jean Cruguet, 30-1;
4, Country Day, Chris Antley, 6-1;
5, Unbridled, Perret, 4-5;
6, Video Ranger, Jose Santos, 8-1;
7, Hawaiian Pass, Art Madrid, 30-1;
8, Yonder, Jerry Bailey, 9-2;
9, Land Rush, Angel Cordero, 12-1.

If all nine start, the race would be worth a total of $686,000 and the winner's share $411,600. Second place is worth $150,920; third, $82,320 and fourth, $41,160.

The horses will carry equal weight of 126 pounds.

Post time is set for 5:30 p.m. EDT, with national television coverage by ABC beginning at 4:30.

(JUNE 7) UPI - Authorities in Limon, Colorado, are using dogs to search for people possibly trapped in the rubble left by last night's tornado. Officials say at least 14 people were injured, three of them seriously... as the twister battered its way through a 12-block section of town. The tornado was one of at least seven that raked eastern Colorado last night.

South African President de Klerk today met a long-standing demand by the African National Congress as a prelude to power-sharing talks with the white minority government. De Klerk announced the lifting of a nearly four-year-old nationwide state of emergency. However, de Klerk says he's keeping special powers to deal with strife among blacks in strife-torn Natal province.

NATO foreign ministers meeting today in Scotland are trying to formulate a proposal to bring West Germany into the Western alliance without humiliating the Soviet Union. The Soviets want a neutral Germany... but have also proposed joint German membership in NATO and the Warsaw Pact or within NATO but outside the alliance's integrated military command.

(JUNE 7) UPI - Coast Guard officials in Bayonne, New Jersey, say a 130-thousand gallons of heavy fuel oil spilled into a waterway separating New Jersey and Staten Island this morning after a ship ran aground. Officials say clean-up crews have been dispatched to assess the damage and begin containing the spill. The Coast Guard considers anything larger than 100-thousand gallons a ''major spill.''

In Moscow, the Soviet Interior Ministry says ethnic battles in Kirghizia have spread to Uzbekistan as armed mobs have assembled on the common border of the two Central Asian republics. Officials say four days of violence have brought the death toll to nearly 50. The news agency Tass says Soviet officials have declared a state of emergency in the capital of Kirghizia.

The Pentagon says it does NOT expect Congress to object to a newly announced four-BILLION-dollar arms sale to Saudi Arabia. The Defense Department says the package includes more than 11-hundred Light Armored Vehicles... two-thousand anti-tank missiles... and upgrades for AWACS early-warning radar planes. An arms sale to Saudi Arabia worth more than three-BILLION dollars is pending.

Maritime officials in Japan say a Libyan patrol boat has seized a Japanese tuna fishing boat with a crew of 20 in the Mediterranean Sea. BAYONNE, NJ (JUNE 7) UPI - An oil tanker ran aground Thursday in the narrow Kill Van Kull waterway between New Jersey and Staten Island, spilling about 260,000 gallons of heavy fuel oil in the third major oil spill in the busy channel this year.

The Coast Guard ordered the channel, which connects Upper New York Bay with Newark Bay, closed indefinitely to maritime traffic.

The spilled oil ''looks like a big black ball in the water,'' a helicopter pilot said.

By late morning, two large pools of oil were floating in the kill, said Jim McGranachan, a Coast Guard spokesman.

''We're trying to corral those pools,'' McGranachan said. ''We believe they may be the majority of the spill.''

The 811-foot, British-registered Nautilus was headed to the I.N.T.T. Terminal in Bayonne at 5:20 a.m. when the accident occurred, spilling about 260,000 gallons of No. 6 fuel oil, said Coast Guard Lt. Commander Paul Milligan.

The Coast Guard said the ship, owned by the Nautilus Motor Tanker Co. of London, could carry 1.2 million gallons of oil, but it was not known how much was aboard at the time of the spill.

It was unclear what caused the ship to run aground. The leak in the tanker was contained by late morning, McGranachan said.

Coast Guard workers were putting floating containment booms around the spill, he said. The booms have curtains that hang down into the water and wrap around the oil, trapping it.

''This type of oil is the easiest to contain because it is thick,'' McGranachan said. ''Usually the lighter oils will just evaporate in the air. Once this oil is contained, we use trucks on shore to vacuum it off.''

The Coast Guard was also distributing chemicals designed to absorb the gooey oil.

The tanker was taken to the Belcher Oil Terminal in Bayonne, where it was at anchor.

McGranachan said the Coast Guard National Strike Team, which deals with major oil spills around the world, was on its way to New York from its headquarters in Mobile, Ala.

On Jan. 2, 576,000 gallons of oil spilled from an Exxon pipeline, and on March 6, 120,000 of oil spilled from the Cibro Savannah.

The Coast Guard considers anything larger than 100,000 gallons a ''major spill.''

WEST BERLIN (JUNE 7) UPI - Checkpoint Charlie, Berlin's most famous crossing point and the scene of daring East-West escapes and spy exchanges during the Cold War, is destined to be nothing more than a Cold War memory.

The Allied guardhouses on the West Berlin side of the checkpoint are to be removed soon and already military policemen have stopped conducting precautionary check-in procedures for British, French and American soldiers wishing to head to the eastern half of the city.

''The MPs have been showing up for duty as usual in the past few weeks but there has been very little for them to do,'' said Tony Sariti, a spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in East Berlin.

''The Checkpoint Charlie role is now over as far as we are concerned.''

The checkpoint was established soon after the communist regime built the wall in 1961 to separate the eastern part of the city from the western.

During the Cold War years the Stars and Stripes, fluttering on a flag pole atop a U.S. military hut near the site of the wall, was a welcome sight for returning tourists, some of whom had been shocked by the tough communist controls on the east side of the wall.

Major General Raymond Haddock, the U.S. commandant in West Berlin, confirmed that the small Western military presence at the famous crossing point was being withdrawn prior to German monetary and economic union on July 2.

He said the Allied guardhouses would be offered to a nearby museum depicting the wall's history.

East Germany announced last week that it planned to end all controls along the entire 100-mile-long border in and around Berlin after July 1. It has appealed to western construction companies and authorities to help dismantle the massive fortifications.

It has also been disclosed that all Berlin roads severed by wall will be rejoined after the structure is removed.

Checkpoint Charlie has been the stuff of newspaper headlines and the centerpiece of spy thrillers for decades.

During the late l970s, East German authorities decided to greatly expand the crossing point. A corregated metal roof was built spanning the roadway like an overblown highway toll booth, each of its eight lanes marked in blue.

Red and green traffic lights would blink as red and white barrier posts rose up and down, allowing traffic to flow at a steady pace.

Border guards wheeled mirrors under cars, pushed out back seats and inserted wire probes into gas tanks to ensure that motorists travelling west did not have a stowaway on board.

It was at Checkpoint Charlie that some of the wall's more ingenious escapes were engineered.

In l983, two young East Germans walked a high wire to freedom across the Berlin Wall near the checkpoint.

In l986, the driver of a truck loaded with gravel smashed his way across the checkpoint to the west, knocking down red and white barrier posts like match-sticks as his pregnant fiancee sat bravely at his side.

There were even cases of East Germans boldly marching through the checkpoint dressed in American military uniforms that had been smuggled to them in the east by Western friends.

But while some East Germans made it, many did not.

They got caught and served lengthy jail terms for violation of what the East Germans called their state border.

PARIS (JUNE 7) UPI - The prosecutor in charge of an investigation into the desecration of the Carpentras cemetary said Thursday that a corpse of a Jewish man may not have been impaled as authorities orginally believed.

The statement was the first dent in the official version of events at the cemetery in southern France in which vandals had allegedly impaled the remains of a recently buried elderly Jewish man on a parasol handle as well as descreating more than 30 other graves.

''There was an exhumation,'' said Monique Guemann, state prosecutor in the southern city of Nimes, adding however that there had been a ''staging of a racist type,'' meaning the body may have been tampered with to look as if it had been impaled.

''A stake has been discovered near to the exhumed corpse of Monsieur (Felix) Germon,'' Guemann said. ''This could have allowed one to think that the corpse had been impaled.''

Guemann, heading the investigation into the Carpentras cemetary incident discovered May 10, said the sharpened piece of wood found near the corpse had been taken from a nearby garbage heap and not brought to the scene.

Authorities previously had indicated a parasol handle was used to impale the corpse and that it had been brought to the cemetery, the oldest graveyard for Jews in France, by an anti-Jewish commando unit.

Guemman stopped short of saying the supposed impaling of the body at Carpentras had not taken place, but said: ''The intention was to do so. That is what is important.''

''Monsieur Germon had a yellow star (of David) attached to his breast and a memorial plaque placed on his thighs.''

A previous examination of the corpse by pathologists at Nimes had not addressed the question of whether the body was impaled or not, limiting itself to determining the 80-year-old man was buried 10 days before the incident.

Interior Minister Pierre Joxe blamed right-wing extremist Jean-Marie Le Pen for inciting the racial hatred that inspired the desecration at Carpentras, 20 miles northeast of Avignon.

But National Front leader Le Pen has always denied any involvement, pointing the finger in turn at Communists or Islamic extremists.

Guemann indicated that investigators for the moment had set aside the theory that neo-Nazi skinheads or other far-right elements had carried out the incident.

The investigation ''is going forward little by little,'' Guemann said.

In an interview with his party weekly National Hebdo, Le Pen said Thursday that the desecration probably was carried out by the Soviet secret service KGB, from the Middle East, or by neo-Gaullist militants.

BANGKOK (JUNE 7) UPI - Thai security officials rounded up about 1,000 Burmese refugees Thursday and for the first time sent them back across the border into the control of Burmese military authorities, Thai border police said.

''We have today sent back about 1,000 Burmese civilians who fled to Thailand during the recent fighting between Burmese troops and the Karens (ethnic minority insurgent),'' said Lt. Col. Watchara Siriratana, police chief of Mae Sot District opposite Burma's border town of Myawadi.

''Half of them are young people. We don't know who are minority insurgents but anyone who has Burmese nationality will be sent back,'' he said in a telephone interview.

Student dissidents said they feared that they would face imprisonment and torture if they were turned over to the Burmese military.

Previously, Thai officials have been careful to repatriate illegal Burmese immigrants, particularly opponents of the military regime, to areas of the border that are not under government control.

The U.S. State Department and various human rights organizations have accused the military government of widespread mistreatment of political prisoners.

GENEVA (JUNE 7) UPI - Colombia urged its world trading partners Thursday to lift restrictions on its non-drug exports so it can fight drug trafficking and liberalize its trade.

The United States and European Community both promised to consult with Bogota on giving Colombian products better access to their markets.

Vice-Minister for Economic Development Luis Carlos Valenzuela addressed a discussion on Colombia's trade policies at the permament council of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade in Geneva, saying it was difficult for a developing country to liberalize trade ''while obstacles to its exports persist.''

Valenzuela said Colombia has ''faithfully serviced its heavy external debt'' and ''wants to sustain the course of trade liberalization.''

A GATT secretariat report earlier praised Colombia for its liberal trade efforts and export diversification and called on the United States and Europe to help its economic development and in fighting drugs.

Valenzuela gave as an example of trade obstacles the U.S. decision Wednesday against applying benefits under a special subsidies code clause to Colombian cut flowers and other exports.

U.S. delegate Andy Stoller said in reply that Washington ''is open for further consultations.'' The Eurpean Community also said it is ''ready to work with Colombia on finding solutions.''

In Bogota, government sources said the Colombian Justice Department and Foreign Ministry are studying arrest warrants for five British citizens accused of training narcotics terrorists in bombings and small arms tactics.

The sources said the five are believed to have received millions of dollars in payments from drug lords and, with Israeli mercenaries, trained the bodyguards now protecting the narcotics chieftains.

The mercenaries trained the drug gunmen and bomb experts in jungle hideouts between January 1988 and February 1989 and are believed to be indirectly responsible for 100 deaths in bombing attacks, the sources said.

Two Colombia foundations said in a report to newspapers published Thursday that 11,323 persons died in 1989 and 1990 in Colombia violence related to the drug war, while another 3,303 died in political violence.

Another 8,755 persons died in non-drug related common crimes, according to the report, prepared by the Foundation for the Development of Education and the Instituto Ser.

JAKARTA, INDONESIA (JUNE 7) UPI - More than two decades after Chinese schools were banned in the wake of a failed communist coup, a school will be built in Indonesia for the children of Taiwanese businessmen in the country.

Hasan Walinono, director-general of basic and middle level education, was quoted by the weekly Tempo news magazine Thursday as saying all parties involved have agreed to open a Chinese school for Taiwanese children in Indonesia.

But the children of Indonesia's Chinese minority will still be banned from studying in Chinese language schools - a ban imposed after the violent supression of a coup attempt in 1965 that was blamed on the Chinese.

The Indonesian government agreed to schooling for Tawainese some time ago and requested Taipei to set up a foundation and arrange all administrative needs, Walinono added.

''That was a political decision. All parties involved have agreed, (and) implementation is now up to the Taiwanese party,'' Walinono said.

The students will use Chinese character textbooks and brochures imported from Taiwan.

''The sooner the school is built, the better,'' said an official of the Taipei Economic Trade Center Office in Jakarta.

He said the school is to be built in Jakarta and will accept only children who hold Taiwan passports and who live in the capital city area.

Indonesia closed all Chinese schools in the mid 1960s and banned import of products using Chinese characters and language.

The move followed a decision to freeze diplomatic relations Beijing after Indonesia accused China of backing the failed 1965 coup that led to the downfall of President Sukarno. China has steadfastly denied the allegation.

Indonesia is paving the way for normalizing its relations with China, but has said its relations with Taiwan will not be affected by the move and that Jakarta will continue its open policy for Taiwanese investment.

According to the Investment Coordinating Board, Taiwan invested up to $1.26 billion in Indonesia last year.

But according to Indonesian Junior Minister for Industry, Tungki Artiwibowo, who visited Taipei last month, Taiwanese total investment is far above the official records because many Taiwanese businessmen unofficially invest money through their colleagues in the country.

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (JUNE 7) UPI - Leaders of three Christian Democratic parties met Thursday on the eve of Czechoslovakia's first free elections in 44 years to assess political damage caused by allegations one of its leaders collaborated with the former communist-controlled secret police.

The leaders from the Christian Democratic Party, the People's Party and the Christian Democratic Union of Slovakia proclaimed their ''absolute unity of opinion as far as efforts of certain forces are concerned to disrupt the unity of the coalition.''

But afterward, Vaclav Benda, head of the Christian Democratic Party, refused to say whether he supported the People's Party leader, Josef Bartoncik.

Bartoncik has been asked by Deputy Interior Minister Jan Ruml, a former dissident, to resign his position and withdraw as a parliamentary candidate.

The People's Party, in turn, accused Ruml of unfair campaign practices and said his party will sue the deputy minister.

People's Party spokesman Jiri Cerny also demanded that Ruml turn over the confidential records on which he bases his allegations.

Although Ruml did not specifically say so, Bartoncik is accused of working as a paid agent of the dreaded STB secret police before the November revolution that toppled the communists from power.

The Agrarian Party newspaper Zemedelske Noviny reported Wednesday, quoting well-informed sources, that ''Dr. Bartoncik was a secret collaborator with the STB, code-named Hajek, Code Number 15301.''

The newspaper quoted associates as describing Bartoncik as ''highly ambitious, characterless, and a person of no principles. His collaboration was on his own initiative to speed his career.''

His party announced Bartoncik was hospitalized Wednesday for a heart condition, and he has been unavailable for comment.

Although critics have labeled the coincidence a ''political heart attack'' his doctors issued a statement Thursday saying his condition had stabilized.

Meanwhile, a leading candidate to be Czechoslovakia's next prime minister, Jan Carnogursky, acknowledged the political row could damage the Christian Democratic movement as well as his own chances.

Carnogursky, who is president of the Christian Democratic Movement of Slovakia, said after the meeting that publication of the allegations Wednesday was ''a clear attempt to influence the results of the elections.''

''If the Christian parties don't have a strong enough position (as a result of the elections), I would not be willing to serve as prime minister,'' he said.

Carnogursky, a Slovak, is considered a possible rival to Prime Minister Marian Calfa, a former communist, as the choice by President Vaclav Havel to lead the new government after the elections Friday and Saturday.

In yet another development, the Central Electoral Commission said 57 of the original 3,616 candidates for the federal Parliament have withdrawn their candidacy - some of them following a vetting in which it was revealed they were collaborators with the STB.

TALLAHASSEE, FL (JUNE 7) UPI - A Kentucky company that made an unwanted sales pitch to federal regulators' offices became the first out-of-state firm sued under a Florida law restricting automated phone solicitations.

Florida Attorney General Bob Butterworth filed suit Thursday in Indian River County against American Marketing Inc. of Louisville, Ky. He said the company's automated callers made two unsolicited calls to the Federal Communications Commission office in Vero Beach.

''While the FCC's lines were tied up, potentially important official business could not be conducted,'' said Attorney General Bob Butterworth. ''It is just the sort of unwelcome intrusion and inconvenience that the law is designed to prevent.''

The lawsuit asks that American Marketing and owner Larry Gosnell be prohibited from using an automatic dialer and recorded message to solicit business in Florida.

The suit also seeks an unspecified amount in attorney's fees and costs.

The state law prohibits the use of an automatic dialer and recorded message unless the person receiving the call has first made an inquiry about a company's products or services.

Two Florida companies were sued last fall for violating the same law. At least 11 other firms stopped automated solicitations after receiving notices from Butterworth's office.

American Marketing is accused of placing two automated calls to the FCC's Vero Beach offices on Feb. 21, tying up office phones for the three-minute messages promoting the sale of credit information and services.

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 7) UPI - The following is a chronology of racial reforms undertaken by President Frederik de Klerk since he took office last September.

Oct. 15, 1989 - De Klerk releases African National Congress veteran Walter Sisulu and seven other long-term political prisoners, for the first time ignoring the ruling of his predecessor, Pieter W. Botha, that those jailed for politically motivated crimes would be freed only if they renounced violence.

Oct. 22 - Allows 80,000-strong rally in Soweto township to welcome Sisulu - organized by supporters of the still-outlawed ANC as the group's first local mass meeting in nearly 30 years.

Nov. 28 - Announces imminent scrapping of National Management System, under Botha the military and police bureaucracy that influenced every level of government.

Dec. 7 - Halves compulsory military conscription for whites to one year, citing a diminishing role for the defense forces.

Feb. 2, 1990 - In his milestone opening reform speech to parliament:

- Legalizes the guerrilla-backed ANC and Pan-Africanist Congress, banned in 1960, and the South African Communist Party, banned in 1950, and lifts restrictions on 33 internal groups.

- Announces Nelson Mandela, jailed in 1964 on sabotage charges for plotting to overthrow the government, will be released.

- Lifts emergency regulations muzzling print media's reporting of anti-government unrest.

- Places a moratorium on the death penalty.

Feb. 11 - Frees the 71-year-old Mandela.

May 2-4 - Holds first official talks with the ANC over obstacles to power-sharing negotiations.

May 18 - Parliament passes Indemnity Act, allowing him to amnesty anyone suspected of any crime, appearing before court or already jailed, in a move aimed particularly at ANC guerrilla chiefs, operatives and supporters.

May 21 - Accepts report from joint ANC-government team on the return of some 20,000 political exiles and the release of more than 3,000 prisoners held for politically motivated crimes - two of the major ANC demands before beginning negotiations over a post- apartheid constitution.

June 1 - Introduces draft legislation to scrap the 37-year-old Reservation of Seperate Amenities Act, racially segregating public places.

June 7 - Lifts nationwide state of emergency, renewed by his predecessor annually since imposed June 12, 1986, in all areas except strife-torn Natal province. An end to the emergency was an important demand before agreeing to substantive talks with the government.

VATICAN CITY (JUNE 7) UPI - Ambassador Yuri Karlov, the Soviet Union's official representative to the Vatican, had his first audience with Pope John Paul II Thursday, the Vatican announced.

Karlov, 53, a career diplomat who earlier served 11 years in two stints with the Soviet Embassy in Rome, was appointed to his new job under an agreement between Moscow and the Vatican announced March 15.

Following Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's historic meeting with the pope last Dec. 1, the two sides agreed to establish permanent diplomatic contacts for the first time since shortly after the 1917 Soviet revolution.

The move was short of establishing full diplomatic relations, but the "special representatives" were accorded the "personal" rank of ambassador extraordinary and nuncio (papal ambassador).

The Vatican immediately appointed Archbishop Francesco Colasuonno, roving ambassador with special reponsibility for Eastern Europe, as its representative to the Soviet Union. Colasuonno went to Moscow in May and had a meeting with Gorbachev in the Kremlin May 14.

Chief Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro Valls told reporters Karlov's 40-minute meeting with the Polish pope in the library of the papal apartment was "extremely cordial" and as they parted John Paul told him, "You are always welcome in the Vatican."

Navarro described the audience as a "protocol ceremony" during which Karlov gave a "letter of presentation" to the pope. But the Vatican spokesman said Karlov did not deliver a letter from Gorbachev. When Colasuonno met Gorbachev he delivered a letter from the pope to the Soviet leader.

The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano reported the pope's meeting with the Soviet envoy briefly in an inside page, with no comment. It merely gave an account of Karlov's long diplomatic career, including his service with the Soviet Embassy in Italy during the years 1967-1972 and 1978-1984.

After leaving his Rome embassy post as minister-counsellor in 1984, Karlov served in the Soviet foreign ministry for two years as deputy chief of its office for European affairs.

While the exchange of "official representatives" was expected eventually to lead to full diplomatic relations, the Vatican indicated after Gorbachev's December meeting with John Paul that the pope was waiting to see if a pending law on religious freedom in the Soviet Union "guarantees to all believers the possibility to practice their faith."

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (JUNE 7) UPI - The 12 European Community nations agreed Thursday to tighten controls on exports of British beef, avoiding a crisis between member states over the dreaded ''mad cow'' disease.

''If ever there was a council which demonstrated the capacity of the Community and its institutions to act effectively together, I think it can truly be said this was one,'' Irish Agriculture Minister Michael O'Kennedy said after chairing an emergency 25-hour session of the council of ministers.

''Had the council not succeeded, we would have had a very serious crisis indeed,'' he said.

The ministers agreed Britain should certify that ''bone-in beef for export shall derive from bovines which are not from holdings in which bovine spongiform encephalopathy has been confirmed in the previous two years.''

In the case of boneless beef, they required certification of compliance with an opinion by the EC scientific veterinary committee Wednesday that ''obvious nervous and lymphatic tissues'' must be removed from products to be supplied to consumers.

The ministers reconfirmed a February decision by the EC executive Commission that exports of live cattle be limited to calves ''certified to be under six months of age and not to be the offspring of cows in which BSE is suspected or confirmed.''

Britain was required to make ''full use of computer records and proper identification (i.e. freeze brand or tattoo) of animals to guarantee compliance with this point.''

Although the Commission had said its February measure provided sufficient safeguards to consumers, as BSE is found only in cattle more than six months of age, France and Germany banned imports of British beef last week and Italy followed suit.

Ray Macsharry, EC Commissioner for agriculture, had threatened legal action against these countries but first asked O'Kennedy to convene a special council of agriculture ministers to solve the dispute.

Britain accused France and Germany of applying trade-restricting measures, contrary to common market rules.

France and Germany argued they were only trying to safeguard public health pointing to growing concern among the public about the epidemic.

BSE is called mad cow disease because it affects the brain and nervous system of cattle. Conference sources said some 13,000 cases were registered in Britain and an additional 200 were detected each week.

The disease has affected about 20 percent of the British herds but is believed not to be contageous, the sources said, as usually only two or three cows in a herd are affected.

The sources also said the epidemic might be over its peak soon because Britain has banned the use of sheep meal, believed responsible for the disease, in cattle fodder.

O'Kennedy said the French, German and Italian bans on imports of British beef would be lifted immediately.

He also referred to the veterinary committee opinion that the risk of BSE being transmitted to humans is very remote. If there were any risk, he said, it would only be caused by the consumption of offal.

The measures at present apply only to the United Kingdom but the veterinary committee said the situation should be reviewed regularly because cases might appear in other member states.

The ministers asked the Commission to launch a Community-wide research program on BSE.

LONDON (JUNE 7) UPI - Stock prices on the London International stock exchange rallied Thursday, sparked by a big premium in the futures market.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which fell 21.6 points Wednesday, climbed 19.9 points to 2,378.4. The narrower top 30 industrial average gained 23.0 points to 1,904.0.

Volume amounted to around 592 million shares compared with 429 million shares traded during the same period Wednesday.

The market opened lower reflecting Wednesday's drop on Wall Street, but investors shrugged off Wall Street losses and sent prices higher as big premiums in the future markets were announced.

Analysts said the market was dominated by the futures and noted there was not much trading outside the top 500 issues.

Additionally, market watchers said, prices were boosted as more institutional investors were attracted to the market as the value of gold fell to its lowest level in almost 4 years.

On the trading floor, among the most widely traded stocks, Boots, the pharmaceutical marker and retailer, eased 1 cent to $4.75 after announcing a 17 percent rise in its latest earnings.

Imperial Chemical Industries climbed 54 cents to $19.68 and Grand Metroplitan climbed 32 cents to $10.60 after receiving authoriziation for listing of its American Depositary Receipts.

Pilkington, the glass maker, eased 8 cents to $2.99 after reporting its latest earnings slipped 3.3 percent.

Bass fell 20 cents to $16.92 on what analysts descibed as a poor presentation on its long term strategy.

Elsewhere in Europe, stock prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange closed broadly lower in active trading.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which fell 1.5 percent or 27.67 points on Wednesday, lost another 11.59 points or 0.6 percent to 1,837.43.

Analysts said prices pulled back as buyers continued to keep a low profile in the market due to ongoing concern over the costs and impact of the planned July monetary and economic unification of the two Germanys.

CHARLOTTE, NC (JUNE 7) UPI - The unkindest cut of all in digging up dirt on public officials is the high school yearbook, replete with adolescent snapshots and character references, an investigative reporter told her colleagues Thursday.

''The worst thing you can do to anyone is getting their yearbook pictures '' Mary Hargrove of The Tulsa Tribune advised nearly 600 other journalists attending the annual Investigative Reporters & Editors meeting.

Hargrove told of the time she suspected a savings and loan ripoff was brewing in Oklahoma. She wanted to learn something about a key figure involved, so she got his yearbook, found out he played football and went after his coach, who recalled a youth who liked to cut deals in the lockerroom.

''People don't change,'' said Hargrove. ''You've got to look for color and this is where to start.''

The annual IR&E meeting is a how-to working session in which reporters exchange ideas and methods. Hargrove advised them to throw nothing away.

''Wedding announcements are great,'' she said. ''Don't throw that stuff away. Clip it and save it. All of their best friends are listed in the wedding announcement. When you want to find out something about them, that's who you call.''

After the high school yearbook, Hargrove said, the next best source of information on a subject is the divorce petition. Angry spouses cast a lot of aspersions when they file for divorce.

''Their loss is our gain,'' she noted.

In one nasty divorce action, a nursing home operator's wife said in her divorce petition her husband had $800,000 and a Corvette. Under a discovery motion, she - and Hargrove - learned his net worth was actually $1.6 million.

Hargrove had been looking into a statewide nursing home scandal, so when she ran into the husband at a convention, she asked how his finances were going. He said he was in dire straits, and Hargrove asked whether he had driven to the convention in his Corvette.

''Oh, well the Corvette belongs to the nursing home,'' he told her.

So Hargrove checked to see how many other vehicles belonged to the nursing home and found it actually owned three Corvettes.

''They were all charged off to Medicaid,'' she said. ''I never did figure out how he transported those old people in the Corvettes.''

Also addressing the meeting Thursday was Chris Clackum, a reporter for WBTV in Charlotte. He said investigative reporting is necessary for one reason - people lie.

''We've come to find out that half the people out there are trying to keep the other half from knowing what the truth is,'' he said.

''These people who try to prevent the truth from ever seeing the light of day work very hard at their craft,'' he said. ''We (reporters) have to work equally as hard because it's our money.''

The meeting concludes Sunday.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - The House voted Thursday to override President Bush's veto of an Amtrak authorization bill that drew his objection because of a provision requiring government review of railroad takeovers by non-rail companies.

If the Senate also musters a two-thirds vote to pass the bill again it would mark the first time Congress has overridden a Bush veto.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine said the Senate would take up the bill quickly and predicted a ''close vote.'' The House vote to override was 294-123.

Bush, whose 1991 budget proposed no funds for Amtrak, opposed the bill in part because of the funding level approved by Congress, but he vetoed it because of the provision giving the Interstate Commerce Commission authority to review proposed acquisitions of major freight railroads by companies not involved in the rail business.

The commission currently has authority to oversee mergers between railroads.

Bush lost the support of many Republicans despite his pledge to sign a new bill witout the Interstate Commerce Commission provision.

House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois read a letter from the president saying he vetoed the bill ''soley because of the ICC provision '' and that there ''is already adequate authority to protect the public interest in the railroad industry.''

Supporters of the veto noted that Congress voted several years ago to deregulate the rail industry, and argued that the commission should not be given authority over non-rail companies.

''This bill does in fact begin the re-regulation of the railroads,'' said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., said the commission review is needed to assure adequate rail service. He warned that a community ''could be stripped of rail service'' by a new owner ''and have no place to go to complain.''

Dingell also noted that ''many of these railroaders are enormous debtors to the federal government. If those railroads are taken over without the provisions in this legislation the debt to the taxpayers can be totally wiped out.''

Rep. Thomas Bliley, R-Va., supported the bill, calling it ''a loophole closer.''

Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., argued that the main issue is Bush's opposition to the federal subsidy of Amtrak. ''The president vetoed this bill on a technicality. The president has never supported Amtrak.''

Rep. Tom Luken, D-Ohio, said the commission provision was added because of concerns about corporate raiders taking over a major railroad, selling its property, and ''leaving an empty shell.''

The bill would authorize a $685 million federal subsidy for Amtrak in 1991 and $712 million in 1992.

The House passed the final version of the bill May 9 by a vote of 322-93. The Senate passed it by voice vote the next day.

Bush has vetoed 11 bills since becoming president and Congress has been unable to muster the necessary two-thirds majorities in both the House and Senate to override any of them.

During debate, Michel charged that ''some of us are less interested in the substance of the (Amtrak) bill than in the political symbolism of an override.''

RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL (JUNE 7) UPI - Economy Minister Zelia Cardoso de Melo said Thursday a Supreme Court ruling outlawing a government wage-control effort may mean more painful austerity will be required to defeat Brazilian inflation.

If wages are out of control, Cardoso said, the government will have to seek to combat inflation by other means and ''the monetary and fiscal policies will cut deeper, and this will produce an economic recession.''

Cardoso delivered the warning to reporters while commenting on a Supreme Court decision Wednesday night striking down a government decree that limited the jurisdiction of regional labor courts to grant pay raises.

The court decision means that the government will unable to stop automatic indexing of wages according to inflation, a procedure Cardoso and other members of the cabinet warn will lead to high inflation.

Cardoso said the government would try to negotiate with labor leaders and congressmen and convince them that wages need to be controlled if inflation is to be licked.

President Fernando Collor de Mello announced an anti-inflation plan featuring restraints on prices and wages among other measures shortly after he took office on March 15.

In March alone Brazil's inflation was 84 percent. The figure dropped to 3.29 percent in April.

(JUNE 7) UPI - A Chinese official today dismissed protests by foreign journalists against police mistreatment as ''UNfounded.'' The Foreign Ministry spokeswoman also implied that reporters were beaten for violating rules governing foreign news coverage in China. U-S and international groups formally protested the beatings of several journalists. The reporters were covering protests and other commemorations of the bloody Tiananmen Square massacre.

South African President Frederik de Klerk lifted a nearly four-year-old nation-wide state of emergency today, saying ''the time has come.'' Before a joint session of Parliament, de Klerk said the decision eliminates a ''major stumbling'' block to full power-sharing talks with South Africa's black majority. De Klerk says 48 political prisoners will be freed ''as a gesture'' in advance of an accord with the African National Congress on freeing all political prisoners and the return of exiles.

Authorities are using dogs this morning to search for people possibly trapped in the rubble left by a tornado that nearly wiped out downtown Limon, Colorado. (JUNE 7) UPI - Leaders of the Warsaw Pact are in Moscow to map the future of the alliance following a democracy movement that swept Eastern Europe. Soviet leader Gorbachev is scheduled to brief the leaders on his summit with President Bush. Except for the Soviet hosts, most heads of government heads of state and defense and foreign ministers are new to the Warsaw Treaty Organization's ''political consultative committee.'' The new leaders NO longer take orders from Moscow.

A study reveals that homosexuals and lesbians were victims in about seven-thousand incidents of violence and defamation last year. The National Gay and Lesbian Task Force study in 40 states and the District of Columbia showed incidents ranged from verbal abuse to homicide. The report said that attacks against lesbians and gay men in 1989 occurred- quoting here- ''in a context of pervasive violence against Jews, people of color and women.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - The National Forest Service issued its latest five-year plan Thursday, calling for greater emphasis on protecting the environment and enhancing recreational facilities.

In keeping with its new course, the Forest Service intends to reduce timber production and livestock grazing on its lands through 1995, Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said in releasing the plan.

On its face, the plan appeared to be somewhat of a departure for the Forest Service, which has been criticized by conservationists as having promoted logging at the expense of the environment.

But Yeutter described the plan as an attempt to ''strike a better balance'' among the competing demands of logging, mining, grazing, wildlife and recreation in the national forests.

The Forest Service, an agency of the Agriculture Department, manages about 185 million acres of forest and rangeland, most of it in the West. About 57 million acres are devoted primarily to timber production, the largest share of which lies in Oregon and Washington state.

Under the plan, the total amount of timber offered for sale nationwide each year will decline from about 12.2 billion board feet to around 10.8 billion board feet by the middle of the decade.

However, Forest Service Chief Dale Robertson acknowledged the plan does not account for drastic reductions expected in the Pacific Northwest with the likely listing of the northern spotted owl as a threatened or endangered species.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is expected to announce a decision on the spotted owl later this month.

Nor does the report reflect logging restrictions recently recommended by a panel of government scientists as a way of protecting the owl, even though the Forest Service has adopted some of those measures, Robertson said.

''We are protecting our options,'' Robertson said. ''We feel it would be inappropriate for the Forest Service to make any decisions (about the owl) until the Fish and Wildlife Service makes its decision.

He said the Forest Service would adjust its five-year plan by the end of the month on the basis of the owl decision, adding, ''there's no question we're going to have to provide more protection to the spotted owl, even if it's not listed.''

RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL (JUNE 7) UPI - Brazilian air force investigators arrived at the Amazon Jungle river port of Altamira Thursday to investigate a plane crash that killed 23 people.

The technicians cordoned off an area arount the crash site, 1 mile from the Altamira airport where a two-engine Fokker FH227 turboprop airliner of Taba airlines crashed Wednesday with 39 passengers and three crew members on board.

The National Pilots Union, which has criticized the Taba fleet of six Fokker turboprops as obsoltete, also sent an investigator.

Altamira, a port on the Xingu River located 300 miles southwest of Belem, was an intermediate stop of the airliner on a flight from Belem to Cuiba in west-central Brazil.

A spokesman for the Aeronautics Ministry said that the Fokker FH227 was manufactured under license in the United States by Fairchild. In the Netherlands, where Fokker is based, the same plane carries the identifying letter and numbers F27.

TIRRENIA, ITALY (JUNE 7) UPI - Peter Vermes, the first American to play two seasons in Europe's top leagues, insists the United States is capable of what many think unlikely - advancing beyond the first round of the World Cup.

''A lot of people think we have no chance at all,'' Vermes said. ''That's simply not the case. I'll be the first to admit we're a very inexperienced team as far as international games go. Our players have not had the international exposure needed to really succeed at this level consistently.

''But on the other hand, I've seen the game from both sides. We've got some very talented players. The difference is our age and our experience, but you know the old cliche - anything can happen. This team has quite a bit more confidence than we get credit for.''

The U.S. team qualified for the World Cup for the first time since 1950, but is expected to make a quick exit. It is grouped with Czechoslovakia in Sunday's opening match, then play Italy and Austria.

The Americans simply do not have the international experience and number of quality players found throughout the world, where soccer is the No. 1 sport.

But the trend slowly is changing for U.S. players, as shown by Vermes and Chris Sullivan.

Vermes, a forward, played last year for F.C. Volendam in Holland's first division, after spending a year with Raba Eto of Hungary's top league. He was the first U.S. native to play at either country's top level.

Sullivan, a midfielder, played last season with Raba Eto.

''That's a big advantage for the players who are at this level,'' U.S. Coach Bob Gansler said. ''They've reached the stage where they are the best in the U.S. To get better, they have to play with the best in the world. Ideally, we get enough players doing what he's doing, and our program will improve.''

Vermes said the U.S. situation is ''a progression thing.''

''We've got two players now in the first divisions in Europe,'' he said. ''If we have any success in the World Cup, other guys might have the same opportunity. We're here to do the best we can for the United States, but there is some personal incentive, too.''

Vermes, of Delran, N.J., was a key performer for the U.S. in the 1988 Olympics and World Cup qualifying matches. He was named Player of the Year by the U.S. Soccer Federation in 1988.

''My game has definitely improved by playing in Europe,'' he said. ''That's what I'm talking about. We just don't have the amount of top soccer players in the U.S. to help us get better. The more of us that play over here, the better we'll get. I know every guy on this team would like to play over here.''

Vermes said the U.S. team can create an upset.

''We have been playing good in spurts,'' he said. ''Those spurts have been lasting longer lately - that's why I think we're on the verge of playing a good match. We need to play a strong 90 minutes, something we've haven't been doing consistently.

''We also need to be more aggressive. Sometimes we're a little too tentative, but that is something that comes with experience and more confidence.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Chai Ling, leader of the Chinese democracy movement, told Vice President Dan Quayle Thursday that transmissions of Voice of America broadcasts into China should be strengthened.

Chai, 24, a teacher who fled China and was given asylum in France, met with Quayle after her request for a meeting with President Bush was turned down.

She told Quayle that the ''VOA is very popular in China and so are fax machines.''

During last June's democracy demonstrations in Beijing's Tiananmen Square, the Chinese government pulled the plugs on foreign media broadcasting and televising the events. The demonstrators depended on the VOA for their information. They also learned about events by reading newspapers that had been faxed to them from around the world.

David Beckwith, Quayle's press secretary, said that Quayle assured Chai that the administration ''was concerned over the lack of progress toward human rights in China, and that as far as pursuing human rights, the Bush administration and Chai Ling shared the same goals.''

He said Quayle ''reiterated the U.S. policy of a balanced approach of continuing to work with the current government to affect change.''

Chai said there are ''ongoing human rights abuses'' in China and said the Chinese people support the students' pro-democracy movement.

Earlier in the week, Chai met with national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, State Department officials and congressional leaders.

''During our meeting, General Scowcroft sought to explain U.S. policy towards China,'' Chai said in a statement.

She said she told Scowcroft that his secret mission to China was used for China's ''propaganda'' and ''many Chinese are disappointed by U.S. actions.''

Scowcroft made two secret trips to China to meet with top Chinese officials, once with Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger in December 1989 and once in July 1989, shortly after the Chinese government brutally crushed the student demonstrations.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Government officials, farm groups, medical researchers and patients denounced animal rights activists Thursday three days before a planned protest in the nation's capital by opponents of animal research.

''I am saddened and a bit angry myself that we have had to put up with major disruptions to science by the so-called animal rights activists - who are, in fact, nothing more than animal rights terrorists,'' said Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan.

''In the past they have tried to foster a siege mentality among our scientists and at our nation's laboratories. They have tried to put us on the defensive, through intimidation and even violence,'' he said. ''They will not succeed because they are on the wrong side of morality. It would be evil to forsake vital animal research when lives hang in the balance.''

Sullivan was joined at a news conference by actor David Birney, who is active in medical research, two mothers and their young children who benefited from treatments developed through animal research and leaders of several groups concerned about the issue.

Rep. Vin Weber, R.-Minn., received a petition opposing animal rights activities and condemned such actions. He was joined by representatives of farm groups, including the American Meat Institute, American Veal Association, American Farm Bureau, American Food Industry and National Broiler Council.

A spokeswoman for one group taking part in Sunday's protest march disputed the charges, saying cell cultures, tissue cultures and computer models are superior to animal research.

''Our position really is and always has been that cures could be found quicker and faster and cheaper without animal research,'' said Betsy Swart of the group Friends of Animals. ''The real terrorists are the people inside the research laboratories. Animal research is based on pain and suffering.''

The American Association of Medical Colleges released a survey of 124 medical schools concluding that in the past five years the schools spent at least $15 million and 100,000 hours of staff time to battle animal rights activities, including bombings and break-ins.

''Small bands of extremists and terrorists have determined that animal lives are more precious than human lives,'' said association chairman Dr. L. Thompson Bowles.

Leonard Koch, a diabetic from the group Incurably Ill for Animal Research, cited a number of medical advances made through animal research, including the development insulin for diabetes and the polio vaccine.

''I'm as angry as hell that the animal rights movement is trying to stop important medical research - research that one day may lead to the cure for a disease that I have and for diseases that millions of other people have,'' he said.

Appearing with Koch were Lenore Rumpf of Arlington, Va., and her 18-month-old son, Lee, who was born with damaged lungs, and Jana Koch of Tampa, Fla., and her 9-year-old daughter, Lyla, who received a pacemaker for her heart. Jana Koch is not related to Leonard Koch.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Jury selection continued Thursday in the drug and perjury trial of Mayor Marion Barry, while Jesse Jackson said he urged the mayor to drop his plans for re-election to encourage a plea agreement.

In 2 1/2 days of oral questioning, defense lawyers and prosecutors had questioned only 34 potential jurors from a panel of 250 people. Of those, 25 remained in the pool of potential jurors by mid-day Thursday.

Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson set a five-minute time limit for each side in the questioning, but it was not strictly enforced and the selection process was still taking much longer than hoped.

Meanwhile, Jesse Jackson said he had contacted Barry and told him a decision not to run for a fourth term could be used as a persuasive bargaining chip in plea negotiations.

''His candid declaration of his plans would be a major step toward further creating a climate for a settlement,'' Jackson told the Washington Post.

''Declaring he won't run is stronger leverage,'' Jackson said. ''If he agrees not to be a part of the equation, then the question really is: Why then prosecution and persecution?''

But an attorney Thursday filed a motion in U.S. District Court asking that Judge Jackson rule on whether it would be legal for a Barry agreement not to seek re-election to be linked to any plea bargain.

The American Civil Liberties Union announced plans to file a similar motion.

''If the plea bargain encompasses, directly or indirectly, the mayor either resigning from office or agreeing not to run again or both, in my judgment it raises serious constitutional problems that the court is going to have to address,'' said George Washington University professor John Banzhaf, who filed the motion.

''These charges don't have to do with Barry's office, and therefore his office shouldn't be a relevant consideration in any plea bargaining,'' said ACLU attorney Arthur Spitzer.

Some prominent local Democrats, including Jesse Jackson and Walter Fauntroy, the city's non-voting delegate to Congress and a mayoral candidate, reportedly have been trying to contact Republican lawmakers and the Bush administration, asking that they urge U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens to strike a plea agreement.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater denied any administration officials were seeking to influence Stephens.

One prospective juror questioned Thursday said he had experienced racism as a black in America but would not let that affect his judgement in the case. Some Barry supporters contend his arrest was racially motivated because Stephens is white and Barry is one of the nation's most prominent black politicians.

''He's still a public official. He takes the ground rules like anybody else,'' said the prospective juror.

He was also asked whether he believed politics played a role in the arrest. Barry is a Democrat and Stephens serves the Republican administration of President Bush.

''There are obviously a number of people that believe Mr. Barry should not remain as mayor,'' he said. ''Many of those people wish they were mayor themselves.''

Barry, who looked confident and relaxed as he took notes in court Thursday then turned to reporters and smiled.

Barry was arrested Jan. 18 at the downtown Vista International Hotel after he was videotaped allegedly smoking crack in a sting operation to which he was lured by a former girlfriend. The mayor has acknowledged taking the drug but said the FBI could have killed him by allowing him to smoke the potent form of cocaine.

One potential juror was excused Thursday after he said, ''I don't think I'd make a good juror. I think the man is guilty.''

Another, the son of an FBI agent, said he believed Barry used drugs at the Vista, but added: ''I'm capable of setting that aside.'' He also said he could fairly consider an entrapment defense ''because frankly that's a troubling aspect of this case.'' He was not excused.

One commented on the FBI's use of former model Rasheeda Moore, who was living in Los Angeles, to lure Barry to the hotel.

''Bringing someone across the country for a local problem (is) extreme,'' he said. ''I don't think it's an invasion of privacy; I just don't think it should have been done.''

All of those questioned may yet be challenged again by defense or prosecution lawyers in picking the final 12 jurors and six alternates.

The jury will be sequestered once it is empaneled. The trial, which began Monday, is expected to last at least a month.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Efforts by Senate Agriculture Committee leaders to quietly settle a spat over the direction of farm policy foundered Thursday, making likely a bitter public fight over the new farm policy law.

Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said the committee would meet Tuesday to ''mark up'' the crop support sections of the farm bill. The committee, which prides itself on bipartisan cooperation, has been deadlocked for three weeks by disagreement over crop supports.

Crop supports are the core of the farm bill, accounting for much of the cost of the farm program.

Committee leaders tentatively agreed on some points, including creation of a soybean marketing loan and additional crop flexibility for farmers. However, they refused to budget on target prices, loan rates and whether to set up marketing loans for wheat and feed grains.

The 10-member Democratic majority on the committee has proposed a package that includes higher crop subsidy rates, higher loan rates and slightly larger land setasides. Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., has termed all of those points unacceptable and a reversal of current policy.

Under the 1985 farm law, which expires this year, target prices and loan rates have been steadily reduced with the goal of making U.S. crops competitive on the world market.

''No movement. No change,'' Lugar said when asked about the fruitless meeting.

Leahy declined to comment in detail about the meeting or what he would propose when the committee meets for its drafting session. He said the administration should be more specific about what it wants.

''It will be the first time we've ever been to mark-up on a farm bill where we didn't have an administration proposal, which is a bit frustrating. Everybody's kind of guessing,'' Leahy said.

Leahy said he would offer ''a couple of interesting options'' on target prices and loan rates.

''Obviously, there is no deal. Without a deal, people are uninhibited. You could see all sorts of proposals,'' a Republican staff worker said in looking toward Tuesday's meeting.

The staff worker said ''there are still problems with everything,'' but a major sticking point was Democratic insistence on higher loan rates. He said that proposal would mean a 40-cent a bushel increase in corn loan rates and 50 cents for wheat, achieved by eliminating Agriculture Department discretion to adjust loan rates.

In a speech Thursday, Yeutter warned that high loan rates could lead to disaster if they approach the level of market prices and discourage farmers from selling grain.

''I can guarantee you there are members of Congress ... wanting to make the same old policy mistakes,'' Yeutter said.

Afterward, Yeutter told reporters he disagreed with Leahy's complaint. However, he declined to say if target price increases or higher crop loan rates were unacceptable. He said the administration would judge the entire package.

''However, I must say it is very difficult to make a case for raising target prices and loan rates in the (budget) environment we have today,'' he added.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Researchers reported Thursday they have pinpointed the first gene directly linked to life-threatening kidney disease, opening the door to early detection and possibly better treatment of such disorders.

''This is the first time we have had a firm handle on the cause of progressive kidney disease leading to end-stage renal failure,'' said Dr. Gary Striker of the National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases.

About 160,000 Americans currently suffer from end-stage kidney failure, which means they would die without dialysis treatment or a kidney transplant, and the annual cost of caring for those patients is about $4.4 billion, Striker said.

While non-hereditary factors like infection or injury can lead to kidney failure, hereditary influences are thought to play a role in up to half of all cases, researchers said. It is also known that people with diabetes or high blood pressure are far more likely to develop kidney failure than other people.

In a study published in the journal Science, researchers from University of Utah School of Medicine said they have isolated a gene responsible for Alport syndrome, an inherited kidney disease that affects at least one in every 5,000 Americans and accounts for about 2 percent of people with end-stage kidney failure.

Alport syndrome, which is more likely to strike males than females, is characterized by red blood cells in the urine, kidney failure and in some cases hearing loss. The age at which the kidneys fail varies greatly from family to family, and there currently is no treatment for the disease short of dialysis or kidney transplants.

Although the Utah findings have immediate implications for only a small percentage of people stricken by kidney disease, Striker said, ''The important thing is it's very likely many other patients with progressive renal disease will have similar types of abnormalities.''

''We never really have known for sure what causes end-stage renal disease in a specific patient, whether it is in fact a component of the (kidney) membrane or something the patient is eating, drinking or exposed to,'' Striker said. ''We can now start looking directly at what may be causing the problem.''

Striker said early diagnosis of progressive kidney disease ''would probably give us the opportunity to start doing some intervention things before the patient gets to end-stage kidney failure.'' Such interventions might include sharply limiting the amount of protein, salt and certain fats in the diet, he said.

Farther into the future, the findings might lead to ways to replace or repair defective genes, he said.

In their study, Dr. David Barker and his colleagues found defects in a gene on the so-called X chromosome in three of 18 Utah families with a family history of Alport syndrome. The gene codes for a type of protein in a membrane that helps the kidney filter waste out of the blood.

Genes are located on strands of genetic material called chromosomes and carry instructions for all basic biological functions. Identifying the defect in a gene responsible for a disease helps researcher understand the underlying cause of the illness.

Researchers expect ''most if not all'' of the remaining 15 families will show defects in the same gene under more sophisticated testing because the original method used to screen for the genetic defect was ''fairly crude '' Barker said.

The Utah work marks the first time anyone has precisely identified the location of a gene responsible for life-threatening kidney disease, Barker and Striker said. Other researchers have homed in on the general location of a gene for a severe disorder called polycystic kidney disease, but they have not found its exact site.

EAST BERLIN (JUNE 7) UPI - East German police arrested one of West Germany's most wanted suspected terrorists and were investigating the possibility she was protected for years by the country's former Communist government, East Germany's interior minister said Thursday.

Minister Peter-Michael Diestel told a news conference that Susanne Albrecht, 39, was arrested Wednesday night in East Berlin, where she had lived for eight years after becoming an East German citizen.

Diestel said he would investigate the possibility that the secret services of the former Communist government had protected Albrecht, an alleged member of the ultra left-wing Red Army Faction suspected in participating in the assassination of a prominent Frankfurt banker.

The West German media claimed recently that the former East German secret police, known as Stasi, had run training camps in East Germany for RAF members.

An international warrant for Albrecht's arrest had been issued in 1979, two years after she was allegedly involved in the July 1977 attack on Frankfurt banker Juergen Ponto.

Albrecht, whose sister was Ponto's godchild, is accused of having used her acquaintance with the banker to gain access to his house along with two others, who allegedly shot and killed him.

Diestel said that Albrecht arrived in East Germany in 1980, became a citizen and lived there for eight years with her East German husband and child.

He said that for the past two years she had worked abroad as a chemical laboratory assistant. He did not name the country, but a West German magazine, Quick, said Albrecht had recently lived in Syria.

Albrecht returned to East Germany last Sunday, apparently to change her East German marks into West German marks in advance of the July 1 economic union between the two Germanys.

The authorities in East Berlin said they will decide within a week on how to respond to a request that Albrecht be handed over to West German authorities.

Diestel said East German authorities were alerted to the case May 15, when the West German state prosecutor's office asked for Albrecht's extradition.

West German Interior Minister Wolfgang Schaueble said in a message to Diestel that the arrest was ''the excellent result of the efficient cooperation of police forces in both parts of Germany.''

Albrecht was one of the most wanted terrorist suspects in West Germany. The West German authorities are searching for another 30 alleged terrorists, most of them believed to be RAF members.

The RAF has claimed responsibility for a series of attacks on leading industrialists and bankers, including the assassination last December of Deutsche Bank Chairman Alfred Herrhausen near Frankfurt.

DOWNINGTOWN, PA (JUNE 7) UPI - Two graduating high school students are seeking a federal court order to stop a prayer from being said at commencement exercises Friday.

Downingtown Area High School seniors Drew Brody and Jennifer Hohnstine asked Thursday for a temporary restraining order on grounds the ceremony's religious benediction, to be said by a minister, makes non-Christians feel like ''second-class citizens.''

The suit, filed with the help of the American Civil Liberties Union, names Principal Edward Sprang, the superintendent of schools and the nine members of the school board as defendants.

U.S. Judge Louis Bechtle was expected to rule before Friday's graduation.

The school on June 3 held a baccalaureate ceremony at which a Roman Catholic priest and Protestant ministers said prayers and led the singing of hymns, according to the suit. The school said the ceremony was meant to honor the graduating students ''with prayer and song,'' the suit says.

Brody and Hohnstine met with Sprang and other school authorities in May to express their discomfort with the ''religious overtones'' of such ceremonies, the suit says.

Sprang refused to take any action, the suit alleges. The principal could not be reached for comment.

The suit further alleges that school officials prohibited students from forming a group called CRY, Concerned Rally Youth, to study constitutional rights.

Ninth graders in the school also are made to write essays in English class on ''Christ figures,'' the suit alleges.

The ACLU contends the school's actions endorse the Christian faith and thus violate the First Amendment. The suit does not challenge the recent Supreme Court ruling allowing students to form clubs, including religious ones, said Stefan Presser, legal director of the ACLU's Philadelphia office.

''It's a different case when school ... officials impose religion in school,'' Presser said. ''The Supreme Court has never permitted school officials to lead prayers in school.''

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 7) UPI - Under a cloak of secrecy, engineers Thursday presumably readied a shuttle-class Titan 4 rocket for a spectacular nighttime blastoff to ferry a secret spy satellite into orbit.

The towering 174-foot rocket, making the $7.1 billion program's second flight in a year, was believed to be scheduled for a sky-lighting liftoff around 1:15 a.m. Friday from launch complex 41 at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station.

The Air Force told reporters ahead of time about the maiden flight of a Titan 4 last June but this time military officials decided to reinstate a strict no-comment policy, refusing to disclose the launch date, time or details about the hush-hush payload.

But sources who requested anonymity said the $173 million rocket was scheduled for launch Friday and the Coast Guard said an offshore ''launch danger zone'' 5 miles to either side of a line extending 30 miles due east of Cape Canaveral would be in effect between midnight and 3:30 a.m.

Of ground-launched rockets, only the Titan program has classified takeoff dates and given that no other rockets were scheduled for flight, the Titan 4 was the only vehicle to which the launch danger zone could have applied. But it was not possible to immediately confirm the status of the rocket's secret countdown.

As for the payload, sources said the Titan 4 was carrying an electronic signals intelligence satellite, or ELINT, designed to intercept data from Soviet rocket tests and to eavesdrop on other forms of communication.

Aviation Week & Space Technology magazine reported Monday the payload was either an ELINT or a $180 million Defense Support Program early warning satellite like one launched last June in the maiden flight of a Titan 4.

Capable of placing 10,000-pound payloads into the high orbits favored by strategic reconnaissance satellites, the 1.9-million-pound Titan 4, built by Martin Marietta Space Launch Systems of Denver, is the most powerful unmanned booster in the U.S. inventory, second only to NASA's manned space shuttle in sheer power.

Martin Marietta has contracts valued at $7.1 billion to build 41 Titan 4s with options for eight more, the centerpiece of an unprecedented military space buildup to eliminate Pentagon reliance on the shuttle for launching heavy military payloads.

But the program has been bedeviled by technical snags and, according to the General Accounting Office, mismanagement that resulted in cost overruns of more than $207 million.

But Air Force officials say the program is back on track. By 1995, up to nine Titan 4s will be launched a year from the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station or from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., where payloads weighing up to 32,000 pounds can be boosted into low-Earth polar orbits.

Getting the Titan 4 program up and running marks a major milestone in the nation's recovery from the 1986 Challenger shuttle disaster and back-to-back failures of less-powerful Titan 34D rockets in 1985 and 1986.

Between 1983 and 1988, the Air Force budgeted $685 million for unmanned expendable launch vehicles. Between 1988 and 1994, the figure is projected to be at least $14.1 billion, half of which is earmarked for the Titan 4 program.

''The Titan 4 program is one of the cornerstones of our national security strategy to rebuild assured access to space,'' former Air Force Secretary Edward ''Pete'' Aldridge said before the first Titan 4 launch. ''This booster represents the new workhorse of space launchers for our nation.''

(JUNE 7) UPI - Apparel sales, which had sparked healthy retail revenue gains for the past year, fell off sharply in May as many of the nation's merchants Thursday reported poor showings they blamed on bad weather.

While much of the nation endured cool temperatures and pelting rains last month that put few shoppers in the mood to buy bikinis or bermuda shorts, analysts said the May slowdown in clothing sales could be the beginning of an unsettling trend.

For most big merchants, comparable-store sales - which exclude receipts of stores not open one year earlier and are generally considered the best measure of a retailer's performance - did not keep pace with inflation.

But such bad news for retailers translates to bargains for consumers, said Monroe Greenstein, senior analyst for Bear, Stearns & Co. in New York.

''It means summer clearances in the coming weeks will be greater than initially thought,'' he said.

Chicago-based Sears, Roebuck & Co., the nation's largest retailer, eked out a 0.9 percent comparable- or same-store gain, while gross revenues of $2.50 billion also were ahead just 0.9 percent from $2.48 billion.

Sears has been mired in a slump for more than a year as consumers have failed to line up for the hard goods that are the backbone of the giant merchant. With apparel sales also off for the month of May, analysts said Sears was hit by a double whammy.

No. 2 K mart Corp. of Troy, Mich., fared no better than its larger rival last month in comparable-store sales, which were up 0.9 percent. K mart's total sales for May were ahead 10 percent to $2.43 billion from $2.21 billion.

In what has become a habit, fast-growing Wal-Mart Stores Corp. of Bentonville, Ark., outpaced all its competitors by posting a robust 11 percent same-store sales gain for May.

Net retail sales of $2.53 billion bested both Sears and K mart and represented a 24.6 percent increase from $2.03 billion a year earlier.

Dallas-based J.C. Penney Co. stumbled in May for the second straight month. Sales for stores open at least one year rose just 1 percent, while total sales of $1.02 billion wer up 2 percent from $1 billion a year ago.

In a month of generally poor performances, Penney's was among the worst, said Alan Silverman, an analyst at Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. in New York.

''They've got some explaining to do,'' he said.

Among other retailers, Minneapolis-based Dayton Hudson Corp. said comparable-store sales were up 4.2 percent for May, while net retail sales ended 7.9 percent higher at $958 million over $888 million a year ago.

Chairman Kenneth A. Macke said the company was pleased with the performance ofits Target and Mervyn's chains, but blamed ''somewhat disappointing results'' at its department stores on unseasonable May weather.

St. Louis-based May Department Stores Co., which also operates Volume Shoe stores, said same-store sales climbed 4 percent, while total sales were up 10 percent to $752.2 million from $665.6 million.

Nowhere was the fall-off in apparel sales more evident than in the results of specialty clothing merchants.

The Gap Inc. of San Francisco said comparable store sales increased 6 percent compared to a gain of 15 percent a year ago. Total sales amounted to $124 million, up 11.7 percent from $111 million last May.

Limited Inc., a specialty women's apparel retailer based in Columbus, Ohio reported a comparable-store gain of 6 percent. The company's total sales rose 15.7 percent to $359.7 million from $310.7 million.

New York-based Woolworth Corp., the specialty store merchant, said domestic same-store sales were ahead 3 percent, while total sales rose 6 percent to $371 million from $350 million.

Woolworth said its May sales were ''lower than planned,'' pointing to foul weather as the culprit.

Many of the largest retailers choose not to report their montly sales revenues or do not do so because they are privately held. Among those not reporting: R.H. Macy & Co., Federated Department Stores Inc., Allied Stores Corp., Nordstrom Inc. and Montgomery Ward.

Other results: The Neiman Marcus Group Inc. of Chestnut Hill, Mass., said comparable revenues were up 9.5 percent, while total sales rose 12.7 percent to $119.1 million from $105.7 million.

Hills Department Stores of Canton, Mass., said same-store sales dropped 4.1 percent. Total revenues dropped to $137.1 million from $141.9 million, a 3.4 percent dip.

Melville Corp., based in Rye, N.Y., did not report comparable revenues but said total sales were up 12.2 percent to $582.6 million from $519.1 million.

Los Angeles-based Carter Hawley Hale Stores Inc. said same-store sales were up 2.2 percent. Overall, sales increased 2.8 percent to $200.8 million from $195.4 million.

DALLAS (JUNE 7) UPI - Greyhound Lines Inc., currently in Chapter 11 bankruptcy, Thursday withdrew an offer it made on May 21 to buyback about $190 million in face amount of debt for about $86 million in cash.

The bus company, involved in a bitter strike by some 9,300 workers for more than three months and facing huge debts, said it was withdrawing its offer in order to concentrate on its reorganization plan.

''We have withdrawn our tender offer so that we can focus on mapping out a sound debt restructuring plan for the court,'' said J. Michael Doyle, senior vice president and chief financial officer.

But even before the bankruptcy filing, analysts had doubted the company would have been able to raise the cash to complete the buyback of the debt most of it in junk bonds.

''Given the circumstances, it would have been extremely difficult to raise that amount of cash,'' said Charles Mancuso of Moody's Investor Service Inc. in New York.

''The withdrawal now doesn't surprise me because of the bankruptcy filing.

All bets are off in terms of any pre-bankruptcy offers.''

In the May 21 offer, the company announced it would purchase up to 85 percent of its 13 percent senior notes due 1995 for 54 percent of their principal amount of $150 million, and up to 85 percent of its 12.5 percent senior subordinated notes due 1997 for 27.5 percent of their principal amount of $75 million. The offer was to expire on June 18.

The bus line, taken private in a $350 million leveraged buyout in 1987 by an investor group led by Chairman Fred Currey, filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code on Monday in Brownsville, Texas.

After the bankrupty filing, Moody's further downgraded the $150 million notes to ''Ca'' from ''Caa,'' meaning such issues are often in default or have marked shortcomings. Standard & Poor's Corp. has already downgraded those notes to its lowest grade of ''D.''

The bankruptcy filing came after the company had missed some $16 million of interest, lease and principal payments and was precipitated by the possibility that some of Greyhound's lessors might seize its buses and terminals. The company listed assets of about $507 million and liabilities of $540 million.

According to court documents, Greyhound's largest unsecured creditor is CEDE & Co. of New York, a group of bondholders, which is owed $194.3 million. Other major unsecured creditors include Security Pacific Equipment Leasing Inc. of San Francisco with a claim of $53.8 million and Citicorp North America Inc. of Hartford, Conn., with a claim of $31.5 million. The documents showed a total of more than $340 million in unsecured claims.

In Brownsville Thursday, the company presented a number of requests asking U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Richard S. Schmidt to authorize it to meet immediate expenses and also to approve the appointment of the law firm of Weil Gotshal and Manges in Houston as Greyhound's legal counsel.

Greyhound spokeswoman Elizabeth Dunn said no changes have been made in the bus line's service since the bankruptcy filing.

''We are maintaining our ridership which is running at 74 percent of the number of passengrs we had last year. Obviously, our passengers are convinced it is business as usual, which it is,'' she said.

Dunn said the company also has not experienced any unusual level of requests for ticket refunds since last Monday.

GRAND RAPIDS, MI (JUNE 7) UPI - A Vietnamese girl who arrived in the city six years ago unable to speak English and with only two years of education has been barred from graduation despite a B-minus average because she failed the writing portion of a competency exam by a single point.

Schools Superintendent Pat Sandro said he appreciates Ngoc-Nu Lam's disappointment but maintained he cannot make an exception to policy regarding the competency test requirement.

''It's not a simple matter,'' Sandro said. ''I'm sure people would say, 'Just give her the test again,' but if you don't have standards, where do you draw the line?''

Lam, 21, who speaks Chinese and Vietnemase, said she is concerned the test snafu may jeopardize her acceptance at Ferris State University where she planned to study computer science in the fall.

She said she cancelled her reservation for a cap and gown and earlier this week skipped an honors ceremony where she was to receive the Presidential Academic Fitness Award.

Sandro said students begin taking the test in ninth grade and continue to the seven portions each year, and twice more if necessary in their senior year, until they pass.

He said seniors can take the exam again in August but Lam and her supporters said such a long wait for retesting could jeoparidze her financial aid at Ferris State even if she subsequently passes.

Lam has taken the test eight times since her freshman year and several times failed only the paragraphing section of the writing test - the last three times by just a single point.

Peggy Chance-Hicks, who works with Lam in a program serving bilingual students, pointed out that Lam's circumstances are special and thus she deserves to participate in commencement.

''She speaks three languages,'' Chance-Hicks said. ''Her credentials are certainly unique enough.''

She said one concern is that the paragraph section and the way it is graded may have an inherent cultural bias. Students are to read a paragraph and rewrite it in their own words but in a conversational style, a weakness for Lam.

She said Lam's family speaks Chinese or Vietnamese at home, contending that her 3.0 grade point average, her close score on the writing section and its subjectivity raise enough questions that Lam should either be immediately retested, have her last test regraded or at least be permitted to graduate.

This year six students failed the exam, Sandro said.

''We think the tests are an absolute necessity,'' he said. ''They improve a student's chances of success in school or work after they graduate.''

Chance-Hicks pointed out there is no appeal process for students who fail the exam, such as is available to students wishing to play sports despite a grade average blow the required 2.0.

''When the test becomes a barrier to a student - who through their own tenacity and self-perseverance will become a success - then it is a problem,'' she said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Efforts by Senate Agriculture Committee leaders to quietly settle a spat over the direction of farm policy foundered Thursday, making likely a bitter public fight over the new farm policy law.

Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said the committee would meet Tuesday to ''mark up'' the crop support sections of the farm bill. The committee, which prides itself on bipartisan cooperation, has been deadlocked for three weeks by disagreement over crop supports.

Crop supports are the core of the farm bill, accounting for much of the cost of the farm program.

Committee leaders tentatively agreed on some points, including creation of a soybean marketing loan and additional crop flexibility for farmers. However, they refused to budge on target prices, loan rates and whether to set up marketing loans for wheat and feed grains.

The 10-member Democratic majority on the committee has proposed a package that includes higher crop subsidy rates, higher loan rates and slightly larger land set-asides. Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., has called all of those points unacceptable and a reversal of current policy.

Under the 1985 farm law, which expires this year, target prices and loan rates have been steadily reduced with the goal of making U.S. crops competitive on the world market.

''No movement. No change,'' Lugar said when asked about the fruitless meeting.

Leahy declined to comment in detail about the meeting or what he would propose when the committee meets for its drafting session. He said the administration should be more specific about what it wants.

''It will be the first time we've ever been to mark-up (stage) on a farm bill where we didn't have an administration proposal, which is a bit frustrating. Everybody's kind of guessing,'' Leahy said.

Leahy said he would offer ''a couple of interesting options'' on target prices and loan rates.

''Obviously, there is no deal. Without a deal, people are uninhibited. You could see all sorts of proposals,'' a Republican staff worker said in looking toward Tuesday's meeting.

The staff worker said ''there are still problems with everything'' but a major sticking point was Democratic insistence on higher loan rates. He said their proposal would mean a 40-cent-a-bushel increase in corn loan rates and 50 cents for wheat, achieved by eliminating Agriculture Department discretion to adjust loan rates.

In a speech Thursday, Yeutter warned that high loan rates could lead to disaster if they approach the level of market prices and discourage farmers from selling grain.

''I can guarantee you there are members of Congress ... wanting to make the same old policy mistakes,'' Yeutter said.

Afterward, Yeutter told reporters he disagreed with Leahy's complaint. However, he refused to say if target price increases or higher crop loan rates were unacceptable. He said the administration would judge the entire package.

''However, I must say it is very difficult to make a case for raising target prices and loan rates in the (budget) environment we have today.''

(JUNE 7) UPI - Egyptian officials say the son of revolutionary leader Gamal Abdel Nasser is charged with complicity in four attacks on Israeli and U-S Embassy workers that left two people dead and seven people wounded. Egypt's Interior Ministry says Khaled Abdel Nasser returned to Cairo voluntarily from Geneva and surrendered last night. He is accused of giving financial aid to terrorists.

Police say NO one was hurt when fire erupted in a guest bedroom at a Palm Beach ocean-front mansion owned by Donald Trump. Firefighters say there was NO structural damage to the 118-room mansion, but the fire caused smoke damage to several rooms. Trump paid eight-Million dollars for the Florida mansion four years ago.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - American consumers borrowed an additional $584 million in installment loans in April at an annual growth rate of 1 percent, the Federal Reserve said Thursday.

The increase follows revised gains of $2.4 billion in March and $40 million in February, the Fed said in its monthly report.

''Automobile credit declined in April, reflecting in part slower sales of new cars,'' the Fed said. ''Mobile home loans also contracted slightly in April. Revolving credit expanded more rapidly in April than in March.''

MOSCOW (JUNE 7) UPI - Disgruntled workers in the rich Siberian oil fields held back deliveries to a Moscow refinery Thursday, charging Moscow builders halted work on sorely needed housing for the region.

The official Tass news agency said that for the third straight day the oil workers from Tyumen failed to send 10,000 tons of petroleum to the capital because of the failure of builders to fulfill agreements with the oil workers.

Reports of mass discontent in Tyumen have swirled all spring, and the government has sent representatives to the region to try to assuage the miners and ward off any chances of a crippling strike. President Mikhail Gorbachev has visited the region twice.

Apparently, the oil workers of the Tyumen region, responsible for 60 percent of all oil and natural gas production in the Soviet Union, have opted for what they are calling ''economic sanctions'' for non-performance of work.

''The miners resorted to this measure after the Moscow builders failed to complete housing construction,'' Tass said.

''It appears that other partners of the miners who do not fulfill their obligations will suffer a similar fate,'' Tass said.

The actions by the oil workers is part of two spontaneous movements - assertions of regional autonomy and workers exercising their power.

Ever since the nationwide coal strike last summer, industrial workers have been organizing. In the coal mining region of Donetsk next week, the Ukraine's colliers will hold a four-day congress.

The drive for regional economic autonmy was spurred by Moscow's decision a week ago to allow only residents of the capital and the Moscow region to shop in the city's stores.

Both the city of Vladimir and the Moscow suburb of Kalinin threatened to withhold supplies to the capital, which gets the best products of all regions.

Moscow initiated the so-called ''passport system'' to halt a a wave of panic buying after the government revealed a plan to raise prices on food as part of a planned transistion to a market economy.

CHICAGO (JUNE 7) UPI - The prospect of a smaller-than-expected corn crop coupled with aggressive buying and the lack of selling interest boosted grain futures Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Grain and soybean prices were higher to sharply higher with new-crop corn approaching limit-up levels. The July 1991 contract was up the 10-cent limit at midday and was just below that level at the close.

Trading was very active in corn amid indications that planting delays and cool weather could reduce production this year. Rain in some areas where corn planting is behind normal, and predictions of widespread rain in the Corn Belt Friday, provided most of the support.

Soybeans were sharply higher on spillover from corn and weather-related planting delays, especially in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Arkansas where no more than one-half of the crop is in the ground.

Soybeans had underlying support from sharply higher prices for soybean oil and meal, although the possibility that some corn ground may be planted to soybeans kept a lid on prices.

Wheat rallied with the corn and was moderately higher at the final bell. News the Agriculture Department had offered the Soviet Union another 2 million tons of export bonus wheat also boosted prices.

At the close, corn was up 5 3/4 to 9 1/2, soybeans up 8 3/4 to 11 1/2, wheat up 1 1/4 to 3 1/4 and oats up 2 1/4 to 3 cents.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - The world is losing its tropical forests much faster than previously thought, with deforestation running at a rate of 40 million to 50 million acres a year - an area the size of the state of Washington, a study said Thursday.

In the first global deforestation estimate in ten years, the report by World Resources Institute said new analyses of satellite photos show tropical rainforest is being wiped out 50 percent faster than was indicated by previous studies.

The institute, a Washington environmental research group, said the last comparable deforestation study was in 1980 by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, which put rainforest losses at 28 million acres per year.

While acknowledging some uncertainty over the new deforestation estimate, James Speth, president of the institute, said his group's report clearly showed the 1980s were a decade of tremendous environmental devastation.

"The data in the report do speak to us, indeed, they are screaming at us," Speth told reporters. "We are losing tropical forests the size of the state of Washington every year."

The report noted there was controversy over its new estimate, saying: "It has been suggested that what seems like a soaring deforestation rate is simply caused by the fact that the new surveys are more accurate and thus reveal old deforestation that had not been previously detected."

However, the report added, "It is also possible that the new studies show accelerating deforestation. In any case, it seems certain that the world is losing much more of its virgin tropical forest than had been thought."

The report conceded deforestation may have slackened somewhat since 1987, the last year when Brazilian landowners could qualify for tax breaks for clearing virgin forestland. Brazil has since canceled those tax breaks, partly due to international pressure to save rainforests. Still, the report said Brazil was losing ten million to 20 million acres of rainforest each year.

The institute said deforestation had increased to the point that developing countries were becoming major contributors to global warming because of the vast amounts of carbon dioxide - the main "greenhouse gas" - being released by burning of tropical forests.

Carbon dioxide is the main pollutant contributing to the buildup of man-made heat-trapping gases in the atmosphere. Scientists say the accumulating blanket of pollution threatens to raise surface temperatures, acting much like the glass ceiling and walls of a greenhouse.

Perhaps most surprisingly, the report concluded Brazil emitted more carbon dioxide than the United States in 1987 because of intensive forest burning in the Amazon jungle, the world's largest remaining rainforest.

For the same reason, the study found several Third World countries ranked higher than the United States and other industrialized nations in terms of per person emissions of greenhouse gases. Laos, Brazil, and the Ivory Coast all ranked ahead of the United States in that respect, with each Lao accounting for 11 tons of carbon released each year.

However, in calculating overall releases of the three major greenhouse gases - carbon dioxide, methane and chlorofluorocarbons - the report said the United States had the highest "greenhouse index," accounting for 17.6 percent of worldwide emissions.

Ranking second was the 12-nation European Community, about 13 percent, followed by the Soviet Union, 12 percent; Brazil, 10.5 percent; China, 6.6 percent; India, 3.9 percent and Japan, 3.9 percent.

The report said deforestation accounted for 33 percent of global carbon dioxide emissions, second only to the burning of fossil fuels such as oil, coal, and natural gas by factories, powerplants, and cars.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Conservative members of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, aided by Reagan-era holdovers on the staff, succeeded Thursday in delaying a commission endorsement of pending civil rights legislation.

To the obvious dismay of panel Chairman Arthur Fletcher, a Republican appointed by President Bush, the eight-member group reluctantly agreed to postpone taking action on a statement that would have urged passage of the proposed Civil Rights of Act of 1990 and called on Bush to sign the bill.

Objections from Commissioners Carl Anderson, a former legislative aide to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Russell Redenbaugh, forced the panel to agree to a two-week delay while the commission's general counsel, William Howard, a Reagan-era holdover, writes a memorandum outlining his objections to proposed legislation and a 92-page analysis written by the commission staff urging endorsement of the bill.

A majority of the panel appeared ready to back the staff analysis, including its contention that the proposed legislation would not result in employers using quotas to avoid anti-bias lawsuits.

The legislation, which seeks to overturn a series of Supreme Court rulings last year narrowing civil rights remedies and making it more difficult to prove employment discrimination, has been criticized by Bush, Attorney General Richard Thornburgh and conservatives for encouraging quotas.

Bush at one time threatened to veto the legislation as it presently stands because of what he considers an opening to quotas. But in mid-May, he said changes being made in the proposed bill were ''in the right direction. It appears to be moving closer to being acceptable.''

The rights panel's draft analysis - which has not yet been made public - rebutted the contention that the bill allows quotas. ''We feel quotas are not a necessary outcome,'' Nadja Zalokar, principal author of the draft said, arguing that under the previous law, which the high court narrowed and which the legisaltion would restore, ''we haven't seen any evidence'' of employers rushing to impose quotas.

She said the use of quotas - ''hiring by the numbers'' - was ''an expensive option for the employer'' because it would reduce the quality of the workforce and would be a last resort in the face of other alternatives.

But Howard called the analysis ''replete with problems - all significant.'' When prodded by Fletcher and Commissioner Mary Frances Berry to spell outthe problems, Howard said only that they failed to adequately address concerns raised by the Supreme Court.

''I don't feel its advisable or prudent to move forward with this today,'' Anderson said.

Fletcher, while agreeing to give Howard two weeks to spell out his objections, told the panel, ''I don't intend to wait until July.''

''Very little has been said that would make me change my mind or my vote '' he said. ''Indeed, its helped me strengthen my resolve.''

In mid-May, at a White House meeting between civil rights leaders and Bush Fletcher called the quotas issue ''a non-argument.''

''The issue of quotas is not part of this issue,'' he said then.

In other action, the panel adopted without objection a summary statement of its hearing on the causes and solutions to the problems of bigotry on campus but it took no positions on the issue and its current form offered no solutions.

LONG BEACH, CA (JUNE 7) UPI - The Air Force has withdrawn its approval of the purchasing system at the Douglas Aircraft plant, requiring it to seek government clearance on any military-related purchases of more than $100,000, the company said Thursday.

The move will increase government scrutiny and involvement in the company's day-to-day operations.

Richard Hill, a company spokesman, said the Air Force will also require its approval of all ''time and material charges'' of more than $25,000 at the plant.

The disapproval of the purchasing system is the latest in a series of negative developments to hit the huge Long Beach plant, which employs about 50,000 workers.

Douglas Aircraft, a unit of McDonnell Douglas Corp. of St. Louis, is suffering production delays in its three major aircraft programs at the plant - including the C-17 cargo plane for the Air Force - and said last month it would lay off 4,000 workers.

The C-17, now due to fly for the first time a year from now, can carry up 86 tons of equipment.

The imposition of the new rules follows the disclosure last month that the Air Force had issued 34 deficiency reports against the C-17 program and had written ''letters of concern'' to senior executives at the plant.

Douglas produces mostly commercial aircraft at the Long Beach plant, but the C-17 is a key program for the facility, with about 8,000 employees working on the plane.

The Air Force is planning to buy 210 C-17s worth nearly $42 billion, with deliveries starting in 1993, although Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has recommended cutting back the allotment to 120 planes.

Although the C-17 is about 10 months behind its original schedule, the Air Force's Contract Management Division said the new purchasing restrictions on Douglas will not delay military work at the facility.

The Air Force said it was forced to act for a number of reasons. ''Douglas' major purchasing problems are in the areas of management oversight of purchasing, competition and price analysis, and file documentation,'' a statement from the Air Force's contract division said.

''By disapproving the company's purchasing system, the government is putting Douglas on notice that immediate corrective action is needed,'' the statement added.

Hill said Douglas has been putting together a ''corrective action'' plan for approval by the Air Force, but its completion and approval could take up to a year.

''We're doing several things to find the root of the problem,'' Hill said, adding that Douglas began an internal audit a month ago to determine whether employees were following company purchasing procedures.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 7) UPI - The crippled shuttle Columbia will be hauled back to its hangar next week, delaying launch until August and clearing the way for Atlantis to blast off next month on a military flight officials said Thursday.

Shuttle program director Robert Crippen said Columbia's launch on a ten-day astronomy mission will be delayed more than two months until mid August and that a flight that had been planned for September will slip until after an October mission by the shuttle Discovery.

"What we will do is fly the DOD (Department of Defense) flight in mid July " Crippen said at a news conference broadcast to NASA field centers across the nation. "The flight of (Columbia) will be in the mid-August time frame."

As a result of the schedule revision, NASA will only launch eight shuttle missions this year instead of nine as originally planned because a flight that had been set for December will be pushed into 1991.

"It is our intent to make sure that these vehicles are ready and safe to fly and when we have a problem such as this ... we'll just have to fall back and regroup. That's what we're doing," Crippen said.

Columbia's "roll back" to the Vehicle Assembly Building was unavoidable after a test Wednesday confirmed the presence of a liquid hydrogen leak in a cavity where the ship's 17-inch-wide fuel line enters the belly of the orbiter. To fix the problem, Columbia will have to be moved into the VAB where it can be removed from its external fuel tank.

Given the time needed to fix Columbia, Crippen said, NASA will press on with plans to launch Atlantis around July 13 on a secret military flight, delaying Columbia's mission to at least early August and possibly longer.

"(Columbia) will be coming back next week," Crippen said. "Since we're going to have to take the orbiter off to go evaluate the problem ... from a scheduling standpoint the obvious thing for us to do is to go ahead and proceed with the (Atlantis) mission."

"The current schedule would have that ready to come out of the VAB on the 15th of next week and we will proceed with the launch of (Atlantis), which would be scheduled for the mid-July time frame."

A Spacelab life science mission originally set for September using Columbia will be delayed until after the Oct. 5 launch of the Ulysses solar probe aboard the shuttle Discovery, a high-priority mission that must get off the ground by Oct. 23 to avoid a 13-month delay because of planetary alignments.

Atlantis was scheduled to be rolled from its hangar to the nearby Vehicle Assembly Building Friday for attachment to a set of solid-fuel boosters and an external fuel tank.

The cavernous VAB only has two shuttle processing stalls and both currently are occupied. One houses Atlantis's boosters and tank and the other shelters a single booster that had been scheduled for use by Columbia in September.

Engineers plan to haul the single booster from the VAB to launch pad 39B Monday to make room for Columbia. Preliminary schedules show Columbia's roll back beginning the next day.

How long it will take to repair Columbia will not be known until the spaceship is removed from its external tank, giving engineers access to the 17-inch "quick disconnect" fitting in the belly of the orbiter.

Crippen said a new external fuel tank will be substituted for the one currently in use, eliminating any concern about possible leakage from valve systems on the tank side of the disconnect fitting.

If the leak is inside the orbiter, the flight likely would be delayed past mid-August because of the work required to replace the faulty equipment.

Columbia originally was scheduled for launch May 9 but the flight was delayed to May 30 because of problems launching the shuttle Discovery and because of a technical glitches.

The May 30 launch then was put on hold indefinitely after hydrogen gas spewed into Columbia's engine room during fuel loading the night before the planned launching.

Despite extensive tests, engineers were unable to find the leak until they pumped supercold liquid hydrogen back aboard Wednesday in a test to duplicate the frigid conditions present when the problem first showed up.

While the results of the test failed to precisely pinpoint the location of the leak, engineers confirmed it was present in the 17-inch quick disconnect fitting, making a rollback inevitable.

(JUNE 7) UPI - The future of an anti-crime bill looks grim after members of the Senate fell three votes short of cutting off debate and forcing a vote. Democratic leader George Mitchell said just before the vote today that it was the Senate's last chance to keep the anti-crime package alive. The bill has been bogged down by opponents of a prohibition on military-style assault weapons.

Nelson Mandela said today in France that the lifting of a state of emergency in South Africa is ''a victory for the South African people as a whole, both white and black.'' Mandela's African National Congress called a news conference for this afternoon to respond to President Frederik de Klerk's announcement. De Klerk said his decision to lift emergency rule removes a ''major stumbling'' block to power-sharing negotiations with the black majority.

The chief investigator for the U-S Immigration and Naturalization Service says there is evidence linking deposed Panamian leader Manuel Noriega to selling fake visas and passports and smuggling illegal aliens to the United States. MIAMI (JUNE 7) UPI - Fifty-five more dieters have filed lawsuits claiming the Nutri/System Inc. weight loss program caused their gallbladder disease bringing the number of such suits filed by a Miami law firm to 75.

All 55 plaintiffs, including three teenagers, had to have their gallbladders removed, attorney Herman Russomanno said Thursday.

''People as young as 16 have lost their gallbladder and we allege it is a result of being on the Nutri/System diet,'' Russomanno said.

''The company had contended that they don't allow young people to be on their program, but a number of these young people under age 18 have gone to certain Nutri/System centers and gotten the food and been on the program.''

The lawsuits claim that Nutri/Systems, headquartered in Willow Grove, Pa., failed to supervise clients' weight-loss routines, which included packaged foods bought from the company.

The lawsuits accuse the company of fraud and negligence, saying it should have known that scientific studies have linked rapid weight loss to gallbladder disease and the formation of gallstones.

Similar charges were made in 20 lawsuits that Russamanno and attorney Robert Fiori filed in the Dade County courts on behalf of other Florida patients in March.

Nutri/System's attorney, A.J. Barranco in Miami, said all the lawsuits were without merit.

''The program is medically and nutritionally and calorically a sound program and it is a safe way to lose weight,'' Barranco said. ''My client's main concern is the health and well being of its clients. Millions of people and thousands of physicians have successfully completed the program.''

Barranco said children under 14 are not permitted on the diet, and those between 14 and 18 must have parental consent.

The problems described in the lawsuits are the result of obesity, not the result of the diet, he said.

''Obesity is the real culprit. Obese people are three to four times more likely to develop gallstones than the average person. Gallstones take two to three years to form. These plaintiffs have been on the program for less time than it would have taken to form these gallstaones,'' Barranco said.

All but one of the 55 new lawsuits, filed Wednesday, involved Florida patients. The other was filed in Stuttgart, Ark., just outside of Little Rock.

The majority of the plaintiffs were under age 35, Russomanno said.

The Nutri/System program is marketed in all 50 states, Canada, Australia and the United Kingdom and is widely advertised through radio, television and newspapers. There are five outlets in the Miami and Fort Lauderdale area.

Clients pay $530 to sign up, and the system provides some of the food on the diet at a cost of from $46 to $70 a week.

The lawsuits do not specify a dollar amount for damages sought, except to note that all involved claims of at least $5,000, the jurisdictional minimum.

Russomanno said the lawsuits could be consolidated at least for part of the pre-trial procedures, though no consolidation order has been given.

The first cases were expected to reach trial by the end of the year, he said.

WASHINGTON, PA (JUNE 7) UPI - A man has sued his former live-in girlfriend for what he believes is his share of $8.5 million won in the Pennsylvania Lottery.

Gary Fender of Washington sued Sylvia Trapuzzano in Common Pleas Court over an alleged agreement to split lottery winnings. Fender and Trapuzzano were engaged and had lived together for about four years.

Their engagement ended in May 1989 when they returned from a Florida vacation and she told him the lottery winnings were all hers and broke off their relationship, the suit filed last week said.

Fender nows lives in Washington, Pa., and Trapuzzano in Canonsburg.

Fender and Trapuzzano met in 1984, and they shared an interest in lotteries and football pools and took part in them regularly, the suit said. They agreed at some point that any lottery winning would be divided equally no matter who bought the ticket, the suit said.

Trapuzzano called Fender on April 26, 1989, and told him to meet her at a supermarket in Washington to buy lottery tickets, the suit said. The jackpot at the time was $115 million.

Fender told Trapuzzano he couldn't make it to the supermarket and asked her to buy tickets for both of them, the suit said. She agreed and bought 30 tickets.

Trapuzzano realized she had a winning ticket later that night, the suit said. She and Fender were told by state lottery officials to sign the back of the ticket and have it verified in Harrisburg.

The suit said Trapuzzano then told Fender that she should sign the back of the ticket alone, adding, ''This ticket is just as much yours as mine, but because of your ex-wives and kids and because we are not married yet, I should sign the ticket. If you sign the ticket, your two ex-wives will take us through the coals.''

Fender agreed to let Trapuzzano sign the ticket alone, the suit said.

Trapuzzano had one of 14 winning tickets for the jackpot, and she received a check for $254,019.74 as the first installment of her $8.5 million in winnings.

She paid off Fender's car loan and insurance and bought him a ring. She gave $40,000 to her family and invested the rest.

While they were on a vacation in Florida a month later, Trapuzzano and Fender argued over whether he was entitled to any more of the lottery winnings, the suit said.

''Trapuzzano refused to remit any additional monies to Fender and has broken off the couple's engagement'' when they returned to Pennsylvania, the suit said.

The suit charged Trapuzzano with ''outrageous conduct,'' bad faith and reckless indifference of Fender's rights. It asked the court to order the state lottery to give Fender his fair share of the winnings and seeks damages of at least $120,000 from Trapuzzano.

Courts several times have ordered lottery winnings to be split and the state has done so, said Pennsylvania Lottery spokesman Terrry Murphy.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Manuel Johnson, vice chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, which sets the nation's interest rate policies, announced Thursday he will resign Aug. 3 to take an academic position.

''I deeply regret, but understand, Manley Johnson's decision to return to the private sector,'' Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan said. ''The vice chairman and I have been an effective team. I'll miss him.''

Johnson, 41, who has a doctorate degree in economics from Florida State University, has been a member of the board since Feb. 7, 1986, and served as vice chairman since Aug. 4, 1986.

He will return to George Mason University, in Fairfax, Va., where he taught graduate economics from 1977 to 1981.

Johnson said he had no major conflicts with Greenspan but ''that does not mean that there always was agreement about everything.''

A new board member will be selected by President Bush. The president has said he wants interest rates to come down and the Johnson resignation gives him a chance to name a replacement who shares his opinion.

But Johnson said, ''There are no signs that politics are going to be played with the appointment,'' adding there is consensus at the Fed about current policies ''which makes it easier to leave.''

''My leaving will not change the direction of policies,'' he said.

Bush will also name a new vice chairman from the panel members.

''Faced with an additional 4-year term as vice chairman ... I felt it was an appropriate time to leave and devote myself to intellectual issues, policy issues, academic life,'' Johnson told a news conference. ''It was time to pursue a change of pace.''

At George Mason, he will assume the Koch Chair in International Economics at the school, direct its Center for Global Market Studies and also help establish a non-proft council on international monetary policy.

Johnson said money was not a factor. The salary of a Fed governor is $82,500. Greenspan, as chairman, makes $89,500.

In Johnson, ''the Fed is losing a centrist ... between the inflation hawks on one side and the recession worriers,'' said Irwin Kellner, chief economist at Manufacturers Hanover in New York.

''When he first came on he was more of a pro-growth person rather than an anti-inflation person,'' Kellner said. ''But I think he has moved to the direction of the chairman in expressing his concerns on inflation.''

Added economist Mickey Levy of First Fidelity Bancorp of Newark, N.J.: ''It's a loss to the board. He was a very good thinker who contributed a lot to the intellectual capacity of the board and he'll be missed.''

Prior to his appointment to the board by President Reagan, Johnson served as an assistant secretary of the Treasury from 1982 to 1986, and deputy assistant secretary of the Treasury from 1981 to 1982.

While at the Treasury, Johnson helped set the Reagan administration's economic policy and played a role in writing the Recovery Tax Act of 1981 and the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

In his letter of resignation to Bush, Johnson said, ''I have had the pleasure of serving this great country almost 10 consecutive years. While I will always cherish this experience, the time has come to return to private life.''

''I am extremely proud to have played a part in the unprecedented period of sustained economic growth and low inflation that has characterized the decade of the 1980s and continues into the 1990s,'' Johnson said.

''Although there are still major issues to be addressed as this country moves ahead, I feel optimistic about our future,'' he wrote.

''Indeed, part of my reasoning for leaving at this time is the confidence I have in my colleagues at the Federal Reserve and in the economic team you have assembled in your administration,'' Johnson said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - After a 40-year interval, the Library of Congress has decided to resume awarding a national prize for poetry, it was announced Thursday.

Librarian of Congress James Billington said in a statement the award, to be called The Rebekah Johnson Bobbitt National Prize for Poetry, will be presented in October for the best book of poetry published by an American during 1988 or 1989.

The $10,000 prize is provided by Bobbitt's family in her memory. Bobbitt, a sister of President Lyndon B. Johnson, worked in the library's cataloging department in the 1930s, where she met her husband, O.P. Bobbitt.

The Bobbitt Prize is the first such award given by the library since it awarded the 1948 Bollingen Prize to Ezra Pound. Pound had been interned for his pro-Italian activities during World War II and was indicted for treason.

Following that controversy, the library adopted a policy prohibiting the granting of awards or prizes.

A three-member jury will meet in September to decide the first recipient. Nominations for the prize are submitted by publishers only. The library will announce the winner in October.

ASUNCION, PARAGUAY (JUNE 7) UPI - Canada has made a blazing debut in the General Assembly of the Organization of American States by proposing to help safeguard democracy in the Western Hemisphere.

Diplomats said Thursday that a proposal sponsored jointly by Canada and Costa Rica to set up a pro-democracy watchdog unit in the framework of the OAS has won the backing so far of nine of the organization's 32 members.

''Argentine is going to support it,'' said Argentina's OAS Ambassador Juan Pablo Lohle.

Diplomatic sources said the proposal, which has not been made public, in addition to support from Canada, Costa Rica and Argentina, also has backing from the United States, Chile, Trinidad and Togago, Uruguay, Nicaragua, and Suriname.

The sources said the measure, with amendments, has a good chance of approval by the OAS General Assembly meeting in Asuncion for a five-day session that began Monday.

The proposal, under which the OAS would help monitor democratic institutions such as the election process, represents a high profile entry of Canada into the hemisphere organization.

Long only a distant observer in the group uniting nations of the Americas, Canada's membership application was approved in the 1989 General Assembly, enabling its full participation for the first time in this year's General Assembly session in Asuncion.

Canadian diplomatic sources, asking not to be identified, said their project includes the creation of a political commission composed of ''experts on democracy.''

Canada's Minister of Foreign Affairs Minuquo Landry first proposed the pro-democracy unit on Tuesday, saying the OAS successful monitoring if the election process this year in Nicaragua was an example of the value overseeing the democratic process.

Some diplomatics were skeptical of the proposal, but most seemed willing go to along with it if there are amendments.

''The Anglo-Saxon mentality on the principle of non-intervention is very different from ours,'' said a diplomat from Uruguay, whose delegation as a whole was reported favorable to the measure.

Costa Rican diplomats said they were offering amendments to the proposal to ease fears by some delegates that the project might serve as a pretext to intervene in some nations' internal affairs.

In other business, a move by Argentina to pursuade OAS delegates to take steps to advance the formation of a Latin American common market during the OAS General Assembly was rejected by delegates, who contended that the OAS was not the right forum.

Instead, the issue will be taken up June 20 by a meeting of members of the Latin American Association for Integration, an organization based in Montevideo which supports free trade measures within the Latin republics.

Argentina has announced it will step up efforts to form a trade bloc with Brazil and Chile as a first step toward free trade agreements involving more countries.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's planned budget cuts could result in a 25 percent reduction in U.S. military troops, ships and aircraft over the next five years, the Pentagon said Thursday.

''The secretary has been talking about ... so has the chairman, Chairman (of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Colin) Powell, this sort of reduction now for the past several weeks,'' Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said.

A 25 percent cut in U.S. forces is ''within the budget numbers that we've been talking about all along,'' Williams said, referring to 2 percent annual spending reductions proposed for future budgets.

Cheney agreed Wednesday to provide congressional budget negotiators with a study showing the policy effects of a 25 percent cut in U.S. forces over five years, from fiscal 1991 through fiscal 1995.

''It is intended to be a kind of a thumbnail sketch of the possible outcome of the department's current six-year defense plan reviews,'' Williams said of the study.

''We do not expect it to show dollar amounts in the out-years (beyond 1991) that are significantly below what we are looking at now, that is to say, the administration's proposal for negative 2 percent growth in the out-years.''

The Bush administration proposed a 2.5 percent inflation-adjusted cut in defense spending for fiscal 1991, which begins Oct. 1, and an annual cut of about 2 percent in future years.

Cheney will also contrast that 25-percent force reduction with the effects on U.S. military forces of the deeper defense spending cuts sought by the House and Senate.

''He's saying, look, our numbers are on the table and this is the sort of force reductions it would mean, which we think would be reasonable given the changes in the world,'' Williams said.

The military services' fiscal 1992-97 spending plans, widely reported by The Washington Post and others last month, envision cutting nearly 300,000 Army, Air Force, Navy and Marine personnel, two aircraft carriers and 52 other ships from the Navy, stopping Trident submarine production and deferring plans for mobile intercontinental nuclear missiles.

MILAN, ITALY (JUNE 7) UPI - Before a projected television audience of 2 billion, Argentina aims to break a 20-year-year jinx on defending champions Friday when it launches the 1990 World Cup against Cameroon.

The last World Cup champ to start its title defense with a victory was England, which defeated Romania 1-0 in its opening game in the 1970 World Cup in Mexico.

Since then Brazil, West Germany, Argentina and Italy struggled through opening games, and none retained the title.

Nevertheless, Argentina is expected to score an emphatic victory against Cameroon at Giuseppe Meazza Stadium, giving the South Americans two points entering their other Group B games against the Soviet Union and Romania.

Coach Carlos Bilardo's squad includes five players from the 1986 World Cup winning team: goalkeeper Nery Pumpido, center back Oscar Ruggeri, midfielders Sergio Batista and Jorge Burruchaga, who scored the winning goal against West Germany, and captain Diego Maradona, who will be playing with a sore toe. Nery and Pumpido will be making their third World Cup appearances.

Argentina has won only six international games since becoming champion. Until its unimpressive 2-1 victory over Israel two weeks ago, it had not won for 10 games and failed to score in nine.

Bilardo admits his team is ''Maradona and 10 others'' and Argentina's success will depend upon Maradona's form. He will start the game with a protective shield covering an infected big toe.

Cameroon is reeling from a poor showing in the African Championships in Algeria in March.

It also faces disciplinary action from soccer authorities for failing to register on time its World Cup roster. And there have been rumblings about the tactics of Soviet Coach Valeri Nepomniachi, who communicates with his team through his driver because he cannot speak French.

But Cameroon holds a unique World Cup mark. It is the only country of the 55 to have appeared in the tournament never to have lost a match - drawing in the three games it played in 1982.

Goalkeeper Joseph-Antoine Bell and brothers Omam and Kana Biyik are the only survivors from that squad and all are expected to be in the lineup that will be named Friday morning.

The Cameroon players have been unsettled by the cool weather at their Varese training camp, but Nepomniachi reports no injuries and says he is not awed by Argentina.

''We will play our own game,'' he said. ''You may talk about surprises, but I will not, and we have no special plans to mark Maradona either.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - The Senate Commerce Committee passed a bill Thursday to re-regulate cable television rates in an important step toward giving consumers federal protection from skyrocketing cable TV fees.

The legislation, sent to the Senate floor on a vote of 18-1, would return to the Federal Communications Commission the authority to regulate rates for cable television services.

''We're going to put the FCC back watching these things. I think cable is going to be disciplining itself,'' said Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., the committee's chairman.

The cable television industry was deregulated in 1984. Since then consumers have complained about higher cable prices and declining service.

Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., said the cable industry has been in a state of chaos since deregulation and has turned into ''a monoploy that's out of control.''

The proposed legislation ''assures the consumers that from now on cable companies are not going to have a totally free reign,'' agreed Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo.

Danforth said cable rates have increased 40 percent for about one-quarter of cable subscribers since deregulation and have gone up by 29 percent since January 1987.

In the years since cable was introduced in 1948 to improve television reception in remote areas, the cable industry has grown into a more than

More than half the nation's homes are hooked up to cable and cable offerings such as CNN, MTV and HBO are firmly entrenched as a part of Americana.

James Mooney, president of the National Cable Television Association, said the proposed legislation is ''much more modest and scaled back'' than the cable industry had expected.

Still, the industry objects to many of the bill's provisions, and a battle is expected over restrictions on the exclusive distribution of programming.

''At this point we'll see if we can continue to work with the Senate,'' Mooney said.

The legislation did not address the efforts by telephone companies to enter the cable business. An amendment allowing phone companies to carry video signals through fiber optic lines was withdrawn minutes before the final vote.

Sen. Conrad Burns, R-Mont., the amendment's author, struck a deal with the committee to pull his amendment and resubmit it as a bill after he was promised it would get a full hearing next month.

Several committee members said the amendment would kill the chances of the cable bill's passage by the full Senate. Burns argued that, rather than re-regulation, consumers would be served best by the increased competition that telephone companies would give cable operators.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) UPI - Not every museum has a doghouse. Only the Smithsonian's Cooper-Hewitt Museum has 24.

The national museum of design opens a display Friday of doghouses created by prominent architects and designers to run though Oct. 14. Appropriately the ''beastly buildings'' are being showm in the garden of the museum, formerly the Andrew Carnegie Mansion.

The doghouses were chosen from designs submitted in an invitational competition sponsored by the Cooper-Hewitt and Guiding Eyes for the Blind, a school for training guide dogs in Yorktown Heights, N. Y., that is celebrating its 35th anniversary.

Doghouses are the exception rather than the rule in the world of dogs. Most dogs are indoor pets who live at home. Only outdoor dogs are provided with doghouses, not to live in but for sleeping and refuge during inclement weather.

The doggiest of the canine shelters is a fido sculpture in brightly painted wood by Lewis Davis and William H. Paxson called ''The Trojan Horse'' in tribute to its inspiration in Greek legend. This house's occupant literally sleeps in the belly of the beast.

Another doghouse bears the figure of a winged ''guardian angel'' dog sculpted in fibreglass over its entrance which is decorated with real bones. Explained its designer, Michael MacLeod, ''I'm an American guy; we don't have lions and dragons to leave bones about, but we do have dogs.''

More practical are a portable doghouse of light galvanized metal which can be folded up and carried away by handles attached to the roof, designed by Christopher Delaney and Andrea Cochran, and a pup tent with an inflatable mattress that folds flat, the contribution of Nicholae Goldsmith.

Another tent-like pavilion on wheels attached to a bicycle is for taking your pet to the beach or lake. Designer James Gubelmann has tucked in two drawers for bones, blankets, beachballs and beverages and a built-in springboard for diving dogs.

Tucker Viemeister, who maintains that television has replaced the dog as man's best friend, has made a doghouse out of a junked television console and named it ''Lassie Come Home.'' Donna Seftel's sectional doghouse includes a miniature television set in the quadrant reserved for dog entertainment because, she explains, ''TV has gone to the dogs.''

Seftel is one of several designers that have included skylights in their doghouses for, as she says, ''watching the Dog Star.'' The apex of Alex and Nell Twining's wooden slat pyramid-shaped doghouse is made of glass ''to admit good vibrations.''

The only doghouse that makes a statement for an architectural style is Ted Porter's ''Bauwauhaus,'' a gleaming white shelter in the German modern Bauhaus style which sits on a Marcel Breuer table turned upside down. Charles Moore's ''Flea Folly'' makes allusions to American barn design and Michael McDonough's temple-like doghouse, which uses dog biscuits for bricks, seems distinctly Mayan.

Peter Pennoyer's Victorian clocktower doghouse is capped with a wooden doggy bowl, and Ron Chung's doghouse, with white picket-fence siding and astroturf roof, has a loose picket for a pet to enter and exit. Tom Sawyer would have loved it.

The simplest design is Robin Parkinson's aluminum teepee whose rounded floor area, he says, reflects the circular path dogs take before lying down. Another simple barrel-shaped house formed of bentwood curls up to make a comfortable seat for the dog's master.

Keith Godard's ''Every-Dog's House'' is a Hansel-and-Gretel cottage with low sloping roofs that bear the names of famous dogs of history in both print and braille, which is used on the reverse side of all exhibition signs. Godard said he did a lot of research to come up with a K-9 Hall of Fame.

Some of the names recorded are Balto, the rescue dog who immortalized with a statue in Central Park, astronaut Laika, actors Benji, Lassie, Rin-Tin-Tin, and Pluto, presidential pooches Falla, Checkers, and Lady, advertising's Victor and Spuds McKenzie, and Snoopy of cartoon fame. And then there's Walter Kuper. Walter who?

Try Robert Louis Stevenson's ''Kidnapped.''

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) UPI - U.S. computer and telecommunications manufacturers, led by a strong push from International Business Machines Corp., reversed a two-year slowdown with a 7.7 percent growth in revenues in the first quarter of 1990, Gartner Group Inc. reported Thursday.

The research firm, based in Stamford, Conn., monitors the broad information industry which covers the computer, software, telecommunications and electronic components sectors.

First-quarter revenues at 125 hardware and software companies surveyed totalled $36.5 billion. The 36 telecommunications companies surveyed generated $42.1 billion and 60 electronic components earned $8.6 billion, Gartner said.

''The information industry recorded a 7.7 percent revenue growth rate in the first quarter of 1990 compared with the first quarter of 1989,'' said the survey, based on data compiled from 221 publicly held companies.

The profit margin in the information industry, however, declined to 6.6 percent in the year ended March 31, 1990, from 7 percent in the previous year, the firm said.

''IBM's strong growth led the revenue turnaround,'' Gartner said. ''It contributed more than half of the revenue growth in the data processing sector in the first quarter of 1990 over the first quarter of 1989, and grew faster than the rest of the industry for the first time in five years.''

The data processing sector doubled its revenue growth to 9.6 percent in the first quarter of 1990, from a 4.7 rate in the year-ago period.

''Despite the sector's revenue growth, hardware firms suffered a dramatic drop in net margins from the shift toward desktop and open systems,'' said Randall Brophy, senior research analyst with Gartner. ''The loss stems from a mainframe price war, the decreasing popularity of proprietary systems and low volume sales in mini computers.''

Among the companies to report high revenue growth in the first quarter of 1990 were Compaq Computer Corp., up 27.7 percent from the year-ago period, Sun Microsystems Inc., up 27.1 percent, and AST Research Inc., up 20.6 percent. The three companies are strong in the workstation and personal computer sectors.

But the net margin of hardware firms dropped to 3.8 percent for the year ended March 31, from 7.6 percent in the year-ago period.

Profit margins in the same period for the software sector remained virtually unchanged, at a high 10.1 percent, compared with 10.5 percent in the previous year.

Recording double-digit revenue growth, the winners in the software industry were Microsoft Corp., up 57.8 percent, Oracle Systems Corp., up 54.2 percent, and Lotus Development Corp., up 38 percent.

The three companies are gaining in terms of market share against the established software leaders and their growth rate is way above the sector's average of 12.7 percent, Gartner said.

IBM's software revenues grew by only 6.8 percent, Unisys Corp. was up 9 percent and Digital Equipment Corp. up 5 percent.

In the telecommunications sector, revenues grew by 6.7 percent in the first quarter of 1990, compared with the same period of 1989. Excluding telecommunications giant American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which scored a slight rebound with a 2.7 percent growth in the first quarter, the sector grew by 7.8 percent in the period.

The sluggish electronic components' sector gained some strength, boosted by increased demand for powerful microcomputers and peripherals. Revenues for the first quarter grew by 4.4 percent, recovering from a low of 2.5 percent in the third quarter of 1989.

The electronic components' growth was led by powerhouses Intel Corp. and Motorola Inc. The overall sector, however, continued to give signs of sluggishness, with 38 percent of the companies reporting declining first-quarter revenues.

CAGLIARI, Sardinia (JUNE 7) UPI - An English soccer fan appeared before magistrates Thursday after hitting a policeman in a bar in the Sardinian capital.

Andrew Parry became the fifth England supporter arrested in the week leading to the World Cup, the first for physical violence.

The exact charge against Parry was not immediately determined. If he is formally charged with physically assaulting a police officer, he could face up to four years in jail.

Parry was arrested Wednesday night as he and some friends were drinking at a bar at the train station in the Sardinian capital of Cagliari. Police said he was ''obviously drunk'' and attacked without apparent motive with punches and kicks.

Kevin Ploughman, one of Parry's friends, said the outburst was sudden and unexpected.

''Before we knew what he was about, he hit out,'' Ploughman said. ''This Italian guy, as soon as he got up, showed his ID, he was a plainclothes policeman, and took us to the police station.''

On Monday, three England fans were sentenced to 20 days in jail and fined 200,000 lire ($165) for stealing sheets and tearing up their hotel room. The next day, police caught and deported Paul Scarrott, the self-styled king of the English soccer hooligans, after he entered Italy on a false passport.

In the Tunisian capital of Tunis, 14 young Englishmen appeared Thursday at a preliminary hearing for assaulting three tourist buses last week. The incident took place while the English soccer team was in town for a World Cup warmup match against Tunisia.

The accused are charged with disturbing the peace and public drunkenness. If convicted, they face up to five years in prison.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - The Senate Foreign Relations Committee Thursday denied anadministration request for $270 million to tear down the electronically bug-riddled U.S. Embassy in Moscow and build a new one, authorizing only $50 million to provide ''security space'' in the U.S. compound.

The amendment on the embassy was approved unanimously as the committee reported a bill authorizing nearly $620 million in supplemental State Department spending in the 1991 fiscal year.

Construction on the Moscow embassy was suspended in 1985, when electronic listening devices were discovered throughout the building, hidden in prefabricated concrete construction materials purchased from the Soviets.

Since then, the United States has denied the Soviets permission to move into their new embassy in Washington until a new U.S. Embassy is completed. On Dec. 20, the State Department said it wanted to tear down the Moscow building and build a new one at a cost of $270 million over five years.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee April 26 authorized $300 million for building an embassy - with the condition that before the State Department spends the money, Congress must approve its construction plan.

But the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, expressing concerns about the cost of the administration plan at a time of improving U.S.-Soviet relations, voted 16-0 for an amendment that provides $50 million to complete the embassy and ''provide additional security space ... on the U.S. Embassy compound.''

Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., the amendment's sponsor, said he had toured several buildings in the compound that could be converted for use for secret conversations.

Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, also said there was no guarantee that a new embassy would be totally secure given the current capability of the Soviets to intercept conversations.

The bill's biggest expenditure is $475 million for the United Nations, to make up back dues that the United States did not pay to protest U.N. actions.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., vowed to offer an amendment on the floor to strip the provision, saying paying the money now would make it appear the United States was conceding it had made a mistake.

In committee, Helms succeeded in attaching an amendment that would prohibit direct or indirect U.S. assistance for any missile program in China until the president certifies China is not providing ballistic missiles, missile technology or poison gas to Iran, Iraq, Syria or Libya.

Possibly the biggest dispute in the committee was over a successful Moynihan amendment authorizing $6 million for an internatioal effort to stop the spread of zebra mussels in the Great Lakes.

Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., questioned the need for the expenditure, prompting a vigorous defense from Moynihan, who said the pest threatened to disable water and power plants throughout the Great Lakes.

''You have not heard the last of the zebra mussel,'' Moynihan said. ''We have a real infestation here.''

(JUNE 7) UPI - Most leaders of Warsaw Pact nations meeting today in Moscow are representing nations that have been drastically changed in the democracy movement that swept Eastern Europe. The focus of today's meeting is the the future of European alliances in general and the possible NATO membership of a united Germany. Soviet President Gorbachev will brief the leaders on his recent summit with President Bush.

NATO foreign ministers are meeting at Turnberry, Scotland, mapping strategy to keep a united Germany in the alliance without humiliating the Kremlin. British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd put it this way- ''Just because communism is on the way out, NO one is trying to humiliate the Russians.'' Hurd says he remains ''reasonably optimistic'' that a solution acceptable to Moscow can be reached in a few months.

Opponents of a proposed ban on military-style assault weapons may have succeeded in killing the entire anti-crime package under consideration by the Senate. The Senate today fell three votes short of the 60 required to end delaying tactics on the legislation. Democratic leader George Mitchell had indicated that if the effort to stop the filibuster failed, it would mean the end of the bill.

The leaders of Canada's provinces today began a fifth day of negotiations on a constitutional amendment that threatens to divide the nation. The amendment would recognize the French-speaking province as a distinct society with powers to promote its French language and culture. Quebec has warned that it will secede unless the provison is approved without changes.

MOSCOW (JUNE 7) UPI - British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher arrived in Moscow Thursday on an official visit to renew her close bond with President Mikhail Gorbachev and hold talks on the gamut of East-West relations and ways to revive the moribund Soviet economy.

The British leader flew to the Soviet capital after speaking at a conference of NATO foreign ministers in Turnberry, Scotland, earlier in the day.

''The message I shall take is that NATO is flourishing and will continue to do so,'' Thatcher said in Scotland. ''Not as an alliance against anyone - NATO has never attacked anyone and will not in future - but as an alliance for freedom, justice and democracy, values which are now ever more widely accepted across Europe.''

Thatcher's three-day Soviet visit begins in earnest on Friday, when she will have four hours of talks with Gorbachev, who she last met in September 1989.

She will travel to Kiev on Saturday to view an exhibition being shown in the Ukrainian city.

The prime minister will fly to Armenia the next day to open a school built with British donations for victims of the December 1988 earthquake that devastated the southern region. She returns to London late Sunday.

Despite Thatcher and Gorbachev's differing politics, they share one key motivation - the desire for foreign policy successes to offset setbacks over unpopular domestic policies.

But while Gorbachev still enjoys a dynamic role on the international stage Thatcher's influence has diminished since the heady days of her partnership with former President Ronald Reagan as one of the West's two greatest unflinching opponents of Soviet power.

The Bush administration - despite its declarations to the contrary - has clearly diluted its ''special relationship'' with Britain in favor of stronger ties with West Germany and the expected benefits that may be reaped from links with the emerging economic colossus.

Although Thatcher's popularity has plummeted at home, her personal relationship with Gorbachev is perhaps stronger than any he has with other Western leaders. She prides herself on recognizing his emergence, remembered with her epithet after their first meeting in 1984 that he was someone she could ''do business with.''

''Both in terms of East and West, and in relations with Europe, she is not riding quite as high as she was, but she is still an important statesperson,'' said Margot Light, an Anglo-Soviet specialist at the London School of Economics and Political Science.

''I think Gorbachev counts on her, on her good influence,'' Light said. ''And I think she has quite an exalted view of her influence, of being able to change his mind and show him the way.''

A British official said a key aim of her visit would be to broadly demonstrate support for Gorbachev and his reforms. But observers expect few tangibles to emerge from the meeting.

The official said talks would be on East-West relations, particularly their differing positions on NATO, German unification, the Baltic states and arms control, as well as the rising friction in the Middle East over the influx of Soviet Jews into Israel.

''I don't think Gorbachev is going to accept these things willy-nilly because the West wants them,'' he said. ''We are no longer into a monolithic dictatorship. We are into public opinion in an incipient democracy. Gorbachev will need public support (for any changes).''

Thatcher, even more than Bush, is unyielding in her view that a united Germany should ''anchored'' in NATO, and believes it is in Moscow's economic interests to bring home all of its forces stationed in Warsaw Pact nations.

But Moscow views the Western alliance as terminally anti-Soviet, and wants a complete reappraisal of European security under the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Britain will not disarm its nuclear arsenal outside of a broader arms control treaty, and responded to Washington's decision to phase out from Europe its short-range Lance missiles by announcing joint plans with France to develop replacement air-to-ground nuclear projectiles.

Thatcher has asked Gorbachev to talk with the Baltic states on their demands for independence. Experts believe he has already realized the need to negotiate their secession, but is more concerned about reaching a face-saving formula.

The official said Thatcher would like a briefing by Gorbachev on how he will resuscitate the Soviet economy after decades of central planning. She could approve more joint ventures and training schemes, he said.

''In private, she has sticks and carrots to offer,'' Light said, explaining that Britain could offer access to a ''Knowhow Fund,'' now operating in Poland and Hungary and shortly, Czechoslovakia, to give training on free-market economics and political pluralism.

''They have their own continuing dialogue,'' she said. ''I don't think it will be a completely useless meeting. He needed (last week's Washington) summit to return to the center stage. And she needs the meeting to do the same thing.''

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) UPI - Prices were lower at the New York Stock Exchange's close Thursday in moderate trading, dragged down by computerized program selling, a weak bond market and profit taking.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 13.35 Wednesday, lost 14.32 to 2897.33, according to an unofficial tally.

Declines led advances 838-641 among the 2,000 issues crossing the NYSE tape at 4 p.m. EDT. Volume amounted to about 162,000,000 shares, compared with 164,020,000 traded Wednesday.

Prices were lower in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues.

Stocks opened higher in an attempt to rally after the declines of Tuesday and Wednesday. But profit taking after the recent string of record highs, which was responsible for the pullback of the last two sessions, again cut into the gains. The market rebounded to modestly higher levels before profit taking resurfaced once more and prices turned lower.

Computerized program selling, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock-index futures, exacerbated the decline. Weakness in the bond market after early gains also weighed on prices.

At midday, the long bond was down 1/8 point at 103 10/32, yielding 8.44 percent.

Analysts said they did not expect any major moves in the market Thursday, predicting it needs more time to consolidate gains from the rally that has taken the Dow industrials above 2900 and to 10 record highs in the last four weeks.

They did add that money managers remain under pressure to enter the market after its run to all-time highs, and those prospective buyers should cushion any decline.

On the trading floor as of 3 p.m. EDT, Philip Morris was the most active issue, up slightly.

Ohio Edison followed, slightly lower. Eastman Kodak was third, higher. Kodak rose sharply Wednesday but the company said its policy is not to comment on unusual market activity or rumors. Analysts said the stock has been a laggard in the market's rally and is now attracting investors.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T was up slightly, but IBM, Merck, General Motors, Coca-Cola, Boeing, United Technologies and USX were lower.

Elsewhere, NCH, which plunged Wednesday, extended its decline. Late Tuesday, the company reported earnings for the quarter ended in April below expectations. Some analysts said they felt the market overreacted to the news.

Heritage Media Class A led the Amex issues, lower.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Hispanics tend to marry within their own specific ethnic group, a Census Bureau study said Thursday, and when they do intermarry, they are more likely to marry a non-Hispanic than someone from another Hispanic group.

Overall, according to the study, 85 percent of married Hispanic men in were married to Hispanic wives and 82 percent of Hispanic wives were married to Hispanic husbands, the study said.

Among Hispanic subgroups, for example, it found that 86 percent of Mexican men married were married to Mexican women and 82 percent of Mexican women had a Mexican spouse.

Among those marrying outside their origin the study found some 16 percent of Mexican women were married to a non-Hispanic man and 12 percent of Mexican men were married to a non-Hispanic woman. But only 1 percent or less of Mexicanswere married to mates from other Hispanic groups.

Among Puerto Ricans, 72 percent of the men were married to another Puerto Rican, 16 percent to a non-Hispanic, 5 percent to a Central or South American, 3 percent to a Cuban, 2 percent to another an ''other Hispanic'' and 1 per cent to a Mexican.

The study, based on a March 1989 survey as part of the bureau's ongoing Current Population Survey, also found that the Hispanic population totaled 20.1 million in March 1989 and has grown at a rate about five times as fast as that of the non-Hispanic population sicne 1980.

Divided among Hispanic subgroups, the survey found there were 12.6 million Mexicans; 2.3 million Puerto Ricans; 1.1 million Cubans; 2.5 Central and South Americans and 1.6 million persons of ''other Hispanic origin.''

It said 82 percent of Hispanic households consisted of families, compared with 70 percent of non-Hispanic households.

But it also found that only 70 percent of Hispanic families were maintained by married couples, compared with about 80 percent of non-Hispanic families.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) UPI - The dollar, stuck in a narrow range with no indicators to guide it, was mixed against major foreign currencies Wednesday as investors concentrated on trading higher-yielding units.

In late New York trading, the dollar was changing hands at 1.6920 marks, up slightly from 1.6880 late Wednesday. The dollar was quoted at 152.50 yen, off a fraction from 152.60 the previous day.

Other dollar rates: 1.4440 Swiss francs, up from 1.4367; 5.703 French francs, up from 5.690; and 1,245 Italian lire, up from 1,242. The British pound edged up to $1.6890 against Wednesday's $1.6875.

With U.S. interest rates virtually at a standstill and key inflationary indicators not to be issued until next week, "the dollar is deadly dull right now," said Kevin Logan, chief economist in New York for Swiss Bank Corp.

Analysts said many investors aren't expected to change their positions ahead of two major indicators, the Producer Price Index and the Consumer Price Index, to be released next week.

Hence, most of the action Thursday was focused on cross-trades, or the buying and selling of monetary units other than the dollar, analysts said.

The Swiss franc was the most active unit in New York trading, moving lower against the deutsche mark. Analysts said Swiss initiatives designed to curb the country's high inflation were putting downward pressure on the Swiss franc, which had been one of the stronger currencies over the last month.

In Europe, the dollar closed mostly higher against the major European currencies in quiet trading.

The dollar was sought as a safe haven while Soviet president Mikhail Gorbachev faces political uncertainty at home, dealers said.

"Participants are waiting to see what happens in the Soviet domestic situation after Gorbachev returns," said Makoto Misawa, a chief dealer with Barclays Bank PLC.

In Frankfurt, the dollar closed higher at 1.6920 deutsche marks against 1.6885 at close Wednesday, and in Zurich it was up at 1.4365 Swiss francs from 1.4270.

The U.S. unit closed slightly higher in Paris, Brussels and Milan, at 5.7085 francs against 5.6835, at 34.77 Belgian francs against 34.73, and at 1,245.50 lire against Wednesday's close of 1,240.

In London, the pound was marginally higher as British Chancellor of the Exchequer, John Major, reaffirmed that Britain's full entry into the European Monetary System was not imminent, dealers said. The pound closed at $1.6880 compared to $1.6870 Tuesday.

Earlier in Tokyo, the U.S. dollar fell slightly Thursday to 152.55 yen against the previous day's close of 152.60 in a dull trading session.

Gold closed down in Zurich at $353.50 an ounce against $360 an ounce and also was down in London at $353.25 an ounce compared to $357.25 an ounce Wednesday.

At one point in London trading, gold fell to a four-year low with dealers attributing the steep decline to an oversupply at a time of waning demand.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $353.75 an ounce, off from $356.75 Wednesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled June spot contract gold at $354.60 an ounce, down from $357.40.

Silver was down in Zurich and London at $5 an ounce against $5.10 an ounce and at $5.01 an ounce against $5.08 an ounce Wednesday.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.025 an ounce, down from $5.045. Comex June spot silver ended at $5.013, off from Tuesday's close of $5.03.

WARSAW, POLAND (JUNE 7) UPI - Three bombs exploded Thursday in the Solidarity stronghold of Gdansk after a day of bitter wrangling among union leaders, one of whom accused Solidarity founder Lech Walesa of acting like a monarch.

Polish radio said no one was injured when the homemade pipe bombs exploded at a Gdansk railway station and at the offices of a former Communist newspaper, and the Polish LOT airlines.

"The bombs made of pipes filled with gas and iron sawings did not do serious damage and nobody was injured," a police spokesman in Gdansk said. It was not immediately known who was responsible for the explosions, which were being investigated.

In another development, Deputy Prime Minister Leszek Balcerowicz, assessing five months of economic austerity measures, said on television Thursday the new economic system promoting a market economy had changed Poland. He said Westerners were suprised that lines in front of the shops had disappeared and a variety of goods were available.

He said inflation, which reached 78 percent in January, dropped to three percent in May. He said competition among enterprises had become a driving force, and that more than 440,000 workers had been fired from inefficient plants.

In Warsaw, Solidarity ideologist Adam Michnik earlier Thursday charged that Walesa would rule Poland like "a monarch of a post-communist empire" if elected president.

Michnik, angered by Walesa's attempt to fire him as editor in chief of the Solidarity newspaper Gazeta Wyborcza, published two of Walesa's letters to him along with a reply lashing out at the union leader.

"Instead of being Solidarity leader, a mass movement of Polish democracy, you are slowly becoming an emperor who is sending instructions to his friends saying you are fired," Michnik said in his letter. "He will have a chance to win on condition he will be president of democratic Poland but not a monarch of a post-communist empire," Michnik said.

Earlier, Walesa fired Solidarity activist Henryk Wujec as the secretary of the Civic Commitee - a group of union activists and intellectuals led by Walesa - complaining he had lost control of the group. Michnik called Wujec's dismissal a "political mistake" and urged Walesa to reverse his decision.

The letters also revealed a conflict between the union leader and Solidarity Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki. Walesa is trying to have presidential elections held under the old Parliament this fall instead of waiting for election of a new Parliament next spring.

Backers of the prime minister want the current alignment of forces under communist President Wojciech Jaruzelski to last until elections are held under a new Parliament. But whether the first or second option will win, Walesa still wants to become president to crown his career, Michnik suggested.

Political analysts said Walesa has been campaigning for the presidential election this fall because former communists, who have a majority in the lower house, or the Sejm, would vote for him.

"Walesa is less dangerous to him (Mazowiecki) than the leaders of the new emerging anti-communist parties who will be taking part in the spring parliamentary elections," one analyst said.

"What is this conflict about," Michnik said in the commentary carried by Gazeta. "It is the new shape of the political scene, the attitude toward Mazowiecki's government, the persistent attempts at destabilization taken by supporters of Lech Walesa's election for president by the Parliament this autumn.

"We did not support this idea in our paper," Michnik said. "Personally, I think like Premier Mazowiecki does. The election of the new president should be held in a fully democratic way by a general ballot or by a democratically elected Parliament."

(JUNE 7) UPI - Black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela calls the lifting of a four-year-old state of emergency ''a victory for the South African people as a whole, both white and black.'' South African President Frederik de Klerk lifted emergency measures today. De Klerk told a joint session of Parliament that he will review early next year two of South Africa's apartheid laws covering land ownership and segregated residential areas.

President Bush wants to combine a Texas rodeo and barbecue with diplomacy. Staff members say it's likely that the prime ministers of Canada, Japan and Great Britain will join Bush at a rodeo he's sponsoring before an international economic summit next month in Houston. Bush invited all summit participants to the rodeo, barbecue and country-western concert on July 8th. Representatives of Italy's prime minister and French President Mitterrand say the leaders likely will NOT attend.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - New findings indicate it may prove easier than previously thought to develop an AIDS vaccine that is safe and effective, researchers said Thursday.

In a study that bolsters hopes for a practical AIDS vaccine, scientists reported a vaccine made from a genetically engineered version of an AIDS virus segment can kill AIDS-infected cells like a vaccine made from whole live virus. The new vaccine is considered safer because it is not capable of causing AIDS, a risk of vaccines made from whole live virus.

Although much more research is needed to determine whether the genetically engineered vaccine actually protects humans against developing AIDS, the findings are encouraging, researchers said.

''It no longer appears to be a question if we will get an AIDS vaccine, but rather how we can best design the experiments needed to move the field ahead. ... This gives us more of the clues we are looking for,'' said Dr. Wayne Koff, head of AIDS vaccine development at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

In the past, researchers thought only vaccines made of whole, live virus, like that used for smallpox, could trigger the body's immune cells to seek out and destroy virus-infected cells.

The danger with such vaccines is that even though the virus used for the vaccine has been artificially weakened, there is a risk it may cause the very disease it is intended to prevent. Consequently, it would make such a vaccine unsuitable for immunizing the general public against a deadly disease like acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Now, researchers have found an experimental AIDS vaccine, made of a genetically engineered version of a small piece of the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, can kill HIV-infected cells. Unlike vaccines made of whole virus, the ''subunit'' vaccine is not capable of causing AIDS.

''Although our findings show the vaccine's potential to halt the spread of HIV through the human immune system, the findings do not mean at this point that the vaccine could protect individuals from AIDS,'' said Dr. Robert Siliciano of Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in Baltimore and co-author of the study published in the journal Science.

In addition to killing HIV-infected cells, the ideal AIDS vaccine should trigger the immune system to produce antibodies that can kill virus in the blood stream. Preliminary results indicate the vaccine tested at Johns Hopkins appears to spur such a response.

The Johns Hopkins researchers took blood from eight healthy volunteers who had received four doses of the experimental vaccine, made by MicroGeneSys Inc. of West Haven, Conn., over 18 months. The blood of three of the eight volunteers contained immune cells, called killer T-cells, that tracked down and killed HIV-infected cells in the test tube.

''This is a very nice study showing how humans respond to a subunit vaccine ... it indicates that serious attention should be paid to subunits '' said Dr. Dani Bolognesi, an AIDS vaccine expert at Duke University School of Medicine in Durham, N.C.

But Bolognesi noted the vaccine, based on an HIV protein called gp0160, failed to protect chimpanzees against HIV infection in a study recently conducted by Genentech of South San Francisco, Calif. However, a subunit that employed a different HIV protein, called gp120, did protect the Genentech chimps, he said.

Another puzzle is why the immune response triggered in the Johns Hopkins subjects involved a different set of killer T-cells than those traditionally considered the main defense mechanism.

Those contradictions suggest an effective AIDS vaccine may have to consist of a ''cocktail'' of various HIV subunits, he said.

Like the Johns Hopkins team, Bolognesi emphasized the study did not show that the vaccine would actually protect healthy humans against AIDS infection.

''The testing process to make sure AIDS vaccines are safe and effective could take us into the next century,'' said Dr. Mary Lou Clements of Johns Hopkins.

In addition to the MicroGeneSys vaccine, the FDA has authorized nationwide human tests of two other potential AIDS vaccines. The first, made by Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. of New York, has been tested in healthy volunteers since 1987, while the second, a post-exposure vaccine developed by polio vaccine pioneer Jonas Salk, received approval in March for testing in HIV-infected people.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Natural gas appears to be less harmful than other fossil fuels when it comes to aggravating the greenhouse effect, a Swedish researcher reported Thursday.

In a study published in the journal Science, Henning Rodhe of Stockholm University calculated the greenhouse impact of carbon dioxide, methane and other gases emitted from the burning of coal, petroleum and natural gas.

''A rough analysis ... shows that natural gas is preferable to other fossil fuels in consideration of the greenhouse effect as long as its leakage can be limited to 3 to 6 percent,'' Rhode wrote.

Spillage, however, has been one of the major problems plaguing the natural gas industry.

The so-called greenhouse gases act like the glass windows of a greenhouse to trap heat in Earth's atmosphere and prevent it from escaping back into space. Many scientists think increased human production of greenhouse gases, from such sources as automobile exhausts and forest burning, will aggravate the greenhouse effect and cause global warming.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - New York financier Mario Gabelli has increased his stake in the Triad Systems Corp., a Livermore, Calif. manufacturer of computer products.

An amended Schedule 13 D filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission Thursday says GAMCO Investors Inc., an asset management company run by Gabelli, purchased 118,400 shares of Triad common stock between May 15 and June 5. Gabelli & Co., a Gabelli investment fund, bought an additional 50 shares.

The $401,163 used to buy the shares came from accounts and margin accounts held by Gabelli investment advisory clients, according to the SEC filing.

The purchase raises Gabelli's overall stake from 10.1 percent to 11.35 percent of Triad's 10.2 million shares outstanding.

Nicholas De Stefano, executive vice president of The Gabelli Group, said the shares were purchased ''in the ordinary course of business.''

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (JUNE 7) UPI - The end of a 4-year-old state of emergency in most of South Africa brought divided reaction from the leadership of the African National Congress Thursday but a decisive welcome from Western leaders.

The positive response from the White House and the British Foreign Office prompted Foreign Minister Roelof ''Pik'' Botha to suggest the West ought to review its sanctions against the country.

ANC Deputy President Nelson Mandela, speaking in Paris, expressed joy at President Frederik de Klerk's move, calling it ''a victory for all the South African people, white as well as black,'' while also regretting the measures would be remain in strife-torn Natal province.

But a somber ANC publicity secretary, Ahmed Kathrada, told a news conference the 71-year-old Mandela has been ''over-generous'' in his praise of the president's apartheid reforms.

Walter Sisulu, the leader of the ANC internal wing who was freed from 26 years imprisonment by De Klerk last year, described the president's announcement as one of his ''half measures'' and insisted the emergency also be withdrawn from Natal.

Mangosuthu Buthelezi, the moderate politician whose Natal-based Inkatha movement has battled ANC supporters in the province at a cost of 3,000 lives over the past three years, described as ''lamentably tragic'' the emergency's partial reimposition but welcomed the overall measure.

The ANC has demanded the emergency, imposed in 1986 to curb black anti-apartheid rioting and renewed annually since, be entirely lifted as one of its conditions to talks with the government over a post-apartheid constitution.

The Bush administration welcomed the move and expressed hope the action would open the way for reform in the minority white-controlled nation.

White House Press Secretary Alixe Glen said the ''senseless killing in Natal must end'' but noted De Klerk's government ''has moved to meet almost all the opposition's requirements to enter into negotiations.

''This is another significant step toward creating a climate conducive to negotiations that will lead to a democratic, non-racial South Africa. ... We are encouraged by the remarkable progress that has been made in recent months.''

In London, the British Foreign Office said in a statement Britain warmly welcomed the ''further positive steps to help clear the way to negotiations.''

U.N. Secretary General Perez de Cuellar also considered the announcement ''a positive development.''

Foreign Minister Botha said De Klerk had not moved on the emergency to appease foreign governments, but because the security situation warranted it.

Pretoria now expected the world to display ''good faith,'' Botha said, in reference to the tough trade sanctions sparked by the emergency that Western governments imposed on South Africa in 1986.

But the far right slammed De Klerk's announcement. The white-supremacist Afrikaner Resistance Movement ''deplored'' the measure and said it indicated the government was unable to resist ''communist demands.''

De Klerk made the announcement despite his ruling National Party only narrowly winning a key parliamentary by-election Wednesday against the right-wing Conservative Party.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Bombardier beetles ward off predators by emitting a defensive spray that works like the notorious V-1 ''buzz bombs'' of World War II, researchers reported Thursday.

Using detailed sound tests and photography, a research group led by Thomas Eisner of Cornell University of Ithaca, N.Y., studied a species of beetles known as Steptinus insignis from Kenya.

''The ejection system of the beetle shows basic similarity to the pulse jet propulsion mechanism of the German V-1 buzz bomb of World War II,'' the researchers concluded in the journal Science.

During the latter part of the war, Germany launched the self-propelled bombs from bases in France and Belgium, aiming them across the English Channel at targets in England.

The bombardier beetle is an iridescent blue and orange insect that grows to about three quarters of an inch. They eat small insects and are sought as prey by spiders, ants, centipedes, birds and rodents, said Eisner.

Like the bomb, the insects have two chambers where substances are kept separate until they are forced through a valve and combined with oxygen to a create chemical reaction.

In the beetles, chemicals called hydroquinones and hydrogen peroxide are kept separate from an enzyme until a valve opens, allowing them to mix and produce a very hot spray that pulsates 500 times per second.

The bombs, known for their buzzing sound during air raids over England, used air instead of the chemicals. The air was an oxygen source used to ignite the fuel in its reaction chamber.

While the bombs used the reaction for propulsion, the beetles use the 212 degree Fahrenheit irritant to fend off potential attackers, the researchers said.

The tip of the bombardier beetle's abdomen acts as a revolving turret, which allows the insect to aim and shoot a pulse of spray in any direction the researchers said.

The reservoir containing the two chemicals is made of a thin wall of muscle that compresses the fluid through a valve that keeps the juncture between the two compartments sealed.

The researchers speculated that the individual spray pulsations represent individual microexplosions, repeated one after the other as the beetle delivers its spray.

ANCHORAGE, AK (JUNE 7) UPI - The Interior Department unveiled plans Thursday to take over wildlife management from the state of Alaska on public lands because the state failed to guarantee a subsistence hunting preference for its rural, mostly native population.

The 82-page set of rules was designed to ''minimize disruption'' and avoid ''unnecessary chaos'' during a six-month transition period beginning July 1, according to the proposed rules being published Friday in the Federal Register.

If Alaska does not legislate subsistence rights, then the federal government will assume permanent control of wildlife next year.

Alaska subsistence hunters, mostly Eskimos, Indians and Aleuts, kill wildlife for food and clothing in a tradition that dates back many centuries before the first whites settled in Alaska.

The law granting hunting priority to subsistence hunters has become one of the most divisive and controversial issues in Alaska.

The federal takeover proposal was considered of such importance that the Alaska Public Radio Network arranged a live statewide broadcast of the Thursday afternoon Interior Department news conference to announce the plan.

Although the federal government owns two-thirds of Alaska, the state has managed wildlife and subsistence hunting on all Alaska lands, except for species protected by federal law or in parks where hunting is prohibited.

But the state was forced to give up management authority because it was not in compliance with the federal Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act, which gives a subsistence hunting preference to rural residents.

The state did have such a subsistence priority on the books, but under a challenge by urban sport hunters the state Supreme Court ruled that a rural preference was discriminatory and thus violated the state constitution.

Federal officials urged the state to write a new constitutional law restoring subsistence hunting priority rights or face a federal takeover to guarantee the hunting preference to rural Alaskans.

Natives throughout Alaska urged state lawmakers to amend the constitution to make subsistence preferences legal, and Gov. Steve Cowper joined the call for a constitutional amendment. Even Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan came to Alaska and lobbied lawmakers to comply with the federal law or face a federal takeover.

But the now-adjourned state Legislature was divided over the preference right and failed to act, triggering the move to transfer wildlife management from the state to a newly created federal subsistence board made up representatives from the Fish and Wildlife Service, the National Park Service, the Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management and the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

''Over time Alaskans are not going to be happy with the federal government having the final say over management of our fish and game,'' Cowper said in reaction to the proposed federal plans unveiled Thursday. ''You can be sure that in a short time, the federal presence will be more intrusive, and all Alaskans will end up the losers.''

The federal board must determine who qualifies for subsistence preferences. If there is a shortage of wildlife and limits are placed on hunting, then subsistence hunters get priority in any hunt.

The subsistence priority is based on rural residency, not race, but rural Alaska villages are predominantly native. Alaska's population is 16 percent native.

White, urban sport hunters long have challenged subsistence rights as discriminatory, calling for equal hunting rights for all Alaskans.

Natives have pointed out that they depend on subsistence hunting for survival in bush villages and that their entire lifestyle and tradition is based on subsistence.

Cowper predicted that the federal takeover will lead to conflicting standards of wildlife management, more lawsuits and confusion.

NEWARK, NJ (JUNE 7) UPI - New Jersey's first female state trooper has sued the state, claiming she was sexually harassed and discriminated against and was forced to spy on women recruits to determine if they were lesbians, lawyers said Thursday.

Gail Cornelius Just's charges came at a time when the state police were already under fire.

Five troopers went on trial this week in New Brunswick on charges they covered up assaults on motorists on the New Jersey Turnpike, and civil rights groups have claimed black drivers are targeted for traffic stops.

Just, a 15-year veteran from Sandyston Township, was joined in her claims by Nilda Rivera of Paterson, a legal secretary who said she resigned as a civilian employee because of sexual harassment.

The suit, naming the state, the Division of Criminal Justice, the state police and Police Lt. James P. Smith as defendants, was filed Wednesday in Sussex County Superior Court in Newton.

In court papers, Just said she was singled out in 1981 while she was assigned as an instructor at the State Police Academy in Sea Girt. The Internal Affairs Bureau allegedly ordered her ''to spy upon women recruits for the purpose of determining whether they manifested homosexual tendencies.''

Her orders included spying on the women ''through small openings in walls to see if they engaged in lesbian activity,'' Just said.

Just also claimed she was unfairly denied promotion to sergeant and was removed from leadership of a squad in the narcotics task force.

Just was the only woman in the state police when she was sworn in on Jan. 30, 1975. As of last September, there were 71 women out of a total force of 2,949.

Capt. Thomas Gallagher, a state police spokesman, refused to comment on Just's allegations against the department and Smith and said the division has not yet seen the complaint. He said an internal investigation was underway.

Homosexuals are not barred from becoming troopers, Gallagher said.

Just also said Smith, in 1981 a sergeant and supervisor with the State Police Narcotics North Division, assigned her to a special ''minority squad'' with five black men and a Hispanic. The other squad was composed of eight white men, she charged.

Smith constantly made crude references to her sex and made fun of her because of her menstrual cycle, Just said.

Rivera also attacked Smith, saying he ''referred to her in such discriminatory terms as 'spic' and 'burrito eater.''' Rivera said she was also the victim of sexual references.

Both women said complaints about Smith's behavior brought no response. Just said when she filed internal harassment charges Smith was cleared and then responded by giving her an unfavorable rating.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - The U.S. Labor Department has ruled that the 4,000 Chrysler Corp. employees at the company's St. Louis Plant No. 1 in Fenton, Mo., should be denied federal money for income support and retraining.

The workers are scheduled to lose their jobs when Chrysler closes the plant Nov. 9.

The Labor Department's Employment and Retraining Administration this week said the workers were ineligible for the federal help because the plant's closing was caused by domestic comptetition, not by imports.

But House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and other Missouri legislators blasted the government's decision. They called on U.S. Secretary of Labor Elizabeth Dole to reverse it.

Gephardt said federal labor officials had interpreted the situation at the plant narrowly, and that domestic competition was part but not all of the reason for the closing.

Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., also criticized the decision, saying a large number of jobs at the plant are being moved to a plant in Mexico.

Missouri's congressional delegation sent a letter to Dole criticizing the Labor Department's ruling.

The letter sent Tuesday was signed by Gephardt, Clay, Sen. Christopher Bond and Reps. Jack Buechner, Bill Emerson, Harold Volkmer and Ike Skelton.

The federal money is used to supplement workers' pay from Chrysler as part of their union contract and to retrain workers. Workers who have worked less than 10 years generally get little or no money when they are laid off.

Laid-off auto workers in Missouri now get 26 weeks of unemployment insurance the first year, about $155 weekly.

Chrysler officials said in February they planned to close the plant, blaming slow sales of the models produced there - the Dodge Daytona and the Chrysler LeBaron.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - The Defense Department has shortened the length of U.S. military tours of duty in the Philippines as part of a series of measures it has taken to protect Americans there, the Pentagon said Thursday.

The latest killing of an American serviceman occurred Saturday night near Subic Bay Naval Station, but American officials said it was a criminal rather than political act.

However, three U.S. servicemen were killed last month, bringing to 14 the number of Americans killed in politically motivated attacks in the past three years.

The communist New People's Army claimed responsibility for two of the three servicemen killed last month and said it would continue killing Americans unless Washington dismantles its six military facilities in the Philippines.

The leases on the bases expire next year and the United States is negotiating with the government of Corazon Aquino to determine their fate.

In the latest response to the violence, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said Thursday the Defense Department shortened the length of tours of duty of American servicemen and servicewomen from 24 months to 18 months for those there alone, and to 24 months from 36 months for those who have family members with them.

Following the slayings last month, U.S. officials restricted travel among the 14,745 American troops, the 1,355 civilian Defense Department employees, and the total 20,000 dependents in the Philippines and provided ''imminent danger pay'' to the military.

The officials also announced last week it would allow the voluntary return of military dependents to the United States before completion of the tour of duty of the soldiers. Only eight families totaling 23 people have accepted so far.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Texas investor T. Boone Pickens was a major shareholder in the Polaroid Corp. in 1989, according to a confidential document that was declassified and released Wednesday by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

A document filed by Mesa L.P., where Pickens serves as a general partner, shows that as of March 1989, the Partnership held 861,600 shares of Polaroid common stock, which had a fair market value of $31 million.

Although Pickens' stake represented less than two percent of Polaroid's outstanding shares, he ranked as one of the company's largest institutional shareholders, outpacing heavy investors such as Mellon Bank and the Bankers Trust of New York.

Andrew Littlefair, assistant to the general partner at Mesa, indicated that the company no longer holds Polaroid stock. He said the shares were not listed on a Form 13F filed for the first quarter of 1990.

A spokesman for First Chicago Trust Co. of New York, Polaroid's transfer agent, confirmed that Mesa no longer holds an account with Polaroid, which is based in Cambridge, Mass.

Form 13F is a quarterly report of equity holdings that must be filed at the SEC by institutional investment managers controlling assets of $100 million or more.

Investment companies that serve as personal investment vehicles for individuals may request that the filing remain confidential for one year.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 7) UPI - Despite intense day-long negotiations, acting Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir was still waiting Thursday for the backing of an ultra-Orthodox party he needed to form a narrow right-wing coalition government.

However, senior members of Shamir's right-wing Likud Party were confident the ultro-Orthodox Shas party would ultimately support Shamir, whose mandate to form a new government expires Friday.

Shamir was scheduled to meet with President Chaim Herzog Friday morning to inform him if a majority in the 120-member Israeli Parliament, the Knesset was prepared to support a new government.

''With God's help at 10 o'clock Prime Minister Shamir is to tell the president that he formed a government if a positive answer has been received from Shas,'' said Minister Without Portfolio David Magen. ''Personally, I am optimistic.''

If Shas backs the proposed coalition, Shamir is expected to present the new government to the Knesset for a vote of confidence Monday or Tuesday.

Thursday evening, Shamir met with Cabinet ministers from Likud to draw up guidelines for the coalition, which, if approved, would be Israel's most right-wing government ever.

Former Trade and Industry Minister Ariel Sharon was confident the party's Central Committee would approve the proposed coalition when it meets on Sunday and that 66 Knesset members would support it.

''Mr. Shamir can form a government that will give an answer to the central problems of Israel,'' Sharon said.

Throughout the day, Shamir and senior Likud members engaged in intense negotiations with six right-wing and religious parties. The completion of the talks were held up by differences over the allocation of top government posts and electoral reform.

With Likud's 40 seats and the full support of six right-wing and religious parties, including Shas, Shamir was expected to have control of 60 seats.

Shas, which has six Knesset members, objected to Likud allowing the other parties to vote as they wished on electoral reform issues.

Shas Knesset membert Raphael Pinchas said the ultra-Orthodox party would support the Likud-led coalition even if ultimately it did not join it.

While editorials in the Israeli press in recent days indicated Shamir still sought a coalition with the center-left Labor Party, party leaders ruled out the possibility.

As the coalition talks continued, about 40 demonstrators calling for electoral reform held a noisy demonstration outside the prime minister's residence. Police arrested several protesters.

BRIDGEPORT, CT (JUNE 7) UPI - Two pups born to rare red wolves at Beardsley Zoo are doing well and have a good chance of increasing the world's population of the endangered species to a total of 144, officials said Thursday.

Thursday marked the fourth week since the birth of the two female pups, a crucial period in the weaning of the offspring of the predator that once roamed the southern United States by the thousands.

''If anything negative happens it would have occurred by now, but they're doing well, it looks like they'll be viable,'' said zoo Director Gregg Dancho.

The public has yet to see the pups, which are protected by their cautious mother ''who constantly monitors their every move inside the den,'' said Dancho.

''She's a good mother, and it looks like they'll make it,'' he said.

The zoo is involved in the Species Survival Plan, a nationwide effort to restore the highly endangered animals by careful and selective breeding in zoos.

Beardsley received its unnamed pair of red wolves, which mate for life, last fall under the program supervised by the American Association of Zoological Parks.

Since last winter, the world's known population of the red wolf stood at 114 but it since has grown to 144, including those in the Beardsley Zoo, said Dancho.

The red wolf is a smaller more solitary animal than the timber wolf and is now found only in zoos and in selective refuges.

Once found roaming free between Texas and North Carolina, the red wolf became the victim of destruction by farmers and hunters.

''As wolves, they unfairly became victims of the evil connotation associated with wolves, when in fact, they are a benign, social animal beneficial to man and nature,'' said Dancho.

Museums draped paintings and sculptures in black Thursday in a nationwide protest aimed at securing continued federal funding for the arts in the face of a conservative offensive against controversial artworks.

At the Metropolitan Museum in New York, leading cultural figures rallied to pay tribute to the beleaguered National Endowment for the Arts.

Led by Met Director Philippe de Montebello, they toured the museum, where artworks acquired with help of the NEA were covered by black cloth - including Gilbert Stuart's portrait of George Washington.

In Detroit, the Institute of Arts draped Rodin's ''The Thinker'' in black.

In Richmond, the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts closed two galleries by stringing yellow warning tape across their entrances. ''We did plan it because they're about to vote on this in Congress,'' museum spokeswoman Suzanne Hall said.

''What we're trying to do is make our constituents aware that funding for the arts is in serious jeopardy and get them to contact their congressional representative,'' Hall said.

The museum, in a one-day protest organized by the American Association of Museum Directors, darkened its Indian and French galleries.

The protest, in what demonstrators called Arts Day USA, is part of the debate over government funding of controversial artworks.

The museums want continued congressional support as pressure mounted from conservatives to restrict or eliminate the endowment over its funding of art some view as obscene.

NEA Chairman John Frohnmayer told a Senate appropriations panel Wednesday that the debate over government funding of controversial artworks ''has been debilitating my agency.''

''I think it extremely important that the level of this debate be cooled and that a rational solution to it be found,'' he said.

The controversy stems largely from the endowment's involvement of a Robert Mapplethorpe photography exhibit that included homoerotic subjects, and a second exhibit that showed an Andres Serrano photograph of a crucifix submerged in a bottle of urine.

''Does this gallery look threatening to you?'' Hall asked outside the Richmond gallery of French paintings and sculptures, where bright yellow tape criss-crossed the doorway. Each strip of tape bore the adminition in black letters, ''CAUTION DO NOT ENTER.''

In St. Paul, Minn., the Walker Art Center erected road blocks with flashing warning signs and surrounded certain objects with warning tape.

In Toledo, Ohio, the Museum of Art strung yellow tape over all NEA purchases, conservation projects and catalogues.

In Kansas City, Mo., the Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art provided postcards addressed to members of Congress at the entrance to the exhibition ''Impressionism: Selections from Five American Museums.''

Officials at the Albright-Knox Art Gallery in Buffalo, N.Y., placed black shrouds over five paintings and one sculpture.

Albright-Knox curator Michael Auping said the works that were covered had all been restored with conservation funds awarded by the NEA.

''We're simply trying to show a fraction of the good they've done for us '' Auping said.

He said about 100 works owned by the gallery have been restored with federal funding. Auping said the $100,000 to $120,000 the gallery receives each year for the NEA is also used to help mount exhibitions, publish catalogs and present musical programs.

The demonstrations followed a movement in Congress, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to curtail the activities of the 25-year-old NEA, in part because it helped underwrite exhibits by controversial artists such as Mapplethorpe.

The demonstrations were timed to coincide with hearings in Washington to reauthorize the NEA, which has an annual budget of about $160 million.

''We are asking all of our visitors to consider seriously the implications of this threatened censorship,'' said Ann Edwards, a spokeswoman for the Cleveland Museum of Art.

The museum covered a colorful work by photorealistic painter Don Eddy, ''New Shoes for H,'' and placed a small black-and-white photo of the painting next to it. A sign urged visitors to write or telephone their congressional representatives to express support for the endowment.

At the Contemporary Arts Center in Cincinnati, where an exhibit of Mapplethorpe photographs closed May 26, the front entrance sign was draped.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - The World Bank Thursday announced a $190 million loan to help Indonesia expand water and sewerage services in Jakarta and surrounding urban areas.

The project includes the construction of 3,000 public hydrants in poor neighborhoods, improvements in the waste-water disposal and drainage systems, and strengthening of the planning, management, staffing and financial viability of the area's water supply and sewerage institutions.

The multilateral organization noted that since 1960 the population of Greater Jakarta has more than doubled to about 15 million and is expected to increase to more than 26 million by the year 2005.

WORCESTER, MA (JUNE 7) UPI - The French conglomerate planning a $1.9 billion takeover of high-tech abrasives maker Norton Co. said Thursday that the proposed deal will be investigated for U.S. national security ramifications.

Norton's stock fell $1.50 a share to $87.875 in New York Stock Exchange trading on the news. Previously, Norton stock had been trading close to the $90-a-share bid by Compagnie de Saint-Gobain.

A spokesman for Saint-Gobain, Amory Hall, said an investigation by the federal government's inter-agency Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States, which reports to the president, is ''probably not the best news. But it just means that everyone will have to wait a little bit longer'' for the deal to close.

Meanwhile, Saint-Gobain extended its tender offer, which was scheduled to expire Friday, until June 27 because the company hopes the investigation will be complete by then, Hall said.

He said a similar investigation of BTR PLC, the British company that waged a hostile takeover battle for Norton until it was outbid by Saint-Gobain, is scheduled to be complete by that date.

Saint-Gobain said about 8.7 million shares or 41.42 percent of Norton's outstanding shares had been tendered to its offer by Wednesday.

A Senate anti-crime bill appears doomed after senators failed for a second time today to limit debate on the measure. Democratic leader George Mitchell said before the vote that it was the Senate's last chance to keep the bill alive. The vote is a victory for opponents of an assault weapon ban that's included in the bill.

PROVIDENCE, RI (JUNE 7) UPI - A paroled Massachusetts rapist who stabbed two Rhode Island children to death with a screwdriver was sentenced Thursday to life in prison without parole, the stiffest penalty allowed by state law.

Alvin Smith, 29, of Providence, was convicted in April of killing Kelly Pena Urena, 4, and her brother Pershi, 8, after breaking into their mother's apartment on the morning of Sept. 3, 1988. Smith was a handyman in the apartment building the family lived in.

''The killing in this manner of two children ... speaks for itself,'' Superior Court Judge Americo Campanella said.

''Medical testimony indicates that the children died a horrible, painful, violent death. Both children were stomped upon by the defendant. Kelly Urena was stabbed 20 times and her brother Pershi was stabbed 17 times. In some of these wounds, the screwdriver had been driven in to the fullest extent,'' the judge said.

In sentencing Smith, Campanella invoked a 1984 state law that allows for a life sentence without parole if a jury finds that a crime involved torture or aggravated assault. Only four others have received the sentence since the law was passed.

The judge said Smith ''ended what could have been full and happy lives for two children and their family.''

''I see nothing in the defendant's character that would lead me to believe that he would not be a threat if he were permitted to go out into society '' Campanella said.

Smith's lawyer, Mark Smith, argued that the defendant should be eligible for parole. ''Even if he qualifies for parole, the parole board doesn't have to release him,'' he said.

Smith did not apologize for his crimes but did ask Campanella for leniency. ''Give me a chance for rehabilitation. Without rehabilitation, only more violence is possible,'' Smith said.

Campanella was not swayed. He noted that Smith was on parole for raping two girls, ages 12 and 14, when he killed the Urena children.

''For the vicious rape crimes, Smith was sentenced in 1983 to 20 years in prison and somehow, by whatever system, this defendant was paroled in 1986 '' the judge said.

''We are required to protect the public from the propensities of certain individuals. I am satisfied that the propensity of the defendant is to stay in trouble and be a threat to society,'' he said.

Police initially charged the mother of the two children, Angela Urena, with the killings.

Investigators said the woman incriminated herself, but they dropped charges after realizing she was mentally unstable. A psychiatrist diagnosed her as a paranoid schizophrenic.

Police arrested Smith in New Haven, Conn., about one month after the killings. He was wearing sneakers that matched the bloody footprints found at the Urena apartment.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (JUNE 7) UPI - West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Thursday a reunified Germany will help extend the vision of the Marshall Plan to Eastern Europe and become a cornerstone of an emerging ''United States of Europe.''

This federation will form the ''core of a peaceful order in which the nations of the Old Continent finally overcome former rivalry, chauvinist thinking and mutual prejudice,'' Kohl said.

Kohl made his remarks at the 339th commencement of Harvard University, where 43 years earlier Secretary of State George Marshall presented his plan for rebuilding Europe after the devastation of World War II.

Citing the vision of the Marshall Plan, Kohl said Europe and America must work to ''overcome the economic and ecological devastation and the moral crisis in Eastern Europe.''

''We must firmly anchor democracy in a part of the world where dictatorship prevailed for decades, for over 57 years in the case of my fellow countrymen in the GDR (German Democratic Republic),'' Kohl said through an interpreter.

Kohl, who has headed the West German government since 1982, called the reunification of Germany ''a victory of the right to self-determination.''

''All in all, German unity will be a gain in human, political and economic terms, not only for us Germans but also for our neighbors and friends,'' he said.

He also sought to allay fears that a unified Germany would resume the aggressive policies that triggered World Wars I and II, saying Germans ''do not want to couple the unity of our fatherland with the displacement of existing borders.''

Kohl called the border between Germany and Poland ''inviolable'' and said the emerging nation's relationship with the Poles should become like that West Germany now has with France - old enemies turned allies.

West Germany and France are both in the 12-member European Economic Community, which has agreed to eliminate all remaining trade barriers by 1993.

''Today we are about to give effect to the grand vision which George Marshall, too, had in his time - at long last the people and nations in Eastern Europe are to be able to live as we in Western Europe have been able to do for decades,'' he said.

Kohl said Europe needs a ''continued partnership'' with the United States.

''If Europe and America combine their intellectual and material resources for this task (reconstruction), they will invest in their common future,'' he said.

''It is more important than ever for the Americans and Europeans to achieve the greatest convergence possible on important issues of foreign policy.''

Quoting NATO's motto that ''vigilance is the price of our common freedom '' Kohl said, ''The Atlantic Alliance will remain in existence, though in a changed form and with an enlarged agenda.''

Kohl said the sweeping reforms in Europe will change the appearance of the ''Old Continent,'' but stressed that ''Europe will remain America's closest partner.''

He said by the end of this century ''the foundation stone will have been laid for a United States of Europe.''

This new alliance ''must therefore be open to countries like Austria, Sweden Norway and Finland. It must not exclude the Poles, Czechs and Slovaks or Hungarians, or any other Europeans who want to join this federation,'' he said.

''The unification of Germany will in addition impart a strong impetus to the process of European integration.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - The World Bank Thursday announced a $175 million loan to help Bangladesh reform its financial sector to enable banks to operate more efficiently and to improve allocation of financial resources in the economy.

The $175 million loan will be provided by the International Development Association, the World Bank's affiliate that provides credit to the poorest countries.

The multilateral organization said that Bangladesh's reforms will strengthen the financial sector through changes in interest-rate and monetary policies, improvements in the way banks provide loans to investors, and an increase in the central bank's capacity for supervising and regulating banks.

The IDA credit is for 40 years, including 10 years of grace, and carries no interest.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Manuel Johnson, the Federal Reserve Board vice chairman who Thursday announced his resignation, said he will co-chair a group of intellectuals, businessmen and former policy makers in support of economic policy coordination between the industrial democracies.

Johnson told reporters that he will help establish The G7 Council, a non-profit commission to examine and bolster the economic coordination process among the nation members of the Group of Seven industrial democracies.

The G-7 is formed by the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy.

The financial community should borrow a leaf from the foreign policy community and set up a network of ''statecraft and expertise'' behind international economic coordination, Johnson said.

Among the issues the council will analyze are the reunification of Germany the lack of adequate global savings at a time of great global demand for investment capital, and the ''structural (economic) imbalances'' between the industrial powers.

The group will try to facilitate international economic coordination, cooperate with the G-7 and make suggestions, and ''avoid polarization'' in the discussion on global financial and trade issues, Johnson said.

The chiefs of state and chiefs of government of the G-7 meet once a year, and the finance ministers and central bank governors several times a year, to discuss economic policy coordination to stabilize global markets, as well as a broad range of other economic issues.

The next G-7 summit will take place early July in Houston.

BUCHANAN, LIBERIA (JUNE 7) UPI - Embattled President Samuel Doe called on the Bush administration Thursday to help him fend off advancing rebels who he said are backed by Libya, and the United States urged all Americans to immediately leave the war-torn country.

The government also claimed responsiblity Thursday for the slaying of one of rebel leader Charles Taylor's top military aides, saying he was executed for torturing and killing civilians.

Rebel forces loyal to Taylor, a former government official who lived in the United States for almost a decade, had advanced to within 35 miles of Monrovia and claimed Wednesday, at their base in the port city of Buchanan to have captured Robertsfield International Airport.

Doe, who has responded to the threat by quickly promising free elections next year, asked Bush to help him thwart the rebels, who he said were backed by Libya, according to the official Liberian Public Affairs office in Washington.

A taped telephone message at the office said the election would be monitored by international observers to ensure it was free and fair, but that Taylor would not be allowed to participate because of his "ability to bypass the constitution."

Doe, a former master sergeant in the Liberian army, seized power in a coup in 1980 and has been charged with many human rights violations. The president is believed to have flown to his hometown in eastern Liberia on Saturday. The rebels say his mansion is surrounded by 1,000 of his remaining troops. A U.S. official in Monrovia said government troops were deserting by the score.

The rebels took Buchanan, 80 miles south of Monrovia and Liberia's second-largest port, after two weeks of heavy fighting. Taylor's rebels, estimated at about 4,000 men, accuse Doe's government of corruption, brutality, and ruining the economy of the West African nation.

The recording at the Liberian Public Affairs office said Taylor advisor Elmer Johnson, 33, a former U.S. Army sergeant who took part in the U.S. invasion of Grenada in 1983, was killed by the government in "an operation" because he had killed civilians.

Johnson, who was in a convoy of 30 rebels ambushed by government troops Sunday two miles outside Buchanan, had been shot execution-style in the head. Rebel forces displayed his body to journalists Wednesday.

In Washington, the State Department issued a call for the estimated 3,300 Americans still in Liberia to leave the West African nation immediately before the civil war worsens.

Although the evacuation plan involving four U.S. Navy ships off the Liberian coast has not been activated, the State Department has arranged for three commercial charter flights this weekend to take Americans to safety in the neighboring country of the Ivory Coast.

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said that the U.S. Embassy staff continued to have contacts with both the insurgents, who are moving toward Monrovia, and with Doe's government, urging an end to the fighting. Boucher said Doe had not asked the United States for transportation to another country, nor had he asked permission to enter the United States.

The rebels effectively controlled part of the vast Bridgestone/Firestone rubber plantation for a third day, the largest such facility in the world, including the region around the rubber factory and offices. Officials at the company's headquarters in Akron, Ohio, said Wednesday they were not worried about the safety of company workers.

But the plant manager told Cable News Network Thursday that he was concerned for the safety of himself and his workers if government troops tried to oust the rebels, and he complained that the United States had not moved to protect them.

"They seem to have forgotten about us altogether," said the senior manager who was not identified. "If we get in a particularly bad situation, we'll just have to hightail it and go into the jungle."

Company officials said the rebels told company officials in Liberia that they had no intention of harming the facility or the plantation's approximately 100,000 employees and dependents.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - The government, in a response to stormy weather that has mired spring planting in the central states, announced a plan Thursday that would allow farmers to avoid a loss in their crop acreage bases.

At the start of this week, U.S. soybean planting was 25 points behind normal and corn planting was 9 points behind normal. Missouri was in the worst spot, more than 40 points behind on corn and soybeans.

Corn planting usually is 97 percent complete by early June and soybean planting 73 percent complete.

''We have farmers across the country who cannot put in crops because of severe weather and flooding,'' said Sen. Kit Bond, R-Mo. ''We cannot further penalize farmers already facing reduced yields for something completely beyond their control.''

Under the plan announced by the Agriculture Department, farmers can withdraw from the 1990 farm program at no cost and will be able to receive so-called prevented planting credit for the crop.

''Today's action provides producers who withdraw from their contracts with the option of receiving enough prevented planting credit to protect their entire crop acreage base,'' said department official John Stevenson.

Acreage bases are determined on the basis of how much land is planted to a crop in preceding years. Failure to plant a crop leads to a reduction in a farmer's acreage base for a specific crop and, in turn, means fewer acres eligible for crop support payments.

Farmers would be allowed to plant a second crop on prevented planting acreage.

ORLANDO, FL (JUNE 7) UPI - Universal Studios Florida, a $600 million studio-theme park, made its debut Thursday but while dozens of Hollywood stars chatted with park executives, patrons fumed about long lines and unopened rides.

''It's miserable,'' said Janie Ward, 34, of Williamson, Ga., who stood in line at the Ghostbuster ''Spooktacular'' attraction with her husband and seven children. ''We've been waiting in line here an hour and a half.''

''If the rest of them are like this, we're going to leave. We've spent $300 this morning to stand in line,'' said her husband, Mike Ward, 36.

More than four dozen celebrities, including Bill Cosby, James Stewart and Michael J. Fox, and a handful of political heavyweights, including Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., and Gov. Bob Martinez, took part in the park's ribbon-cutting ceremony.

''The magic of Hollywood lives, indeed, in Orlando today, and it will for many years,'' said actress Janet Leigh.

''It's the kind of magic I think God would have created if he'd had the funding,'' said Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America.

The 444-acre park had been open at half price to paying guests for more than two weeks while workers raced to get its 13 attractions opened, but on Thursday morning, despite assurances from park executives, many were still not operating, and guests who had paid $30 apiece were unhappy.

''That's the bad thing. The rides don't open until noon, and you have to clear out by 5 p.m.,'' said Jim Greer, 36, a banker from Euless, Texas. ''There have been a lot of people who have come by yelling, 'Nothing's open. Go home.'''

A park spokesman said guests who requested it would be given a refund or a ticket for a return trip on another day.

Park officials did manage to open at midday two of their most spectacular rides - Earthquake, a simulated earthquake measuring 8.3 on the Richter scale, and Kongfrontation, in which King Kong swats at tourist-loaded gondolas.

However, a third major attraction, Jaws, which features a mechanical shark chomping down on a tourist-loaded boat, remained closed.

The park has six giant sound stages, making it the world's biggest studio outside of Hollywood.

''With dozens of street locations, we can make it look like any place, any time,'' said moviemaker Steven Spielberg, the park's creative consultant.

''It's been great fun because we've been able to figure out how to let people ride the movies,'' said Spielberg.

The park's back lot is studded with re-created Hollywood landmarks: the Brown Derby, Schwab's Pharmacy, Pantages Theater, plus a re-created Hollywood Walk of Fame. There are also street facades from New York, San Francisco and a New England fishing village.

The park, expected to draw an estimated 5 million to 6 million guests in its first year, is 12 miles from Disney-MGM Studios, also a working studio and theme park that opened a year ago. Universal officials previously accused Disney of stealing its blueprints.

''We're not going to talk about that today,'' said Jay Stein, president of MCA Recreation Services Group. ''As far as we're concerned Mr. Eisner (Disney Chairman Michael Eisner) was invited to be here today. We wish he would come see our park, and we wish him the best of luck.''

At a news conference, officials with the owners of Universal, MCA Inc. and Rank Organisation, a British entertainment company, said they expected to make a decision in the next few months on whether they would build their European theme park in Rainham, England, or Paris.

They also promised an announcement within the year on the opening of a second gated theme park adjacent to the just-opened Orlando park.

Universal Studios opened the country's first studio theme park in Hollywood in 1964.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) UPI - Stocks closed lower in moderate trading Thursday, pressured by profit taking after the market's surge to record highs and by computerized program selling.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 13.35 Wednesday, slipped below the 2900 level, easing 14.32 to close at 2897.33.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.95 to 198.20 and the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 1.81 to close at 363.15. The price of an average share fell 17 cents.

Declines led advances 841-646 among the 2,007 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 160,420,000 shares, compared with 164,020,000 shares traded Wednesday.

Prices opened higher and tried to rally after falling Tuesday and Wednesday. But profit taking after the record highs of the past few weeks cut short the bid for a rally. The market rebounded to modestly higher levels before profit taking resurfaced and prices turned lower. Computerized program selling, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock-index futures, exacerbated the decline.

"We had some profit taking and the programs were in and out all day, they yanked us around," said Jim Andrews, first vice president in charge of institutional trading at Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. in Philadelphia.

But cushioning the decline, Andrews said, was bargain-hunting after the profit taking. "Basically we just took a few steps back before going forward again," he said. "We just ran the market up a little too fast. Enthusiasm built up to such a degree that everybody was talking 3000 (in the Dow industrials) immediately, so what we're doing now is pulling back somewhat.

"Keep in mind, though, that the end of the second quarter is coming and money on the sidelines is going to start coming into the market for window dressing purposes," he said.

Institutional money managers typically seek to invest at the end of the quarter, when they are judged on their performance, not wishing to find themselves with a lot of cash uninvested. "Going down 14 points on volume of 162 million shares really doesn't cause me great concern," Andrews said.

On the trading floor, Genentech was the most active issue, down one to 26 1/4. Philip Morris followed, unchanged at 44 7/8. Ohio Edison was third, down 1/8 to 20 1/2.

Eastman Kodak was also active, up 5/8 to 42 1/2. Kodak said Wednesday its policy is not to comment on unusual market activity, but analysts said the stock has been a laggard in the market's rally and is now attracting investors.

Norton was also heavily traded, down 1 1/2 to 87 7/8. The French conglomerate planning a $1.9 billion takeover of the abrasives maker said the proposed deal would be investigated for U.S. national security ramifications.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T rose 1/4 to 42 7/8 while IBM was unchanged at 120 5/8. Merck fell 1 1/4 to 81 1/2, General Motors fell 1/2 to 49 3/8, Boeing lost 1 1/8 to 83 7/8, United Technologies fell 3/4 to 59 1/4 and USX fell 1/2 to 33 1/2.

A majority of shareholders voted against investor Carl Icahn's bid to spin off at least 80 percent of the USX steel business.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 193,347,590 shares, compared with 198,158,240 shares traded Wednesday.

Prices closed lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index fell 0.62 to close at 363.57. The price of an average share lost two cents. Declines led advances 291-266 among the 827 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 13,674,300 shares, vs. 16,575,000 traded Wednesday. Wang Labs Class B led the Amex issues, off 1/8 to 4 3/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 0.87 to close at 464.09.

PARIS (JUNE 7) UPI - Black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela expressed joy Thursday that South Africa has ended the state of emergency, but he said lifting sanctions before apartheid is dismantled would be ''a stab in the back'' to the black majority.

Ending the emergency decree, imposed on June 12, 1986, to curb an uprising in the country's black townships, was one of the principal conditions set by Mandela's African National Congress before agreeing to participate in power-sharing negotiations with the minority white rulers.

Mandela told a news conference in Paris at the end of an emotional two-day visit to France that he considered the end of the emergency as a victory for all South Africans, white and black.

But he insisted that ending the sanctions ''would be a very grave mistake that would be regarded by the people of South Africa as a stab in the back.''

The imposition of a state of emergency led to a severe tightening of economic sanctions against Pretoria in 1986 by the European Community, Canada and the United States.

Asked if South African President Frederik de Klerk should be rewarded for lifting the state of emergency Mandela replied: ''There is no reason to reward anybody. People should be rewarded because they have done something fundamental to end apartheid in the country. De Klerk has done nothing of the sort.''

Mandela, who will visit 14 countries on a six-week tour of Europe, Africa, and the United States, was received in Paris with more pomp and circumstance than is reserved for most heads of state.

He was welcomed to France Wednesday night by President Francois Mitterrand in a dramatic ceremony on the Liberty and Human Rights Esplanade across the River Seine from the Eiffel Tower, with the two men and their wives walking to meet each other in the center of the vast, floodlit square.

Mandela said Mitterrand had given him ''an unequivocal statement that the French government supports sanctions until fundamental and irreversible changes take place in the policies of the South African government.''

In public, Mitterrand has said only that a decision on sanctions will be made at the next summit of the European Community in Dublin at the end of June.

Most EC members, with the notable exception of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who has unilaterally lifted some sanctions against Pretoria, support maintaining economic pressure on the South African government.

Mandela, who spent 27 years in jail before being freed in February, sharply criticized efforts by de Klerk to guarantee special protection to the white minority.

''Europe is founded on a democratic order, and what we find at the center of that order is the principle of one man, one vote,'' Mandela told reporters after meeting with former Prime Minister Jacques Chirac.

''Nowhere in Europe do we find the idea that the rights of a particular minority must be protected, which is what de Klerk is currently insisting '' Mandela said.

''Our democracy should be based on the principle that the law does not give special protection to anyone. We have a human rights charter that will guarantee the rights of every South African and that should be enough.''

Mandela's visit has provided Mitterrand with the opportunity to show he strongly supports equal rights at a time of increasing racial tension in France.

''You are the man of freedom, the man of fraternity in the face of the fractricide of racism, a symbol for the entire world,'' Mitterrand told the black leader at Wednesday's nationally televised ceremony on the Liberty and Human Rights Esplanade.

''We admire the man who we saw leave his prison with his face calm and wise without vengeance,'' Mitterrand said. ''Today it is the prisoner who guides his gaolers.''

Mitterrand invited Mandela to a luncheon at the Presidential Elysee Palace Thursday, and after having met with French leaders ranging from Communist Party Chief Georges Marchais to top businessmen, he and his wife Winnie were the guests of honor at a dinner offered by Prime Minister Michel Rocard.

LANCASTER, CA (JUNE 7) UPI - A woman who admitted shooting to death a construction worker because she blamed him for her teenage daughter's drug use was convicted Thursday of first-degree murder.

Belita Fox, 41, of Lancaster was also found guilty of using a firearm in the slaying. She was convicted by a Superior Court jury that deliberated over parts of three days.

Fox, who had been free on $100,000 bail, was ordered taken into custody and held without bail by Superior Court Judge Margaret Grignon.

Sentencing was scheduled for June 28. Fox faces a maximum sentence of 27 years to life in prison.

Fox shot and killed Kevin Furman, 23, while he slept in his bed Aug. 30.

The woman, while admitting at her trial that she shot Furman, blamed him for her daughter's drug use.

She testified that by killing Furman, she felt she was protecting her daughter, Cheryl, 17, even though the girl was not at Furman's residence the night of the shooting.

Other witnesses testified that the girl had used drugs on several occasions at Furman's house.

Fox testified that the shooting culminated a year of ''hell'' in which her daughter ran away from home frequently and resisted her mother's efforts to prevent her from using methamphetamines and marijuana.

''You don't know what I went through with that child,'' a tearful Fox told Deputy District Attorney Robert Foltz during cross-examination. ''You don't know anything. I went there to protect my daughter and, if necessary myself.''

Fox said her daughter had become ill prior to the shooting, and she blamed the illness on the teenager's drug use.

''I knew she would go back'' to Furman's house,'' Fox testified. ''In my mind, I had to protect Cheryl.''

LIMA, PERU (JUNE 7) UPI - Polls showed a virtual tie Thursday between the two candidates going into the decisive second-round vote this weekend to pick a Peru's president who will face the challenges of runaway inflation and a savage guerrilla war.

The polls showed a difference of not more than 4 percentage points between the candidates, novelist Mario Vargas Llosa and agriculture engineer Alberto Fujimori.

The polls were the first since a nationally broadcast debate Sunday, the first televised debate in Peruvian history, which appeared to give Vargas Llosa a boost as the campaign entered the final week.

The campaign has shaped up as a conflict between the candidates' plans over how to tame Peru's inflation, which ran at 2,775 percent in 1989 and is still rising.

A poll in Peru's largest cities by the public opinion research firm Apoyo showed Vargas Llosa with 42.9 percent of the vote, followed by 41.5 percent for Fujimori.

''We should consider this very positive news but still recognize that we still need to do better to overcome the majorities Fujimori may still have in the countryside,'' said an internal Vargas Llosa campaign memorandum.

The other poll, a nationwide voter sample by the Pervuana de Opinion Publica research organization, had Fujimori leading by 4 percent. The total vote percentages for each candidate were not provided by the company.

Fujimori, the son of Japanese immigrants, surged from a virtual unknown in the last two weeks before an April 8 first-round vote to capture second place with 24 percent and the right to face Vargas Llosa in Sunday's election.

Vargas Llosa, an internationally known novelist, won 27 percent of the April vote. He considered quitting the race because he did not achieve the first-round victory he had sought as a mandate to make the deep economic changes he advocates, but decided to continue.

Lima was under a state of siege declared by the government to give police and the armed forces special powers. A series of small bombs that rocked Lima Tuesday and Wednesday were believed to have been the work of the Shining Path guerrilla group, police said.

The leftist guerrilla group of some 5,000 members controls a large portion of the country. Since its birth a decade ago, more than 19,000 people have died in political violence.

Fujimori has appealed to voters by criticizing Vargas Llosa's plans for a ''shock'' economic reform program.

Vargas Llosa proposes deep cuts in government spending, the sale of state-owned companies and lowering import duties in order to halt runaway inflation and make the economy more efficient.

Fujimori has been advocating a vague economic package, saying adjustments are needed but over a longer period of time in order not to create the vast hardship he says will result from the Vargas Llosa proposal. He has also proposed the creation of a new monetary unit on par with the dollar.

(JUNE 7) UPI - Oil prices plummeted in the last hour of trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange Thursday in a market that may have been influenced by occurrences in nearby New York Harbor.

Led by gasoline, prices rose early in the day as traders heard news of a British oil tanker running aground in the Kill Van Kull, spilling about 260,000 gallons of heavy fuel oil. The waterway carries heavy tanker traffic.

They then plunged concurrently with an Exxon Corp. announcement that it will resume shipping operations Friday at its Bayway and Bayonne, N.J., facilities - closed since March 3 because of spills in the waterway.

Exxon did not say when the huge 130,000-barrel-a-day Bayway refinery would resume operations, but traders said it was expected to be back onstream in about three weeks.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for July delivery settled 25 cents below Wednesday's close at $16.67 a barrel, after trading between $17.10 and $17.32 a barrel until almost the last hour of Merc trading.

Trading volume was a heavy 98,430 contracts.

The Exxon announcement may have been enough to nudge the WTI price below $17 a barrel.

''Once it broke through $17 all hell broke loose. It was a free fall,'' said Mary Haskins of Paine Webber Inc. in New York.

Haskins looked for the downward trend to continue into Friday. ''The market looks like it wants to again test the $16.25 critical support level '' she said. It failed to penetrate this level Tuesday and in a price plunge April 18.

Unleaded gasoline for July delivery fell 0.75 cent on the day to 57.61 cents a gallon on the Merc, after trading as high as 59.55 cents a gallon.

Prompt-delivery unleaded gasoline slipped 1.75 cents to 63.1 cents a gallon on the New York cash market and lost 0.50 cent to 62.85 cents a gallon on the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast crude cash market, WTI was quoted at $16.65 a barrel, a loss of 25 cents.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent fell 13 cents to $15.58 a barrel.

The UAE's Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - was unchanged at $13.31 a barrel.

On the Merc, heating oil finished the day at 46.60 cents a gallon, down 0.41 cent.

The market was apparently unfazed by a Moscow report of disgruntled workers in the rich Siberian oil fields holding back deliveries to a Moscow refinery, charging builders halted work on sorely needed housing for the region.

The official Tass news agency said that for a third straight day oil workers from the Tyumen region failed to send 70,000 barrels of petroleum to the capital because of the builders' failure to fulfill agreements with them.

CHICAGO (JUNE 7) UPI - President Bush sought political mileage from the superpower summit Thursday, saying his talks with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev have the potential to "alter history."

On a two-day political swing through the Midwest, Bush dangled the promise of an economic payoff from the summit before farmers and praised Gorbachev as ''a remarkable man'' whose ''forthright spirit'' marked ''a new era in our relations.''

At a $1 million fund-raiser for Jim Edgar, who hopes to succeed 14-year Republican Gov. Jim Thompson, Bush predicted far-reaching benefits in declaring the summit to have been ''good for Illinois, good for America and good for the world.''

Earlier, at a fund-raising luncheon in Wisconsin for Gov. Tommy Thompson, Bush praised Gorbachev as ''a remarkable man'' whose candor at the summit offered ''proof that we have indeed entered a new era in our relations with the Soviets.''

''A united Germany in NATO, the future of the Baltics, regional problems: These aren't questions that can be solved simply or in one single summit '' he said. ''But we make progress on these difficult issues whenever we speak with candor, without animosity, about our aims and interests.''

The selling of the summit came as Bush set out across familiar political territory - and into the midst of a closely watched fight over abortion in Iowa - to raise an estimated $2 million for GOP candidates in Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska.

Having failed to resolve disputes over Lithuania's drive for independence, the future military status of Germany and Cuba, he said his talks with Gorbachev should be measured not by formal agreements but the working relationship it fostered.

''Every superpower summit is shaped by history. I believe last week's summit can alter history,'' he said. ''Our many hours of talks led to a better understanding and a new candor in our relationship.''

Bush, who resumes his summit follow-up talks Friday with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Monday with East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere, hit the road to raise Farm Belt money for Thompson, Edgar, two-term Gov. Terry Branstad in Iowa and underdog U.S. Senate candidate Hal Daub in Nebraska.

A summit agreement committing the Soviets to buy more U.S. grain over the next five years paved the way for a warm reception, especially in Iowa and Illinois, top grain-producing states that hope to gain as well from a new U.S.-Soviet trade agreement that Bush said will mean ''expanded markets for American goods and services.'' That agreement, however, is contingent on the Soviets liberalizing their emigration laws.

The Soviets agreed to seal the grain deal, which could mean billions for American farmers, only after Bush decided to not hold the trade pact hostage to concern about the Soviet economic squeeze of Lithuania.

The summit did not totally detract from other issues as Bush returned to the nitty-gritty of partisan politics from weighty matters of superpower relations. In Iowa, for example, he was tiptoing through the thicket of a race for governor that could gauge the resurgent political power of the abortion issue.

Iowa is one of several states where the anti-abortion movement first flexed political muscle in 1978 and where it now will see its staying power tested in November. With the National Abortion Rights Action League backing Don Avenson, the Democratic speaker of the Iowa House, against staunch abortion foe Branstad, clear battle lines have been drawn for a hard-fought campaign that could determine whether public opinion and political clout have shifted to the side of abortion-rights advocates.

Bush is neither a stranger to nor particularly comfortable with the abortion issue. As vice president, he hardened his position to better conform with the views of his boss, Ronald Reagan, by abandoning earlier opposition to a constitutional ban and embracing more stringent conditions for public financing.

That places Bush at odds with recent opinion polls, at least in Iowa, that found majority support for abortion rights.

TEHRAN, IRAN (JUNE 7) UPI - Finance Minister Moshon Noorbakhsh said the World Bank is interested in extending credit to Iran, a move that is needed by the country's ailing economy but scorned by the country's powerful clerics, according to published reports Thursday.

Iran, suffering from an estimated 30 percent unemployment and 30 percent inflation, needs access to hard currency in order to rebuild the country after the protracted eight-year war with neighboring Iraq.

Noorbakhsh said World Bank funds could be used to finance projects within Iran, the newspaper Abrar reported.

Observers said any such loans probably would consist of short-term notes, but point out that Iran has an excellent record of paying its debts.

The World Bank, which has not lent money to Iran since soaring world oil prices bolstered the country's economy in the mid-1970s, has sent two missions to Tehran to examine Iran's financial standing, but no decision has been made about whether credit would be extended.

A top Iranian finace official said during a visit to the United States last month that his country wanted $71 million in loans.

At the suggestion of the International Monetary Fund, Iran's government created a five-year plan passed earlier this year by Parliament that made provisions for foreign loans in the post war reconstruction period.

But borrowing foreign money remains a delicate subject in Tehran politics, with many hard-line followers of the late Ayatollah Khomeini's doctirines perceiving it as heresy.

If Iran establishes a foreign credit program, it would be seen as a major victory for the pragamatists in President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani's Cabinet.

But the move is likely to meet tremendous resistance from the hard-line clerics, observers said.

The pragmatists have said that without the loans, the recovery of Iran's economy will be an ardurous task.

Eleven months into his term, Rafsanjani is faced by falling oil prices, overpopulation, 30 percent inflation and a black market where the dollar is exchanged for 20 times the going rate.

A recent survey of the most expensive cities in which to live put Tehran on top of the list.

The Central Iranian Bureau of Data recently predicted that 378,000 new jobs would have to be created each year just to keep unemployment at its current rate, which unofficial estimates put at 25 to 30 percent. Iran has increased its population by 20 million in the past decade to close to 50 million people.

''If we do not make the required effort, in 20 years the oil income will not even pay for foodstuff needs of our country,'' said Agricultural Minister Isah Kalantari.

Noorbakhsh said the five-year plan has allocated $120 billion for new investment, which ''should help extensively in the creation of new jobs.''

(JUNE 7) UPI - President Bush campaigns in the Midwest... anti-crime legislation may be dead... a state of emergency is lifted in South Africa... and NATO and Warsaw Pact leaders hold strategy sessions. Those stories and more, next from U-P-I.

President Bush is in the nation's heartland today and tomorrow. Today, he told a Wisconsin audience about his super-power summit with Mikhail Gorbachev.

At a fund-raiser in Milwaukee for Governor Tommy Thompson, Bush called his talks with Gorbachev last week ''very productive''... even though there was NO agreement on Lithuania's push for independence, or on Germany's membership in NATO.

He said the Lithuanian and German issues ''aren't questions that can be solved simply or in one single summit.'' But he said progress is made whenever leaders speak ''with candor, without animosity'' about their aims and interests.

Bush called Gorbachev ''a remarkable man'' and said the United States and the Soviet Union have ''entered a new era'' in their relations.

The president is on a two-day political swing through the Midwest that will also take him to Iowa and Illinois.

NATO foreign ministers are meeting in Scotland to try to fashion a way to keep Germany in the NATO alliance without humiliating Moscow.

The United States and its NATO partners want a unified Germany to stay in the Atlantic alliance, but the Soviets are opposed. They want a unified Germany to be neutral, but they have proposed other alternatives, including joint membership for Germany in NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd reflected the views of many of the NATO ministers when he said he's ''reasonably optimistic'' that a solution acceptable to the Soviets can be found in a few months, barring what he called ''great dramas or upset.''

While the NATO ministers met in Turnberry... Warsaw Pact leaders are meeting in Moscow to discuss the future of the alliance that's been drastically changed by the democracy movement in Europe.

NEWARK, NJ (JUNE 7) UPI - Private employers have the right to test applicants for drug use, a judge ruled in an opinion released Thursday, saying that abuse of cocaine and marijuana should not be shielded by ''creating amorphous legal rights.''

U.S. District Judge Nicholas Politan dismissed a suit brought by Donald P. Jevic, an Edison man turned down for a job with the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of New York Inc. after failing a drug test.

''The court notes that illegal drugs exact an enormous toll on the health and continued economic vitality of this nation,'' the judge said. ''The court does not accept plaintiff's invitation to shield their use by creating amorphous legal rights.

''On the contrary, it sanctions the efforts of the private sector to combat drug use through policies that balance the interest of the employer and country with the legitimate privacy concerns of the prospective employee,'' Politan's ruling said.

Most court decisions on drug testing have involved employees or applicants with federal, state or local government agencies.

While rulings have been conflicting, judges have generally found that testing can be conducted only in the public sector where drug use is likely to be a safety hazard, in law enforcement agencies or where there is probable cause to believe someone is a drug user.

Federal courts have generally given private-sector employers free rein to test either applicants or current employees, but some state courts have placed restrictions on drug testing. In the only previous New Jersey decision, a state judge ruled that testing current employees who have shown no signs of drug abuse violates the state constitution's guarantee of privacy.

Jevic was offered a job as district sales manager for Coca-Cola Bottling in 1988, conditional on his passing a reference check and submitting to urinalysis. The offer was withdrawn after a test of his urine, followed by a more sophisticated check, showed the presence of marijuana.

Although Jevic maintained that he had not smoked marijuana recently and passes a test performed at his own expense, the company refused to hire him.

In his suit, Jevic argued that the testing violated his constitutionally guaranteed right to privacy. He also said he was given an oral offer of employment that did not mention drug testing and moved to New Jersey from Maryland to take the job.

In his opinion, Politan acknowledged that urine testing is an intrusive procedure. But he said that Jevic had gone into the test with open eyes, signing a ''pre-employment statement'' when he applied for the job and a waiver the day of testing.

''His freedom was in no way constrained, and there is nothing in this record to suggest that he was coerced or hoodwinked into taking this drug test,'' the judge said. ''Exercising his right of choice, Jevic took the drug test. Based on the scientific evidence presented, the test revealed that he also made other choices which he now regrets and thus asks the court to correct.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Cuba, responding to international pressure, freed a plush Japanese-owned yacht and its crew Thursday, five days after it was commandeered by a cannon-firing Cuban gunboat, diplomats said.

The release of the $8 million Belesbat Queen followed strong protests from the Japanese, British and U.S. governments, who said Cuba has detained several vessels over the past few months in a dispute over the boundaries of its coastal waters.

The 145-foot yacht, owned by Island Future Corp., of Kobe, Japan, and registered in Britain was in an international shipping lane known as the Old Bahama Channel when it was intercepted Saturday.

''They're free,'' said Michael Snell, second secretary of the British Embassy in Washington. ''I suppose the Cubans were impressed by our protests.''

Earlier in the day, Snell said he had been told the 10 crewmembers, including three Americans, were going to be put on trial for violating Cuban territorial waters. He said the company had also been prepared to pay a $7,800 fine that the Cubans demanded. He did not immediately know whether the money had been turned over.

''We are pleased with the Cuban government's action today,'' said Nori Shikata, a Japanese Embassy spokesman in Washington.

Snell said it was the second time in a month that a vessel flying the British flag had been intercepted by the Cubans. Philip Covington, a State Department spokesman, said the Cubans have stopped four U.S. vessels in the past two months.

The British diplomat said the boat was intercepted apparently because of a dispute over what consistutes Cuba's territorial waters. The ship's captain maintains he was 2 miles beyond the 12-mile limit accepted as Cuban territory.

Covington said the United States was concerned about an apparently new Cuban policy requiring ships passing through the narrow shipping lane to request permission.

The vessel's Australian captain, Ian McCombe, told United Press International by ship-to-shore telephone Saturday night that the Cuban boat had fired three cannon shots across his bow. He said the Cuban seamen had also fired automatic weapons over his ship.

Among the crew were the three Americans, Thorne Butler of Las Vegas, Nev.; John Kelly of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; and Douglas Packman of New York. Also aboard were crewmembers from Japan, West Germany and Britain.

The yacht was freed Thursday afternoon. Snell said it would continue on its earlier routes through the Panama Canal, docking in San Diego before continuing on to Japan.

(JUNE 7) UPI - Top Senate negotiators are scrambling to try to save an anti-crime bill that appeared doomed after senators failed for a second time to stop a filibuster.

Democrat Joseph Biden and Republican Strom Thurmond offered a desperate, last-minute compromise today, proposing a stripped-down bill with NO consideration of the 330 pending amendments.

There was NO immediate indication whether the Senate would accept the compromise.

Earlier today, the Senate voted 57-37 to limit debate on the anti-crime bill- three votes short of the 60 needed. Most of those voting ''NO'' oppose the bill's most controversial provision- a ban on nine military-type assault weapons.

46 Democrats and 10 Republicans voted to shut off debate, while 30 Republicans and seven Democrats refused. Each side is blaming the other for the impasse.

East Germany has arrested one of West Germany's most-wanted suspected terrorists.

East Germany's interior minister says the government is investigating the possibility that Susanne Albrecht was protected by the nation's former Communist government.

Albrecht was arrested last night in East Berlin, where she has lived the past eight years with her husband and child.

Albrecht is an alleged member of the ultra-right-wing Red Army Faction. She is suspected of helping to assassinate a prominent Frankfurt banker in 1977.

An international warrant was issued for Albrecht's arrest in 1979.

Officials say the Albrecht arrived in East Germany in 1980 and became a citizen... but has been working aboard for the past two years.

Albrecht returned to East Germany last Sunday, apparently to change her East German marks into West German marks before the two Germanys merge economically next month.

(JUNE 7) UPI - Violence against homosexuals and lesbians decreased last year, but only slightly, and activists say gays still are ''under seige'' in the United States.

A new study by the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force says homosexuals and lesbians were victims in seven-thousand 31 incidents of defamation and violence last year. The incidents ranged from verbal abuse to homicide.

The study released today reported incidents in 40 states and the District of Columbia. The total number of incidents dropped slightly from the previous year.

Kevin Berrill, director of the group's Anti-Violence Project, said gays remain ''under seige, battling an epidemic of bigotry and violence.'' He called for a major battle on the state level to end all forms of hate crimes.

It's NOT official- but engineers at Cape Canaveral are thought to be readying a Titanoff at Cape Canaveral.

Military officials are sticking to a NO-comment policy, refusing to disclose the launch date, time or details of what the rocket is carrying.

The work is being done under a cloak of secrecy, but sources say the 173-Million-dollar rocket is scheduled to take off tomorrow.

The sources also say the 174-foot rocket is carrying an electronic signals intelligence satellite. The satellite reportedly is designed to intercept data from Soviet rocket tests and eavesdrop on other communication.

The launch would mark the seven-BILLION-dollar program's second flight this year.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - White House budget director Richard Darman said Thursday there is an ''implicit consensus'' among White House and congressional budget negotiators to cut the deficit by $45 billion to $60 billion next year.

Darman made his comments after negotiators ended a sometimes frustrating daylong discussion about possible cuts in entitlement programs such as Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid and federal payments to veterans, farmers and civil servants.

That discussion - which participants described as an information session, not a bargaining session - produced no agreements on possible cuts and prompted two Republican negotiators to complain about apparant reluctance of Democratic lawmakers to make any cuts in entitlement programs.

Darman said the chairmen of committees or subcommittees dealing with benefit programs who made presentations to the group ''weren't actually proposing to cut the deficit.'' Others said they argued about why their areas can't be cut.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., gave what one negotiator called ''a Harvard lecture'' about his proposal to cut Social Security payroll taxes from their current 6.2 percent to 5.1 percent.

Moynihan's payroll tax cut would eat up the current Social Security trust fund surplus and prevent the administration from using the surplus to help pay for government operations while at the same time masking the true size of the budget deficit.

While it did not appear Moynihan's talk changed the minds of any opponents of his six-month-old proposal, Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., predicted to the negotiating group it would pass the Senate and House if brought up for a vote.

But Sens. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., ranking Republican on the Senate budget panel, and Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said after Moynihan's talk that they felt it might get only 30 votes in the 100-member Senate.

Darman said it was his belief that the bipartisan negotiating group of congressmen and White House officials had pretty much agreed on how much deficit reduction they will seek in fiscal year 1991, which starts Oct. 1. Negotiators hope to agree on a five-year deficit reduction plan.

''There is an implicit consensus that the first year (cut) is in the 45 to 60 (billion dollar) range,'' Darman said, adding that the group also seems to agree that the amount of savings in subsequent years should grow, not shrink.

Congress and the White House have never agreed on more than about $25 billion in deficit reductions in past years so the package the group is considering for fiscal 1991 would be about twice as big as any previous plan.

Also, in past budget summits, because many of the deficit savings in the first year were considered one-time ''gimmicks,'' savings in later years fell off sharply from first year savings levels.

Negotiators are trying to find a way to meet the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law's $64 billion deficit reduction target for fiscal 1991. If they fail, the law would require severe, automatic, across-the-board spending cuts split evenly between defense and domestic programs.

Some estimates have the deficit running as high as $250 billion next year, meaning that a package of deficit savings totalling up to $60 billion would still miss the Gramm-Rudman target of $64 billion by a wide margin. Darman said if negotiators can agree on savings of up to $60 billion, they would take care of the accounting problems later.

Negotiators are scheduled to meet for the seventh time on Wednesday.

MEXICO CITY (JUNE 7) UPI - Salvadoran President Alfredo Cristiani arrived in Mexico Thursday for a three-day visit that will include trade talks with his Mexican counterpart Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

Cristiani was met at Mexico City's international airport by Foreign Minister Fernando Solana.

Salvadoran government spokesman Waldo Chavez Velasco said Cristiani wants to expand El Salvador's trade relations with Mexico. ''The most important agreement is that Mexico will supply us with 9,000 barrels of oil a day rather than the current 8,000 barrels a day,'' Chavez said.

Both Mexico and Venezuela supply oil to El Salvador and other Central American and Caribbean countries on preferential terms established under the San Jose pact.

Chavez said Venezuela already has raised El Salvador's quota to 9,000 barrels a day.

Cristiani is struggling to implement a largely unpopular economic modernization program similar to the one Salinas has been pushing through in Mexico since taking office Dec. 1, 1988, including the sale of major state-owned enterprises.

Cristiani now faces a threat of cuts in U.S. aid because of his government's failure to clear up alleged high-level army involvement in the killing of six Jesuit priests last November and lack of progress in peace talks with rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front.

Cristiani said the 10-year-old civil war, in which 72,000 mostly civilians have died, has cost El Salvador $4 billion in economic losses from an economy that produces less than $5 billion a year.

Before leaving El Salvador, Cristiani said he and Salinas would also discuss Cuba's role in the Central American peace process.

''We will touch on the topic because we consider that the attitude of Cuba toward the peace process is of fundamental importance,'' Cristiani said. ''The diplomatic relationship that Mexico has with Cuba could provide a communications bridge aimed at (Cuba) supporting the peace process and not the war.''

MILAN, ITALY (JUNE 7) UPI - A Peruvian sought on cocaine smuggling charges by police in Canada, Peru, Britain and Holland was arrested in Milan where he came to watch Argentina and Colombia play a World Cup soccer match, police announced Thursday.

Police identified the Peruvian as Barreto Morales, 39, and said he was suspected as the organizer of a ring that smuggled and distributed large quantities of cocaine in North America, Europe and Australia.

Finance police investigators who arrested Morales said he flew into Milan from Madrid Tuesday as a tourist to watch Argentina and Colombia play in the World Cup at the Milan stadium.

They said after arriving in Milan he bought a ticket for the Argentina-Cameroon match which opens the monthlong World Cup contest Friday and three tickets for Colombia matches.

Investigators said he had committed no crime in Italy and would be extradited to either Canada or Peru within the next few days, after extradition requests arrive.

Police said they arrested Morales at a luxury Milan hotel on the basis of fingerprints provided by Interpol.

Interpol officials said Morales usually lived in the beach resort of Marbella, on the Spanish Costa del Sol, but traveled throughout the world, allegedly in connection with the gang's cocaine-smuggling activities.

They said in 1985 Canadian police seized a clandestine laboratory in Rosemere, Quebec, in which the gang transformed large quantities of coca paste smuggled in from Latin America into pure cocaine. In that raid Canadian police seized 66 pounds of cocaine.

In 1987 Morales was arrested at a Dutch airport near Amsterdam where he arrived under a false name, investigators said. But he escaped from a Dutch jail a few months later.

Last year British police arrested his younger brother, Lorenzo Alejandro Morales, considered the No. 2 man in the drug ring. A London court sentenced Lorenzo to 20 years jail.

During the operation the police seized 132 pounds of cocaine smuggled in from Ecuador, where police said drug smugglers have close connections with Colombian cartels in Medellin and Cali.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (JUNE 7) UPI - On the eve of U.S. hostage Thomas Sutherland's fifth anniversary in captivity, his wife said Thursday her hopes have always been high but her expectations zero.

''When I think of this day, it is the same as any other day because our hope has always been at the highest any hour of any of this time, and our expectations have always been zero,'' Jane Sutherland told United Press International.

''We wait, we work, we hang on and we hang through till we come to the finish of this thing,'' she said while sitting on her apartment balcony at American University of Beirut in the Moslem sector of the capital.

Thomas Sutherland, 59, was dean of the agriculture school at the university when he was kidnapped on June, 9, 1985. The fundamentalist Islamic Jihad organizatrion claimed responsibility for the abduction.

He is among six Americans and 10 other Westerners believed held hostage in Lebanon by pro-Iranian fundamentalist groups.

Jane Sutherland said the release in April of U.S. hostage Frank Reed had been reassuring because he had shared a cell with her husband a year ago and reported he was in good shape.

''He said that Tom was very, very strong, that he was strong physically and mentally and that was very, very reassuring for us,'' she said.

''It was really a nice and reassuring thing that Tom at that time was strong and well and not giving up in any sense of the word, and to us that meant a lot.''

Commenting on some recent reports that her husband's health was deteriorating, she said that he never in the past needed medical care and never had any health problems.

Sutherland said she would wait for her husband's release while continuing to work as an English teacher at the university.

NEW YORK (JUNE 7) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board said Thursday that the basic U.S. money supply, narrowly defined under the name of M1, fell $3.2 billion in the latest reporting week, and the broader aggregates M2 and M3 also decreased.

M2 dropped $7.8 billion and M3 fell $10.8 billion.

M1, which is made up of cash, checking accounts and NOW accounts - money that is available for immediate spending - fell to a seasonally adjusted average of $803.7 billion in the week ended May 28 from a revised $806.9 billion the week before.

Over the latest 13 weeks, M1 averaged $805.7 billion, a 4.6 percent rate of increase from the previous 13 weeks, the Fed reported.

The broader measure of money, M2, averaged an estimated $3,258.6 billion in the latest week, down from a revised $3,266.4 billion. M2 includes M1, plus passbook savings, small time deposits, including money market deposit accounts, consumer money market mutual funds and certain other short-term assets.

M3, which includes M2 plus large time deposits, repurchase agreements longer than one day at banks and thrifts, and institutional money market funds, averaged $4,052.6 billion in the latest week, down from a revised $4,063.4 billion, the Fed said.

SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA (JUNE 7) UPI - Earthquakes rocked central Costa Rica Thursday, alarming the population but causing no damage or injuries, authorities announced.

The largest of the six quakes struck at 11 a.m. and measured 4.5 on the open-ended Richter scale. Civil defense officials said the epicenter was situated 8 miles west of the central town of Puriscal.

It was followed by three smaller quakes measuring about 3.5 on the Richter scale.

The first of the quakes, measuring 3.2 on the Richter scale, occurred at 9:20, and the second, registering 2.9, at 9:55 a.m.

Two major earthquakes, of 5.5 and 6.9 on the Richter scale, hit Costa Rica late March, damaging buildings, knocking out electricity services in the capital and interrupting telephone lines. Few casualties were reported.

OTTAWA (JUNE 7) UPI - The Canadian government announced plans Thursday to ban smoking on all international flights by domestic airlines by July 1, 1993.

Currently, smoking is banned on all domestic and transborder flights and a ban on international flights of less than six hours is set to come into effect on July 1.

''The government's position on smoking in the workplace is very clear,'' said Doug Lewis, Canada's transport minister, in announcing the plans.

Although 95 percent of all flights by Canadian airlines are smoke-free, the companies will be required to reduce the proportion of seats for smokers in a series of annual 25 percent cuts beginning on July 1, Lewis said.

As of July 1, 1993, smoking will no longer be allowed on Canadian carriers.

Canadian Airlines International of Calgary said the government's action was poorly timed given high interest rates, an economic slowdown and a soft travel market.

The company said that without the smoking ban being extended to all foreign carriers operating into Canada ''the new regulations will unfairly and severely hamper'' the ability of Canadian Airlines to compete internationally.

But Canadian Airlines applauded Lewis who said he would try to convince officials from other governments to follow Canada's lead.

In a letter dated Thursday to the president of the International Civil Aviation Organization, which is based in Montreal, Lewis requested an opportunity to attend the ICAO's fall assembly and to ask the members to make international non-smoking regulations ''a high priority.''

''I believe that other nations share Canada's concern regarding the hazards of smoking on board aircraft and that, with the assistance of the ICAO and its member states, important progress can be made on this matter '' Lewis wrote.

Lewis said the government's ''comprehensive strategy will help us obtain a smoke-free environment on all flights while permitting our air carrier industry to remain competitive.''

Canadian Airlines said the unilateral ban could result in a more than $35 million loss, half of its international routes revenues.

The losses, the company estimated, would result primarily from a drop in passengers on its Japan-Canada route. Over 80 percent of traffic on this route originates in Japan, and 53 percent of those passengers are smokers, Canadian Airlines said.

''Passengers from Pacific Rim countries and Europe do not view smoking in the same way as North Americans, it's very much a part of their culture,'' the company said.

SEATTLE (JUNE 8) UPI - Microsoft Corp. has surpassed its own optimistic predictions by selling nearly 200,000 copies of Windows 3.0 less than three weeks after the program was announced, a company official said Thursday.

''We're really excited. This certainly exceeds our expectations,'' said Rich Abel, Windows group product manager.

''We expected the distribution channel to reorder the product from us two or three or four weeks out, but they came back within a couple of days of the official (May 22) announcement.

Abel added that Microsoft's toll-free telephone number for information on Windows 3.0 has been handling more than 4,000 calls daily.

Windows 3.0, an extension to the DOS operating system for IBM personal computers and clones, is perhaps the most hyped software product in recent years. Its introduction created a frenzy of anticipation and announcements within the software industry.

The program makes computing easier, with a graphic screen that lets users issue commands by pointing to pictures instead of learning arcane computer language. The screen is similar in concept to those on Apple computers.

Abel said Microsoft initially anticipated selling 1 million copies of Windows 3.0 in its first year, but that number could be exceeded if the current sales pace keeps going.

More than three-quarters of the sales have been for initial purchases, with the remainder upgrades, Abel said. A full version retails for $149, while an upgrade from an older version costs $50.

Aside from the strong revenues, Abel said the large number of initial purchases means the company is reaching well beyond the base of current Windows users to new customers.

Abel said several factors have helped Windows 3.0's sales, including advance publicity and the immediate availability of the product.

Industry analysts were not surprised by the volume of units sold so far.

''I think we all assumed it would be a blockbuster product,'' said Bill Whitlow of Dain Bosworth.

''They did a great job - whether purposely or by accident - of building up demand for the product well before it ever came out. And Microsoft certainly did nothing to dampen that anticipation with their 'Hollywood' introduction.''

But Paine Webber's Robert Therrien said Windows 3.0 could be derailed if Apple Computer Corp. wins its copyright lawsuit against Microsoft.

The suit claims an earlier version of Windows infringed on some screen designs used by Apple. A U.S. District Court judge in San Francisco threw out most of Apple's claims last July but said the most important issue - that of the ''look and feel'' of the Windows interface - should go to trial.

A trial is expected sometime later this year.

''Microsoft will sell a hell of a lot of Windows (3.0) in its first year unless it loses the litigation with Apple,'' Therrien said. ''But I think there is a significant possibility Apple will win its lawsuit, for a variety of reasons.

''Microsoft is on a rocket, and it's like two big trucks coming at each other on a one-lane road,'' he said. ''One's going to be in the ditch and one's going to be on the road. If Microsoft continues like it is right now Apple is going to be in big trouble.''

BURBANK, Calif. (JUNE 8) UPI - The Walt Disney Co. will take its highly successful Disney Store chain overseas later this year with the opening Nov. 1 of a retail store in an upscale area of London, the company said Thursday.

The store will occupy 6,845 square feet of space on Regent Street, a popular high-priced shopping area. Disney will lease the site from the Crown Estate, which falls under the aegis of Great Britain's Royal Family.

Disney started the chain three years ago to sell Disney items ranging from videos and T-shirts to talking Mickey Mouse toothbrushes. The stores, which now number 54, have been posting yearly sales of $800 a square foot, better than double the national average.

The stores feature Hollywood movie sets with the Disney characters and costumed employees. And aside from selling Disney merchandise, each outlet also promotes the Disney cable channel and Disney movies and theme parks.

The announcement of the London store, which will open as Christmas shopping season gets underway, comes at a time when Disney is trying to raise European awareness of its products prior to the April 1992 opening of Euro Disneyland near Paris.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - The World Bank Thursday announced loans to help Algeria's and Tunisia's efforts to develop agricultural extension services.

A $32 million World Bank loan will help Algeria increase agricultural productivity and reduce food imports through a project to develop ''strong and responsive research and extension services,'' the multilateral organization said in a release.

A $17 million loan from the World Bank will help Tunisia to launch the first phase of a program to improve agricultural extension and research in 15 regions.

ANCHORAGE, AK (JUNE 7) UPI - The Interior Department unveiled plans Thursday to take over wildlife management on public lands in Alaska because the state failed to guarantee a subsistence hunting preference for its rural, mostly native population.

The federal action is ''unparalleled'' in the United States, said Glenn Elison, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service official heading up the operation that will cost $15 million in its first year.

''Clearly there will be some confusion as the new program is put in place '' Elison said.

The federal wildlife agency issued an 82-page set of rules designed to ''minimize disruption'' and avoid ''unnecessary chaos'' when it takes over July 1. The rules were being published Friday in the Federal Register.

If Alaska does not legislate subsistence rights, the federal government will assume permanent control of wildlife after an 18-month transition period.

Alaska subsistence hunters, mostly Eskimos, Indians and Aleuts, kill wildlife for food and clothing in a tradition that dates back many centuries before the first whites settled in Alaska.

The law granting hunting priority to subsistence hunters has become one of the most divisive and controversial issues in Alaska.

The federal takeover was considered of such importance that two dozen Alaska Public Radio Network stations interrupted their programming for a live statewide broadcast of the Thursday afternoon Interior Department news conference announcing the plan.

Although the federal government owns two-thirds of Alaska, the state has managed wildlife and subsistence hunting on all Alaska lands, except for species protected by federal law or in parks where hunting is prohibited.

But the state was forced to give up management authority because it was not in compliance with the federal Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act that grants a subsistence hunting preference to rural residents.

The state did have such a subsistence priority on the books, but under a challenge by urban sport hunters the state Supreme Court ruled last December that a rural preference was discriminatory and thus violated the state constitution.

Federal officials urged the state to write a new constitutional law restoring subsistence hunting priority rights or face a federal takeover to guarantee the hunting preference to rural Alaskans.

Natives throughout Alaska urged state lawmakers to amend the constitution to make subsistence preferences legal, and Gov. Steve Cowper joined the call for a constitutional amendment. Even Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan came to Alaska and lobbied lawmakers to comply with the federal law or face a federal takeover.

But the now-adjourned state Legislature was divided over the preference right and failed to act, triggering the move to transfer wildlife management from the state to a newly created federal subsistence board made up representatives from the Fish and Wildlife Service, the National Park Service, the Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management and the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

''Over time Alaskans are not going to be happy with the federal government having the final say over management of our fish and game,'' Cowper said after federal plans were unveiled Thursday. ''You can be sure that in a short time, the federal presence will be more intrusive, and all Alaskans will end up the losers.''

The federal board must determine who qualifies for subsistence preferences.

As long as there is enough wildlife for everyone to hunt and still leave a healthy population, the public should see little change, said Walter Stieglitz, regional director of Fish and Wildlife Service. But if there is not enough to go around, subsistence hunters get first shot at game and sport hunters may be shut out, Elison said.

Subsistence priority is based on rural residency, not race, but rural Alaska villages are predominantly native. Alaska's population is 16 percent native.

White, urban sport hunters long have challenged subsistence rights as discriminatory, calling for equal hunting rights for all Alaskans.

Natives have pointed out that they depend on subsistence hunting for survival in bush villages and that their entire lifestyle and tradition is based on subsistence.

Conflicts between rural and urban hunters are not widespread, but Elison predicted, ''There will be potential conflicts between users.'' He also said lawsuits against the federal subsistence program are a virtual certainty.

Cowper predicted that the federal takeover will lead to conflicting standards of wildlife management, more lawsuits and confusion.

Elison said the state can have wildlife management back if and when it enacts a law that gives priority to subsistence hunters.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Congressional and Pentagon negotiators agreed Thursday on a way to cover shortfalls in Pentagon payroll accounts - in part using money from popular weapons systems - to avoid the threat of layoffs.

The agreement resolves a running feud between Defense Secretary Richard Cheney and House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis. Aspin had insisted that Cheney take some of the funds from the Pentagon's pet big ticket weapons systems to cover the shortfall.

Under the agreement, funds will be shifted from a variety of Pentagon accounts to cover payroll account shortages caused last year by an across-the-board cut in all government programs required by the budget-balancing Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law.

The agreement reached Thursday deals with how to resolve a practice called ''reprogramming'' in which money is shifted from various military accounts. Typically, such actions require the permission of the four senior House and Senate defense committee leaders.

Until Thursday, all but Aspin had refused to give consent. He argued that because the Pentagon last August opted not to protect the personnel accounts - as it could have under law - any money used to rescue those accounts would have to come from favored weapons systems.

Sources said Cheney and House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash. - who entered the negotiations this week in an effort to break the impasse - agreed to draw an additonal $58 million from strategic weapons sources.

The agreement takes $8 million from the MX missile, $10 million from the Midgetman missile; $20 million from Trident submarine program, and $20 million from the SSN-21 Seawolf attack submarine.

''What amazes me,'' complained Rep. William Dickenson, R-Ala., ''is how and why one individual would hold the entire reprogramming process hostage in the name of principle only to settle for an amount that is about 4 percent of the total package.

''Chairman Aspen demanded that over $200 million in additional strategic programs be cut before he could accept the reprogramming,'' Dickenson said. ''What the speaker and the secretary finally agreed on bears little resemblance to the chariman's demands. Consequently, one cannot help but wonder what was accomplished by all this.''

As soon as the rift surfaced earlir this year, Cheney warned that layoffs of armed services personnel were possible. The Pentagon told Congress that without reprogramming between 44,100 and 68,200 active-duty Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine personnel would be cut from the payroll.

The documents also said the Defense Department would have to freeze rotations, delay promotions and reduce accessions into the services from the military academies for tens of thousands of others.

Had the agreement not been reached, Cheney was prepared to move the money into the accounts to avert layoffs, but congressional sources warned he would never be able to use that ploy again.

HOUSTON (JUNE 7) UPI - Regulators closed two more Texas banks Thursday.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. approved assumption of the deposits and secured liabilities of Texas National Bank, El Paso by Texas Commerce Bank-El Paso, N.A.

The failed bank's two offices were scheduled to reopen Friday as branches of Texas Commerce, and depositors in the failed bank automatically became depositors of the assuming bank.

The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency closed Texas National Bank, El Paso, which had total assets of $123.9 million, and named the FDIC as receiver.

Texas Commerce will assume about $119.5 million in 12,000 deposit accounts and has agreed to pay the FDIC a purchase premium of $5.3 million. It will purchase some of the failed bank's assets and will have options to purchase loans and other assets.

The FDIC will advance the assuming bank $72.1 million and the federal agency will retain assets of the failed bank with a book value of about $81.9 million.

The FDIC intends to recover a portion of its outlay through the liquidation of assets not transferred to the assuming bank.

Texas Banking Commissioner Kenneth Littlefield Thursday announced closing of another bank - Richmark Bank of Houston, with deposits of $35 million.

The deposits were assumed by Hibernia National Bank in Texas. Hibernia also obtained the right to acquire certain assets of the failed bank.

The failed bank's two offices were scheduled to reopen Friday as branches of Hibernia.

Hibernia National Bank, owned by Hibernia Corp. of New Orleans, entered the Texas market in August last year and has acquired 15 Texas banks and thrifts.

TOPEKA, KA (JUNE 7) UPI - A 51-year-old Nebraska horse breeder and carpenter who has been working temporarily on a Topeka job stepped forward Thursday as the holder of a winning $23.12 million Lotto America ticket.

''It's got you kind of lost for words,'' Edwin Frahm of rural Burchard, Neb., said at a news conference.

Frahm, obviously still grappling with reality just four hours after discovering his win, said he was unsure what he will buy first or whether he will quit his job.

He said vacations are foreign to him and will remain so.

''I don't know whether I ever have'' taken a vacation, he said.

Frahm, a native of Virginia, Neb., said he and his wife, Clarabelle, originally of Axtell, Kan., in the northeast part of the state, already have ''the necessities.''

''I don't really know,'' he said when asked of his plans for the 20 annual payments of $878,560 after taxes.

''That should be all a man ever needs,'' he said, sparking laughter from about 50 reporters and Kansas Lottery employees.

That breaks down to $16,895 a week, compared to Frahm's current weekly salary of $520.

''You think about things you'd buy. You'd probably buy things that you wouldn't otherwise,'' Frahm said.

Kansas Lottery Executive Director Jerry Simpson said Lotto America, based in Des Moines, Iowa, will probably get Frahm's first check to him in about 15 days.

Frahm bought the ticket about 4:30 p.m. Wednesday at a North Topeka EZ Shop where he said he stops for gas during his 200 mile round trip to and from work.

''We have an out-of-state check policy. We'll put your name on the list to accept them,'' joked Susie Frisbie, general manager of the 34 EZ Shops in Kansas and Missouri.

Simpson said the jackpot is Lotto America's third-largest, eclipsed only by prizes of $40 million and $29 million. Because two people split the $29 million jackpot, Wednesday's $23.12 million jackpot is the second-largest Lotto America prize won by an individual, Simpson said.

Frahm said he stopped at a gas station Thursday morning to learn the as-yet-unclaimed winning ticket had been sold in Topeka. He said he checked a newspaper in his brother Walt's pickup truck about 11:45 a.m. to discover he had won.

The Frahms have three grown children: Dixie, 30, of Burchard; Sherman, 29, a construction worker who lives 2 miles from the couple's Burchard farm; and son Lee, 28, a certified public accountant in Denver.

Other Lotto America participants are the District of Columbia, Idaho, Iowa Missouri, Montana, Oregon, Rhode Island, West Virgina and Wisconsin.

PALM BEACH, FL (JUNE 7) UPI - Fire broke out early Thursday in a bedroom and caused smoke damage to other rooms in the servants' wing at embattled Donald Trump's oceanfront 118-room mansion, firefighters said.

Firefighters arrived at the estate, known as Mar-a-Lago, about 8 a.m. and extinguished the flames within 15 minutes, Fire-Rescue Department spokesman Ken Elmore said. He estimated damage at about $50,000 in the wing and said the blaze did not appear to be suspicious.

''The fire was confined to the bedroom and its contents,'' Elmore said. ''It was in the two-story wing in the southwest quarter of the mansion, which is the servants quarters. There was no structural damage. There was some smoke damage to several other bedrooms that are in that wing.''

The bedroom where the fire broke out was unoccupied and it was unclear whether anyone was in the home when the fire began, Elmore said. ''All I saw were workmen,'' he said.

There were no injuries and the cause of the fire was not known.

The Mediterranean-style home was built by cereal magnate C.W. Post and sits on 17 acres along the Atlantic coast highway A1A. It has 58 bedrooms, 32 bathrooms, 27 servents rooms and three bomb shelters. Post's daughter, Marjorie Merriweather Post, lived there until her death in 1973 at age 86.

Trump bought the home four years ago for $8 million, said Norma Foerderer, a spokeswoman for the Trump Organization.

Published reports have indicated recently that Trump may be facing a cash crunch that could force him to sell off chunks of his empire.

Bankers owed some $2 billion by Trump are reportedly pressing for the sale of some assets, for management changes at Trump's principal holding company and for a much more conservative operating style.

Trump's business empire includes three Atlantic City casinos, prime Manhattan real estate and the Trump Shuttle linking Boston, New York and Washington.

Trump has been separated from his wife, Ivana, since February over a marital spat involving actress-model Marla Maples.

Ivana issued a statement of support for the embattled Trump this week.

''Donald and I are partners in marriage and in business,'' she said. ''I will stand beside him through thick or thin and for better or worse.''

MEXICO CITY (JUNE 7) UPI - President Carlos Salinas de Gortari will discuss the prospect of increased trade with the United States when he meets in Washington this weekend with President Bush, the government said Thursday.

The question of a free trade agreement between Mexico and the United States, its largest trading partner, will be the highlight of Salinas' three-day visit, which also will include meetings with Vice President Dan Quayle, Secretary of State James Baker, members of Congress, academics and businessmen.

The Mexican government issued a statement saying Salinas will explore ''the possibilities of intensifying bilateral relations between the two countries, especially in economic and trade matters.''

''Mexico is seeking to strengthen its ties with the United States,'' the statement said, adding that Salinas will give priority to ''increasing the flow of Mexican trade to the United States.''

Mexico, which has rejected the formation of a common market with Canada and the United States, has shown a keen interest in pursuing such an agreement covering trade barriers, tariffs, investment, goods, services and copyright issues.

Salinas recently said Mexico must consider the changes in world trade as a matter of survival and not as an option. He suggested there was some urgency, warning that Latin America cannot sit idle while other nations arrange themselves into large trading blocs before looking toward the continent.

The Mexican Senate held a National Consulting Forum on a Mexican-U.S. free trade agreement from April 25 to May 19, recommending the negotiation of a bilateral agreement between Mexico and the United States, but rejecting the formation of a North American Common Market.

One of the concerns expressed was the ability of Mexican producers to increase productivity, diversify and stay competitive in an open market, although Mexico already has experienced substantial economic opening to foreign goods and investment since Salinas took office Dec. 1, 1988.

The Senate report emphasized in its conclusions that the formation of large trading groups of countries sharing commercial, agricultural, fiscal and monetary policies was ''not the road for Mexico.''

Mexico ''is categorically opposed to any negotiations that imply a loss of sovereignty,'' the report said.

The Bush administration took the results of the forum to be positive, but denied reports in Mexico that any free trade agreement between Mexico and the United States would be signed when Salinas and Bush meet this week.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 7) UPI - With a jury hopelessly deadlocked, a judge declared a mistrial Thursday in a suit alleging that a man was killed when his 1981 Subaru burst into flames because of a defect in its fuel system design.

The mistrial in the wrongful death suit was announced after an eight-week trial and three weeks of deliberations by the Superior Court jury.

Jurors said afterward they were deadlocked 8-3, with one undecided vote, in favor of awarding damages to the family of Robert May, who was burned to death when his Subaru exploded in a freeway crash shortly before Christmas 1983.

About 20 witnesses testified in the trial, which focused on claims of a defectively designed fuel system. The case was brought six years ago by May's wife, Lynne Mae of Huntington Beach, and her two daughters, Diana and Colleen.

The family was seeking damages of between $2 million to $12 million.

''We'll definitely retry the case as quickly as possible,'' said John C. Taylor, one of the family's lawyers.

''We're only one vote away'' from an award for the plaintiffs, ''so we feel the defendants dodged the bullet.'' In a civil suit, only nine jurors must vote in favor of a result to avoid a deadlock.

Defense lawyer James McCashin dismissed the eight votes for the family as ''an emotional decision ... without any clear reasons for thinking anything is wrong with the car.''

McCashin represented Subaru of America and Fuji Heavy Industries Ltd., the Japanese company that supplies all of Subaru's cars, and Sea & Sun Subaru of Huntington Beach, where the car was purchased.

He argued that the freeway calamity that killed May was so severe that no car built today could have withstood its impact.

But Browne Greene, a lawyer for the family, likened the design of the 1981 Subaru to the notorious Ford Pinto, saying, ''Cars should be made to collide and crush in a safe way. The fuel system should not be exposed in a crash and therefore burn somebody alive.''

The May disaster occurred on Dec. 19, 1983, when Ruben Bauer was driving on the freeway and choked on a soft drink. His foot accidentally hit the accelerator, causing his 1973 Mustang to slam into the rear of May's car.

Bauer and his wife, who were not wearing seat belts, escaped with scratches and other minor injuries. But the force of the impact pushed the rear of the Subaru into the passenger seat, where May, 43, an ABC film editor, was seated.

MIAMI (JUNE 7) UPI - A federal judge who found the rap group 2 Live Crew's rap music to be obscene was hailed Thursday by a prosecutor known for his anti-pornography campaign in northern Florida, while retail executives voiced fears about the impact of his ruling.

U.S. District Judge Jose Gonzalez ruled Wednesday that the Miami group's album ''As Nasty As They Wanna Be'' was in fact too nasty for south Florida. His 62-page opinion makes potential criminals out of record store clerks in Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties.

John Tanner, the state attorney for Volusia, Flagler, Putnam and St. John's counties, said the ruling will boost his efforts in north Florida.

''It is like having a good rocket booster attached to the shuttle. It gives speed, authority and force to our anti-obscenity efforts,'' he said.

''What this does is give the merchant, the shipper, the wholesaler and the retailer notice that some of the material now being commercially produced violates the law, and we're going to enforce the law based on citizen's complaints or law enforcement investigations,'' he said.

Record store executives in southern Florida said they feared that Gonzalez's ruling could set an unwelcome precedent.

''I think it has a chilling effect, period, on life in general,'' said Michael Cornette, vice president of store operations for Q Records & Video which operates seven stores in south Florida.

''I stock 5,000 line items in my stores. I am suddenly now going to held responsible for what's on each and every one of them,'' Cornette said. ''It is a little bit ludicrous.''

Broward County Sheriff Nick Navarro vowed Wednesday to arrest anyone caught selling the album in his county. As of Thursday afternoon, however, his office had not made any arrests, and did not expect to make any.

''At this point, we are still reviewing the judge's ruling. We don't have a policy at this point,'' spokesman Jim Leljedal said.

In Dade County, authorities said enforcement of the ruling was not a high priority. ''(Vice officials) are aware of the ruling, ... (but) they don't have plans to make any sweeps at this point,'' detective Donald Blocker said.

Some record stores voluntarity pulled the album in advance of the ruling. Cornette said his stores pulled the album in March, when the controversy began.

''We felt until the flap died down we didn't want to see anyone who is totally innocent being arrested,'' Cornett said. ''In light of the new ruling, we have had some complaints. The complaints that I heard out in the stores today is that we didn't have it.''

Vicki Carmichael, vice president of Spec's Music, which operates 55 stores in Florida, said her company decided some time ago to carry only a sanitized version of 2 Live Crew's recording because of customer complaints.

Nevertheless, she said the company objected to the ruling. ''Our position is that we would much rather see the record industry govern itself,'' she said.

Meanwhile, Bruce Rogow, a lawyer for 2 Live Crew, said Gonzalez failed to consider crucial evidence about the album's artistic merit when making his decision. He said he will use that oversight as grounds to appeal the ruling to the 11th U.S. Court of Appeals in Atlanta. The appeal may be filed as early as Monday, he said.

''I think our odds on this one are real strong,'' said Rogow, a professor at Nova University. ''If a reasonable person thinks there is artistic value, then the recording is not obscene.''

The Supreme Court has held that material can be declared obscene in a community if it is found to appeal to prurient interests, is patently offensive and lacks artistic, political or scientific value.

Rogow said Gonzalez diverged from that three-point test by overlooking the music's artistic value.

''We had John Leland, the country's leading black music critic, testify at length about this kind of music, and specifically this record, and he found it had serious artistic value,'' Rogow said. ''The judge just can't reject that out of hand.''

(JUNE 7) UPI - Southern Indiana residents were again evacuated from their homes Thursday with as much as 9 feet of water reported in one downtown area, while hail hit other parts of the Midwest and high winds toppled 20 planes in Missouri.

Rivers were expected to rise through the weekend in some of the worst areas, with rain along the edge of a warm front expected to continue for several more days, the National Weather Service said.

Funnel clouds were spotted across Missouri, and the weather service said winds hit 81 mph at about 4 p.m. in a suburb of St. Louis, where 20 small planes were knocked over, but forecasters did not know if the winds were caused by a tornado.

Farther west in the center of the state, a motel roof was blown off in Eldon, a barn was blown down at Eugene and walnut-sized hail was reported at Clarksburg.

Thunderstorms spawned four tornadoes around Louisville, Ky., and injured 14 people in eastern Colorado, and thunderstorms dumped golfball-size hail in Kentucky, Indiana and Nebraska.

Much of the rest of the Midwest, which has had severe weather for the past several days, was pounded by gusty winds and heavy rain. Parts of northern Missouri were soaked with more than 6 inches of rain during a six hour period early Thursday.

In southern Indiana, about 600 people who returned to their homes Thursday afternoon after being evacuated because of flooding watched the Little Blue River and other streams overflow into the streets, washing as much as 9 feet of water into the town.

It was the worst flooding in the area since 1979, when 10 feet of water washed through the town and did $4 million in damage.

The Crawford County Sheriff's Department evacuated about 100 people, some by boat, when they saw the waters rising too fast to accommodate the 6 inches of water dumped over the area, said Sgt. David Qualkenbush of the Indiana State Police. Another 500 people - the rest of the town - moved to higher ground on their own, he said.

''The others left as a precaution,'' the trooper said. ''As far as a forced evacuation by the personnel there, by their own estimates there were 80 to 100 people.'' No injuries were reported.

About 35 miles west in Petersburg, residents trying to recover from killer tornadoes and heavy flooding suffered another assault when the White River overflowed its banks and washed over the town.

Still more rain was predicted for the state through Saturday. Clear skies are not expected before Sunday, forecasters said.

The town of Limon, Colo., about 75 miles southeast of Denver, recovered Thursday from a twister that whirled through a 12-block section of the town's center, destroying mobile homes, damaging buildings and knocking out communications, said Sgt. Larry Toler of the Colorado State Police in Denver.

Gov. Roy Romer toured the area and National Guard troops were posted to prevent looting, authorities said.

The powerful thunderstorms that created the tornadoes pushed across the central Plains states early Thursday, dumping heavy rain and hail over parts of Nebraska, Kansas and eastern Colorado.

Elsewhere in the Plains states, light rainstorms rolled through parts of the Texas Panhandle and western Oklahoma as temperatures headed toward the 100s.

In New England, showers and thunderstorms formed along a cold front, and Florida and the central Gulf Coast also received rain.

Skies were partly sunny to sunny across much of the West and Southeast and strong northwesterly winds brought cool air to the Northeast, the weather service said.

(JUNE 7) UPI - President Bush visits the Midwest... House overrides veto of Amtrak appropriations bill... Americans advised to leave Liberia... and South Africa lifts state of emergency. The latest news from U-P-I, next:

President Bush is stumping for G-O-P candidates in the Midwest, and he's touting the achievements of last week's super-power summit.

Bush spoke tonight at a fund-raiser in Chicago for Illinois Secretary of State Jim Edgar, who hopes to succeed 14-year Republican Governor Jim Thompson.

The president said his summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev was ''good for Illinois, good for America and good for the world.''

One thing that UNdoubtedly will be good for Illinois and Iowa is the U-S-Soviet grain deal signed at the Washington summit. The two top grain-producing states also hope to benefit from a new U-S-Soviet trade pact.

But in his talk in Illinois and an earlier speech in Milwaukee, Wisconis, the president said the summit's main achievement is progress toward a new relationship between Washington and Moscow.

Bush says last week's talks ''led to a better understanding and a new candor'' in that relationship.

Congress appears close to doing something it hasN'T been able to do before- override a Bush veto.

The House voted 294-123 today to override President Bush's veto of a two-year, one-point-four-BILLION-dollar Amtrak authorization bill. The veto override was then called up in the Senate, but Republican leader Robert Dole blocked a vote, saying five of his senators were absent.

Democratic leader George Mitchell was frustrated by the impasse, but said ''the minority has it in its power'' to hold up the vote.

Mitchell predicted a ''close vote'' in the Senate on the override issue.

Bush vetoed the Amtrak bill because of a provision that would allow the Interstate Commerce Commission to review takeovers of railroads by NON-rail companies.

But some senators say the real reason for the veto is that Bush is trying to kill federal financing for the railroad system. The president's 1991 budget proposes NO funds for Amtrak.

But Mandela says the lifting of a four-year-old state of emergency in three South African provinces does NOT signal an end to the hated policy of apartheid. The emergency decree continues in the strife-torn province of Natal.

The black nationalist leader says he considers the move by President de Klerk to be a victory for all South Africans, ''white and black.''

But Mandela says lifting sanctions against Pretoria before it shuts down its racist system would be a ''stab in the back'' of South African blacks.

Mandela made his comments in France, where he is winding down an emotional two-day visit. Mandela will visit 14 countries on a six-week tour of Europe, Africa, and the United States.

The State Department is urging the 33-hundred Americans still in Liberia to get out of the war-torn West African nation, immediately.

Four U-S Navy ships are standing by off the Liberian coast, although an evacuation plan involving American military forces has NOT been put into effect. The State Department is setting up commercial flights this weekend to fly Americans out.

The warning comes as fighting heats up between troops loyal to President Samuel Doe and rebels loyal to former government official Charles Taylor.

The rebels have moved to within 35 miles of the capital, Monrovia, where a U-S official says government troops are deserting by the score.

Doe has responded to the threat by promising elections next year, and he is now calling for U-S help in fighting the rebels he claims are backed by Libya.

Doe's government also announced today that it killed a top aide to Taylor, saying he was executed for torturing and killing civilians.

Doe is a former master sergeant in the Liberian army who seized power in a coup in 1980. He faces charges of human rights abuses.

(JUNE 7) UPI - The Soviet-led Warsaw Pact apparently is headed for some major changes.

Leaders of the seven member countries met in Moscow today for the first time since last fall's democracy revolution swept across Eastern Europe. That upheaval drastically changed the face of the Warsaw alliance. Today, the leaders agreed on the need to stress political rather than military issues.

A Soviet deputy foreign minister said the alliance must ''emphasize a political component, as well as a disarmament component.'' He added that- quoting- ''perhaps we should go in the direction of curtailing military structures.''

Czechoslovakia's President Vaclav Havel went further, saying today's meeting ''gave the impetus for the Warsaw Pact to cease being what it was, without its vigilance disappearing.''

Havel says the alliance members also approved in principle a draft proposal that eventually would lead to a merging of East and West military alliances.

In Scotland, NATO foreign ministers met to discuss ways to keep Germany in the Atlantic alliance wihout humiliating Moscow, which wants Germany to be neutral.

(JUNE 7) UPI - Helmut Kohl says a reunified Germany will be a cornerstone of an emerging- his words now- ''United States of Europe.''

The West German chancellor spoke today at Harvard University, where 43 years ago U-S Secretary of State George Marshall presented his plan for rebuilding war-ravaged Europe.

Kohl cited the vision of the Marshall plan in saying Europe and America must work together in overcoming the many troubles of Eastern Europe. As Kohl put it- ''we must firmly anchor democracy in a part of the world where dictatorship prevailed for decades.''

In Berlin, officials say another symbol of the Cold War will soon be NOTHING more than a memory.

Checkpoint Charlie, Berlin's most famous crossing point, NO longer serves its orginal purpose with the changes in Europe.

The U-S Embassy in East Berlin says guards continue to show up for work at the crossing, but there is ''very little for them to do.''

There's apparently some agreement among White House and congressional budget negotiators, even though they failed to agree today during on possible cuts in entitlement programs.

Budget Director Richard Darman says he thinks there is an ''implicit consensus'' among the negotiators to cut the federal budget deficit by 45-BILLION to 60-BILLION dollars next year.

Darman says the group also seems to agree that the savings in subsequent years should grow, NOT shrink.

Earlier today, the negotiators failed to agree on possible cuts in Social Security, Medicare and other entitlement programs.

In a related matter, the Pentagon says Defense Secretary Cheney's planned budget cuts could mean a 25 percent reduction in U-S troops, ships and aircraft in the next five years.

Cheney yesterday agreed to give the budget negotiators a report on policy effects of such a cut.

(JUNE 7) UPI - The space shuttle Columbia will be heading back to its hanger next week for major repairs... causing further scheduling headaches for NASA.

But shuttle launch director Robert Crippen says the agency has NO choice but to ''fall back and regroup.''

Crippen says Columbia's 10-day astronomy mission will now have to wait until August to clear the way for a military flight next month.

Columbia's trip back to the Vehicle Assembly Building became UNavoidable after tests confirmed a liquid hydrogen leak in a critical fuel line.

One member of the Columbia crew says he's disappointed by the delay. But- in the words of astronaut Jeffrey Hoffman- ''who wants to fly a leaky shuttle?''

As a result of the Columbia postponement, NASA now plans to launch eight shuttle missions this year instead of nine.

While the shuttle Columbia woN'T be blasting off from Cape Canaveral anytime soon... it appears that a Titan-4 rocket will be.

Military officials are NOT commenting on the secret military mission. But sources say the 174-foot Titan rocket will liftoff tomorrow to carry a spy satellite into orbit.

(JUNE 7) UPI - Senators opposed to a ban on military-style assault weapons came close to killing a major anti-crime bill today when they voted NOT to limit debate on the measure. But Senate negotiators have offered a last-minute compromise to vote on a stripped-down version of the bill. Earlier, senators fell three votes short of stopping a filibuster that's backed by the gun lobby. The National Rifle Association opposes a ban on nine types of assault rifles.

The partial end of South Africa's four-year state of emergency is being welcomed by black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela . Speaking in Paris today, Mandela said Western nations should maintain economic sanctions against South Africa. Another African National Congress leader urges the emergency also be withdrawn in Natal province, where rival black factions continue to fight. The white Afrikaaner Resistance Movement said the lifting of the emergency decree gives in to ''communist demands.''

A U-S official in Liberia says government troops are deserting by the score as rebels advance closer to Monrovia. New analyses of satellite photos show that tropical rain forests apparently are disappearing at a much faster rate than previously thought. RACINE, WI (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Modine Manufacturing Co. forecasts increases in sales and earnings to record levels during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1991, its top officers reported in an outlook statement in the company's annual report just mailed to shareholders.

''1990-91 should be a good year overall, with strength building throughout the year. Our expectation at this point in time, before completing the critical selling season for aftermarket products, is for both sales and earnings to grow from five to ten percent over the previous year,'' said Earl E. Richter, chairman and chief executive officer, and Richard T. Savage, president and chief operating officer.

In the Annual Report, they stated: ''Our plans for the new year indicate a stronger automotive aftermarket. We expect more growth in our heavy-duty and industrial businesses, as well as continued strength in our heating and ventilating business and our international activities. We will continue our emphasis on providing our customers with the highest quality, value, and service in our industry.''

In the fiscal year ended March 31, 1990, Modine achieved net earnings of $25.2 million, or $1.68 per share, on sales of $436.3 million. Over the last 10 fiscal years, total return to investors in Modine stock increased at an average compound growth rate of 23.4 percent each year.

Modine Manufacturing Co. is the world's leading independent developer, manufacturer, and marketer of vehicular heat-transfer products. Modine sells and distributes products to the automotive aftermarket, original-equipment manufacturers, and also to non-residential building markets.

INDIANAPOLIS, IN (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - INB Financial Corp. (NASDAQ:INBF) and FL&T Financial Corp. today jointly announced the signing of a letter of intent whereby FL&T, parent of The Farmers Loan and Trust Co. will merge with INB Financial Corp.

The announcement was made by INBF Chairman Thomas M. Miller in Indianapolis and by FL&T's President Jack S. Gates at his headquarters in Columbia City.

Miller noted that this merger brings especially attractive benefits to INB. ''The bank has a strong capital position, has a solid record of profitability and enjoys an excellent share of a very desirable market. In addition, this merger will allow INB an opportunity to expand our presence in the Fort Wayne market.''

''We anticipate a dynamic future for our bank as a result of our new affiliation,'' Gates said. ''For a community bank such as ours, the proposal to join INB brings broadened capabilities, enhanced opportunities and the ability to compete in a regional market.''

The Farmers Loan and Trust Co. is the second largest bank in Whitley County. With a population of 28,000, Whitley County's growth rate between 1980 and 1988 was 6.4 percent compared to the state's average of 1.2 percent. Currently ranked as Indiana's 18th fastest growing county, Whitley's population is projected to increase 9.3 percent by the year 2000 or three times faster than the state's average population growth. Whitley County's unemployment rate is 4.6 percent, and its per capita income ranks 27th overall in the state. Major employers in the area include Magnavox, Dana Corp., United Technologies, Essex Group, Lincoln National Corp., Fort Wayne Foundry, Gripco Fastener Division of Black & Decker, General Motors, Whitley Manufacturing and Holmes & Co.

Farmers Loan and Trust operates two facilities and holds a 24 percent share of the $300 million in total county deposits.

Under terms of the agreement, shareholders of FL&T will receive $300 for each share of their stock, payable at the shareholder's election either in cash or shares of INBF common stock, subject to certain percentage limitations on the total amount of stock to be paid in the transaction. FL&T has 40,000 shares outstanding, so the transaction is valued at $12 million. The merger is subject first to a definitive agreement and then approval by the INBF board, shareholders of FL&T and regulatory authorities. The anticipated closing date is year-end 1990 or early 1991.

The Farmers Loan and Trust Co. was founded and chartered in 1907. In 1965 the bank merged with the Mayer State Bank of South Whitley which subsequently became Farmers' second branch location. Farmers Loan has been in the Gates family since it was founded by Benton Eli Gates. He served as president until 1922. Ralph Gates, governor of Indiana from 1945 - 1949, served as director and counsel to Farmers Loan and Trust for 52 years. A long-term director, John Gates was named president in 1938 and retired in 1969.

At that time, Jack S. Gates was named president, and he continues to serve in that capacity today. The current chairman of the board at Farmers Loan is Benton E. Gates Sr. He has served as a director and legal counsel for the bank since 1938.

INB Financial Corp., headquartered in Indianapolis, is Indiana's largest, independent multi-bank holding company. The corporation is parent of INB National Bank, Indianapolis; INB National Bank Northwest, Lafayette; INB Banking Co., Jeffersonville; and Chesterton State Bank, Chesterton. Two additional acquisitions, Peoples Mid-Illinois Corp. (parent of The Peoples Bank in Bloomington, Ill.) and the Peoples Savings Bank of Evansville, are pending.

KOKOMO, IN (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Delco Electronics Corp. today announced the establishment of a major development program in vehicle communications.

W.D. Helm, director of Delco Electronics' Audio Systems Business Unit, said this program is intended to support General Motors' vision of 21st century vehicles, including the Intelligent Vehicle Highway System (IVHS).

Helm also announced that an agreement has been reached with Hughes Network Systems to support this important strategic initiative. Hughes Network Systems, which is a subsidiary of Hughes Aircraft Co., has vast experience in the field of digital communication, communication networks and satellite communication. This agreement builds on the numerous cooperative programs that have been initiated between Delco Electronics and Hughes Aircraft since Hughes was purchased by General Motors Corp.

The first products expected from this development program are cellular-based communications systems. To this end, Helm also announced that an agreement has been reached with Motorola Inc. to cooperatively develop cellular products for General Motors vehicles. Motorola, a world leader in cellular and two-way communications, is headquartered in Schaumburg, Illinois.

SEATTLE (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Pacific First Financial Corp. Friday announced it has purchased certain assets and assumed certain liabilities of American Savings, A Federal Savings and Loan Association, from the Resolution Trust Corp. for $30 million.

American Savings operates 17 branch locations in Utah and 45 locations in Oregon, of which 33 are located in Fred Meyer stores. In the state of Oregon, American operates under the name of Willamette Savings. All branches will be reopened under the name Pacific First Bank, FSB (Washington).

American has 215,000 deposit accounts; 40,000 in Utah; 175,000 in Oregon. Deposits total $1.2 billion. The RTC will provide cash of approximately

Pacific First is one of the few savings institutions in the United States to hold an investment grade rating. It is a wholly owned subsidiary of the A++ rated (CBRS -- Canadian Bond Rating Service) Royal Trustco Ltd. of Toronto.

''We are excited about this acquisition because customers will benefit from our broad line of financial services and expanded distribution system as well as our conservative financial management and strong capitalization '' said Dr. Jerry E. Pohlman, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Pacific First.

Kenneth Thrasher, senior vice president and chief financial officer of Fred Meyer Inc., said he is pleased with Pacific First's acquisition of Willamette Savings locations in the Fred Meyer stores. ''Pacific First's retail customer orientation, with its emphasis on client convenience and product value, will be a good match with our company's one-stop shopping concept.''

Pacific First Financial is part of the Royal Trustco Ltd. group of financial service companies with a network of operations throughout Canada and the western United States and in the United Kingdom, Europe, the Caribbean and Asia. It has assets under administration of $134.1 billion (CDN).

Pacific First Financial now has 180 offices in Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada and Utah. With assets of $8.2 billion, Pacific First is the largest savings institution headquartered in the Pacific Northwest.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 7) BUSINESS WIRE - The management of California Energy Company Inc. has been informed that a complaint has been filed in the Inyo County Superior Court by Mission Power Engineering Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of Southern California Edison Co., naming California Energy Co. and 30 others including subsidiary and affiliated corporations and partners as co-defendants.

None of the defendants has yet been served with process in the action.

According to Charles T. Condy, chairman and chief executive officer of California Energy Co., the claims for additional compensation by Mission Power Engineering arise out of that company's construction of a series of eight geothermally fueled electric power generating plants for the Coso Geothermal Project, under three contracts having an aggregate contract price of approximately $310 million.

Condy pointed out that disputes over compensation are not unusual in construction projects of this magnitude, and discussions concerning the claims and counterclaims of both parties have been in progress for some time.

The company disputes the amounts claimed by Mission Power Engineering which were previously rejected as change orders through the procedures provided for in the contracts between the parties.

DALLAS (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Holly Corp. (AMEX:HOC) Friday reported results for the company's third quarter and first nine months ended Apr. 30, 1990.

Holly's net income was $1.9 million for the third quarter of fiscal 1990, compared to the record $6 million for the third quarter of the prior year. For the nine months ended Apr. 30, 1990, net income was $11.3 million, compared to the record $24.3 million for the same period of the prior year.

Per share net income for the third quarter of fiscal 1990 was 23 cents, compared to 73 cents per share in the prior year. For the nine months, net income per share was $1.37, compared to $2.94 in the prior year.

The decrease in earnings for the quarter ended Apr. 30, 1990, as compared to the prior year's quarter, is largely due to lower refining margins, as crude oil costs increased and refined product prices decreased relative to the prior period.

Last year's earnings, while a historic record for a third quarter, were affected by the completion of a major maintenance turnaround in late February 1989, which caused a temporary decline in sales of refined products of 20 percent as compared to the current quarter.

Exacerbating the results in the current quarter was a mechanical failure at the company's Navajo refinery in Artesia, New Mexico that reduced sales of light products for approximately two weeks in the first part of Apr. 1990, a period when refining margins had improved.

The company is seeking to recover the losses sustained as a result of the mechanical failure, but is presently unable to estimate the amount of such recovery, if any. Refinery margins are currently at high levels, but there is no assurance that such high levels will continue.

The significant decrease in earnings for the nine months ended Apr. 30, 1990, as compared to the prior years record level, is primarily attributable to last year's higher margins, particularly the very strong margins in the first quarter of the prior year.

Contributing to the earning's decrease for both the three and nine months ended Apr. 30, 1990, as compared to the prior year's periods, were lower interest income from investments of surplus cash and interest expense increases for a net decrease in pre-tax income of $1.2 million and $3.1 million, respectively, as a consequence of the $82.5 million distribution to stockholders as a dividend in July 1989.

Also contributing to the earnings decrease were increased oil and gas exploration expenses of $300,000 and $1.3 million for the quarter and nine months, respectively.

The increase in revenues for the three months ended Apr. 30, 1990 as compared to the corresponding prior period was principally due to the decrease in sales volumes in the prior year occasioned by the shutdown of the New Mexico refinery for its scheduled major maintenance turnaround.

Volumes of refined products sold in the current three month period were at record levels of 47,300 barrels-per-day. The increase in revenues for the nine month period was principally due to higher volumes sold, and higher prices in the first six months of the current year.

Holly Corp., through its affiliates, Navajo Refining Co. and Montana Refining Co., is engaged in the refining of petroleum products.

NUT TREE, CA (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Grizzly Capital Inc. (OTC) Friday announced it has agreed to acquire the assets of Plants For Tomorrow, a Florida-based environmental sciences company.

The proposed transaction was introduced and arranged by Cohig & Associates Inc., a Denver-based investment banking firm.

The proposed transaction calls for Grizzly to issue 19,750,000 shares of its restricted common stock. Upon completion of the transaction there will be 23 million shares of common stock issued and outstanding. Following completion of the transaction, the company plans to change its name to Plants For Tomorrow Inc. and effect a 1 for 10 reverse stock split.

Based in West Palm Beach, Fla., Plants For Tomorrow specializes in the propagation and growing of more than 400 species of native and aquatic plants and plant seeds, and is the sole source of supply for certain varieties.

In addition, the company engages in the reclamation, restoration and mitigation of environmental damage resulting from real estate development, and in beach and shoreline restoration.

Plants For Tomorrow, which was founded by Carl T. Bates Jr. in 1975, has been profitable every year since inception and reported audited after tax net income of nearly $129,000 on revenues of $1.1 million for its fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1989. Unaudited results for the first quarter ended March 31, 1990 showed pre-tax net income of $78,860 on revenue of $430,189. The company has total assets of $1,201,744, a net worth of $495,000 and a backlog of approximately $650,000.

PHOENIX, AZ (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Aztar Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS:AZTR) Friday announced the promotion of Robert S. Fiore to president and general manager of the company's Ramada Express Hotel and Casino in Laughlin, Nev. He had been senior vice president and general manager.

''We are very pleased with the outstanding and constantly improving financial performance of the Ramada Express in the Laughlin market,'' said Paul E. Rubeli, Aztar president and chief executive officer. ''Bob Fiore's promotion is well- deserved recognition of his contribution to that strong performance.''

Fiore, 49, joined Ramada Inc., in June 1988 as senior vice president and controller of Ramada's gaming group, out of which Aztar was formed in the restructuring of Ramada in December 1989. He became senior vice president and general manager of the Ramada Express in August 1989.

Fiore came to the company from a position as senior vice president and treasurer of Trump's Castle Hotel & Casino in Atlantic City, N.J. His experience includes nearly 24 years in the casino gaming industry.

The Ramada Express was opened in June 1988 with 406 rooms, a 30,000-square-foot casino and five food and beverage establishments. Known as the ''Gambling Train of Laughlin,'' the property features a Victorian-era railroading theme highlighted by a train that conveys guests between the casino hotel and the parking lot on a track nearly a mile long.

Aztar Corp. operates TropWorld Casino and Entertainment Resort in Atlantic City, N.J., and the Tropicana Resort and Casino, Las Vegas, Nev., in addition to the Ramada Express.

INDIANPOLIS (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - The U.S. Meat Export Federation (MEF) reported a dramatic increase in the impact of beef and pork exports on domestic livestock prices at the MEF International Meat Export Exchange now underway in Indianapolis.

The findings come from an impact study conducted by CF Resources Inc. in Denver.

According to the study, 1989 beef exports contributed $4.66 per hundredweight (cwt) to the value of fed cattle; $7.45/cwt to the value of feeder cattle and $10.52/cwt to the value of calves. These values are up more than 60 percent from comparable 1988 figures. The impact of pork exports on domestic hog values was also up significantly in 1989, adding $1.65/cwt to the value of hogs at slaughter.

MEF President Philip M. Seng told livestock and industry leaders at the international conference that, ''These figures clearly reflect the significant increases we saw in 1989 U.S. red meat exports and their corresponding value to the beef and pork industries.'' Seng predicted that red meat exports will continue to grow in 1990.

''We're on the edge of a new frontier,'' he added. ''Foreign markets will continue to grow and will play an ever more important role in the future of the U.S. livestock and red meat industries.''

The study also quantified the equivalent value of 1989 beef and pork exports on feedgrain usage. According to the study, 92 million bushels of corn, valued at $233.6 million, were used to meet export demand for high-quality, grain-fed beef and pork in 1989. This is up from 72 million bushels the year before.

Total 1989 beef exports, estimated at 850 million pounds (carcass weight) accounted for 3.7 percent of total U.S. production -- up from 2.9 percent in 1988. Total pork exports in 1989 were estimated at 265 million pounds (carcass weight) and accounted for 1.7 percent of total 1989 hog slaughter.

The total equivalent value of all pork and pork product exports (pork, lard and offals) in 1989 amounted to $2.51 per head. The total equivalent value of all beef and beef product exports (beef, hides and offals) in 1989 amounted to $79.16 per head, nearly 10 percent of the value of an average steer at slaughter.

The Denver-based U.S. Meat Export Federation is a non-profit trade organization responsible for developing foreign markets for U.S. red meat and red meat products. MEF has offices in Tokyo, Japan; Hong Kong; Hamburg, West Germany; and Caracas, Venezuela.

HOUSTON (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) on May 21 approved an order affirming its grant to Mojave Pipeline Co. of optional expedited certificates to construct a 385-mile natural gas pipeline from Topock, Ariz. to the heavy oil fields in Kern County, Calif..

Mojave Friday notified the FERC of its formal acceptance of such certificates.

Mike Holland, president and chief executive officer of Mojave Pipeline Operating Co. said, ''The FERC's action was significant in that it removed several regulatory uncertainities that the project faced.

FERC issued Mojave an initial certificate on May 8, 1989. Mojave then reached a settlement with Kern River Gas Transmission Co. and Southern California Gas Co., under which Mojave and Kern River would construct a joint project along portions of their routes in California.

The Kern River project will commence in southwest Wyoming and interconnect with Mojave's pipeline east of Barstow, Calif. FERC issued an initial order authorizing the joint project on Jan. 24, 1990. The certificates accepted by Mojave Friday were issued on May 21 and finalized federal regulatory authorizations by addressing issues arising from the Jan. 24 order.

Mojave is a joint partnership of Enron Corp. and El Paso Natural Gas Co. According to Holland, Mojave has firm transportation commitments for about 80 percent of its initial capacity and expects to execute additional contracts in the near future. Only 90 million cubic feet per day of Mojave's initial capacity remain available for interested customers.

The Mojave project will be built and operated by Mojave Pipeline Operating Co. which has similar responsibilities for the Kern River portion of the joint project.

SAN DIEGO (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Kaypro Corp. Friday announced that it has moved from its former 12-acre Stevens Avenue facility in Solana Beach, consolidating all administrative, sales and manufacturing operations in a 17,000-square-foot building located at 2052 Corte Del Nogal in Carlsbad.

The announcement was made by Roy Salisbury, Kaypro's president and chief executive officer.

According to Salisbury, the Solana Beach property was owned by Kaypro founder Andrew F. Kay, who sold it to the Los Angeles-based Signature Group in 1989 as part of a program to pay off company debts. Since then, he said, Kaypro has been leasing the property from Signature.

He described the property as a ''huge, sprawling, inefficient five-structure complex which we felt was detrimental to and no longer necessary for our operations.

''This relocation, marking the first time in Kaypro's history that all company business is located under one roof, means substantial overhead savings combined with a dramatic improvement in our day-to-day operations and a more productive interaction between our various departments.

''Further,'' he said, ''as part of our Chapter 11 restructuring program, we have a responsibility to the court and an obligation to Kaypro's shareholders and creditors to keep our costs at the lowest possible level as we execute what is proving to be a successful turnaround program.

''While sales are steadily improving as we attempt to restore Kaypro to a prominent position in the personal computer marketplace, we sincerely believe that the move from Solana Beach is definitely in everyone's best interests.''

According to Salisbury, Non Linear Systems, founded in the early 1950s by Kay and now a Kaypro subsidiary, will continue to occupy ''about 4,000 square feet of space'' at the former Kaypro Solana Beach complex ''for the time being.'' He said Kaypro's successful discount retail computer store ''will soon be moved to our new Carlsbad headquarters.''

Salisbury said that he didn't know what future plans the Signature Group has for the Stevens Avenue property. ''We're very happy with our new home and feel we've made a move in the right direction.''

MOSCOW (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Baskin Robbins, the first American franchise operation in the Soviet Union, Friday opened an ice cream store that, for the first time, makes its hand-dipped ice cream available to Moscovites in exchange for their own currency -- rubles.

The new store, located at Number 20 Arbat Street in the heart of Moscow's shopping district, represents a joint venture with ''Mosrestoranservis,'' a Moscow government entity that provides goods and services to Moscow restaurants.

It is the third Baskin-Robbins ice cream store to open in Moscow in 22 months. The first, in the Rossiya Hotel near Red Square, opened in 1988. The second store opened at the Sheremetyevo International Airport in Moscow earlier this month.

The announcement was made by Baskin-Robbins and Allied-Lyons PLC executives along with officials from the Mosrestoranservis and representatives of the Moscow City Council at a ribbon-cutting ceremony in front of the new store. Baskin-Robbins is a wholly owned subsidiary of Allied-Lyons PLC, the London-based international food, drink and leisure group.

''We are delighted that Baskin-Robbins ice cream will now be available to all Moscovites in exchange for their own currency,'' said Michael H. Cohn, president of Baskin-Robbins International, who was on hand at the ceremony with Anthony Hales, chief executive of J. Lyons & Co. Ltd., and Gennadij Maleshkov, general director of Mosrestoranservis.

''It's like letting the genie out of the bottle,'' Cohn added. ''Once they've tasted our Pralines 'n Cream, Soviet life won't be the same again.'' Will Provide Partial Dairy Support

The joint venture contains an unusual dimension: all revenue from the store during the first year will be reinvested into Baskin-Robbins' expansion in the Soviet Union, including the Ostankino plant (scheduled to open in 1992 just outside Moscow) and also to support the development of dairy farming in the Soviet Union.

The store will be staffed by 12 Soviet citizens, selected and represented by the Mosrestoranservis, including both full-time and part-time employees.

All managers will be trained at Baskin-Robbins' corporate training center and headquarters in Glendale, Calif.; others are currently receiving pre-training in Moscow, via videotapes and training materials prepared by Baskin-Robbins.

Full-time employees will receive ''base'' compensation of 250 rubles per month, with additional incentives based on the store's volume.

The store's design and initial menu follows Baskin-Robbins' traditional theme.

Twenty-five flavors -- including Baseball Nut, Cookies and Cream, Mint Chocolate Chip, Red Raspberry Cheesecake and Peanut Butter 'n Chocolate -- have been introduced to start, with ''special surprises'' and other flavors added as the store determines Moscovites' favorites.

The store will offer take-away service as well as tables outside for a ''sidewalk cafe'' setting for those who prefer relaxing amidst the excitement of the busy shopping district. Teas, coffees, soft drinks, ice cream cakes and sundaes round out the menu.

The price for one scoop of ice cream is 1.5 rubles; two scoops are 2.75 rubles. Soviet Passion for Ice Cream

Ice cream (''morozhonoye'') almost can be considered a staple of the average Russian diet. Indeed, Russian citizens have a passion for it -- Moscovites alone consume more than 200 tons, nearly 80,000 gallons of ice cream each day. And that's with only two flavors -- chocolate and vanilla -- available to most Soviet citizens in the past. (Vanilla has been the most popular in Moscow.)

The joint venture represents an aggressive worldwide expansion for Baskin-Robbins, the world's largest franchised ice cream operation with more than 3,500 stores in 44 countries, including the United States, Canada, Japan, the United Kingdom, Korea, Europe, Australia, the Middle East, the Caribbean and the Soviet Union.

MILLBRAE, CA (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Stockholders of Genentech Inc. Friday approved the $2.1 billion agreement with Roche Holding Ltd., in which Roche will acquire 60 percent of Genentech's stock.

Of the votes cast on the transaction, 97 percent were in favor as tabulated at Genentech's annual meeting held in Millbrae today. Before the transaction can become effective, requested information must be supplied to the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) and a subsequent 20-day waiting period must elapse.

Under the agreement, Roche will invest approximately $492 million in capital in Genentech. For each two shares of existing stock, Genentech stockholders will receive $36 and one share of a new redeemable common stock which will be traded on the New York Stock Exchange. During the next five years, Roche has the option to purchase the remaining shares at escalating prices ranging from $38 per share to $60 per share.

Under the terms of the agreement, which was announced on Feb. 2, Roche will be entitled to two members on Genentech's board of directors, which will be increased from 11 to 13 members. Roche will have some additional rights to protect its interest as majority stockholder, as outlined in the governance agreement that defines the relationship between the companies.

With the favorable stockholder vote, the only remaining regulatory concurrence required before the transaction becomes effective involves the FTC. Under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976, the FTC on March 23 requested more information on the proposed merger. Both companies are currently working to satisfy the FTC's request.

In the stockholder vote on the merger agreement 52,856,929 shares voted in favor and 1,199,287 shares voted against, with 225,948 shares abstaining. A majority of the 84,959,698 outstanding shares were required to approve the transaction. The stockholders also approved the 1990 stock option/stock incentive plan, ratified the selection of the company's independent auditor, and reelected four members of the board of directors.

Genentech Inc. is a leading biotechnology company with 1,800 employees and headquarters in South San Francisco, Calif. Genentech has one of the five largest hospital-based sales forces in the United States pharmaceutical industry and also directly markets its products in Canada.

Roche is a leading research-based health care company which operates on a worldwide basis with sales of $6.5 billion and facilities in more than 50 countries. The company has research centers in Switzerland, the United States, the United Kingdom and Japan.

DALLAS (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Southwest Airlines announced the recent signing of a new agreement covering its fleet service employees.

The agreement reached between the company and the Southwest Airlines Ramp, Operations and Provisioning Association (ROPA), is effective from May 16, 1990, through Dec. 31, 1994, and provides for increased compensation for current employees while introducing competitive market rates for entry-level employees.

Fleet service employees are the ramp agents, provisioning agents, and operations agents for Southwest Airlines that are responsible for the boarding and deplaning of passengers, passenger baggage, cargo and mail and provisioning of the aircraft while on the ground. The expedient performance by these employees of their functions enables Southwest to maintain its unique quick turnaround of aircraft.

Southwest Airlines Chairman of the Board, President and Chief Executive Officer Herbert D. Kelleher said, "We are extremely pleased to be able to announce this agreement of almost five years' duration.

This is the first agreement between the company and ROPA, an association formed in 1989 by Southwest Airlines employees to represent the more than 1,300 fleet service employees at the company.

"The duration of this agreement is a positive indication of the excellent working relationship that exists between Southwest Airlines, our highly productive fleet service employees, and their association."

RICHMOND, BRITISH COLUMBIA (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Great Canadian Office Supplies Warehouse is the new trade name for Vancouver-based HQ Office International Inc. (NASDAQ:HQOIU (units)/HQOIA (Class A common stock)/HQOIW (Class A warrants); PSE:HQI (Class A common stock)/HQI.WS A (Class A warrants) effective Thursday, June 7, announced George J. Handgis president and chief executive officer.

In conjunction with the change, HQ Office International announced that its HeadQuarters Office Supplies Warehouse superstores have been changed over to the Great Canadian Office Supplies Warehouse name.

"The company has chosen to use the new trade name Great Canadian Office Supplies Warehouse," said Handgis. "We believe this new name better represents our market position as the premier office supply warehouse in Canada."

With locations in greater Vancouver, the company is Canada's first warehouse-style office supplies and equipment chain. Founded in July 1989, the company operates one-stop office supplies and equipment superstores for small to medium-sized businesses and individual consumers.

Name-brand office products are offered at deeply discounted prices, in addition to excellent service and guaranteed satisfaction. The initial Richmond location premiered in March of this year.

The company's name change is in compliance with a recent Federal Court of Canada injunction that prohibits the company's use of the words "HQ" or "HeadQuarters" as trade names or trademarks in Canada. The company will retain its corporate name, HQ Office International Inc., and trade under its NASDAQ and Pacific Stock Exchange symbols.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - MAXXAM Inc. (MXM) announced Friday that its chief financial officer, James V. Iaco, will resign from his position, effective Dec. 31.

No successor has been named at this time.

Iaco, 45, noted that his decision was directly linked to MAXXAM's previously announced decision to relocate its headquarters from Los Angeles to Houston. The relocation is expected to be completed by the fall of this year.

Iaco expressed his support for the company's future. ''My time with MAXXAM has been rewarding and fulfilling,'' he said. ''I will miss the people and the stimulating environment of MAXXAM.''

Iaco said that he had not yet made a decision regarding his future business activities. ''My immediate attention will be directed at fulfilling my obligations as MAXXAM's chief financial officer,'' he said.

MAXXAM President William C. Leone noted that ''Jim Iaco has been a vital member of the senior management team that, during the past decade, shaped a blend of various companies into an integrated corporation with strongly enhanced values.''

MAXXAM, through its ownership of Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp., a fully integrated aluminum producer, is engaged in aluminum production; through its ownership of The Pacific Lumber Co., is engaged in forest product operations; and through its ownership of various other subsidiaries, is engaged in real estate development.

MAXXAM's common stock is traded on the American, Pacific and Philadelphia stock exchanges under the ticker symbol MXM.

DENVER (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - George K. Hansen, president and chief executive officer of Bayly Corp., Friday announced the results of operations for the second fiscal quarter ended April 30, 1990.

Hansen commented on the second quarter results and said, "Bayly Corp. reported net income for the quarter ended April 30, 1990 of $508,000. This is a decrease of $500,000 from the $1,008,000 net income reported for the same quarter of fiscal 1989.

"The decrease is largely attributable to $700,000 of unusual expenses reported, primarily pension curtailment and severance costs, related to the closing of Bayly's Sanger, Calif., plant.

"An additional $100,000 of pension costs which would normally be spread throughout fiscal 1990 were also fully recognized in the second quarter because of the closing of the Sanger plant. Additionally, $300,000 of unusual income was recognized in the second quarter of fiscal 1990.

"This income resulted from the resale by Op Sunwear Ltd. of licenses Bayly had originally sold to Op Sunwear Ltd. in 1988. Gross margins were comparable between the second quarters of fiscal 1990 and fiscal 1989, being 32 percent and 33 percent, respectively. Net sales increased $589,000 in the second quarter of fiscal 1990 compared to the same quarter in 1989.

"Although the gross margin was slightly lower for the second quarter of fiscal 1990 when compared to the same quarter of fiscal 1989, the gross margin achieved in the first six months of fiscal 1990 of 31 percent was a large improvement over the 28 percent achieved for the first six months of fiscal 1989.

"Net sales through the second quarter of fiscal 1990 of $43,605,000 were comparable to the $43,495,000 achieved in the same period for fiscal 1989.

"Administrative, selling, and distribution expenses remained under tight control and at virtually the same levels during the second quarter and year-to-date of fiscal 1990 compared to the same periods of fiscal 1989. Interest expense decreased $138,000 and $118,000 from fiscal 1989 to fiscal 1990 for the quarter and six months, respectively.

"However, the components of the interest expense have changed. Long-term interest decreased considerably due to the exchange in early January 1990 of $10 million of senior debt (the original senior debt was $20 million) for $10 million of Series A perferred stock.

"However, short-term interest increased due to $5 million borrowed for a portion of the first quarter from a major shareholder and increased borrowings available under the new banking arrangement since January 1990. The $5 million borrowed from a major shareholder was exchanged for $5 million of Series B preferred stock with the refinancing accomplished in January."

PHOENIX (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Arizona Public Service Co. President and Chief Executive Officer Mark De Michele sent a memo to the utility's approximately 7,700 employees this afternoon.

He said that because of competitive pressures and a weak Arizona economy, APS will accelerate ongoing companywide efforts to further reduce its operating costs.

"I believe that additional belt-tightening and the cost-savings we achieve can be reflected as a reduction in the pending rate case before the Arizona Corporation Commission," he said.

That determination is expected in the next couple of months. De Michele also said the additional cost-cuttings will require another reduction in workforce.

But he stressed that "at this time, I don't know how many employees will be included or what areas will be impacted." He said he will have staffing plans "no later than October."

CINCINNATI (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Star Bank N.A., Cincinnati Friday announced three programs designed to enhance its ongoing Community Outreach Program.

These programs include (1) the Home Advantage Program which carries a commitment of $30 million over the next five years to fund affordable home purchases and rehabitation; (2) a $5 million target over five years for neighborhood business loans; and (3) the Neighborhood Development Grant Program, committing $180,000, over the next three years, in individual grants to neighborhood organizations to facilitate lending under the Home Advantage Program and to neighborhood businesses. It is anticipated grants will be up to $5,000 each.

The announcement was made jointly Friday by Samuel M. Cassidy, president and chief executive officer of Star Bank N.A., Cincinnati and John M. Bullock, executive vice president and director of Community Outreach for the bank.

Commenting on the three programs, Cassidy said they are ''designed to broaden Star Bank's already substantial commitment to improving the living environment in our community. Moreover, they are supportive of our Community Outreach theme of 'Working Together We Can Make A Difference.' '' Home Advantage Program

The purpose of Star's Home Advantage Program is to enable residents of specified low- and moderate-income census tracts in Hamilton County to purchase, construct, rehabilitate or refinance to rehabilitate single-family homes or owner-occupied homes with one-to-four units.

Terms of the Home Advantage Program include up to 95 percent financing and 1/4 percent reduction from standard Star Bank mortgage and home improvement loan interest rates. In addition, on mortgage loans closing costs will be limited to the bank's out-of-pocket expenses only and prepayment fees are waived.

Home improvement loans will be made available with terms of up to 10 years depending on the amount borrowed. Of the $30 million commitment, $2.5 million will be specifically designated for low-income individuals with income under $15,000 with rates 1 percent below standard Star Bank mortgage rates.

Commenting on the Home Advantage Program funding level, Bullock said: ''Affordable housing is perhaps the most fundamental element of a community's quality of life. We appreciate all of the efforts of Communities United for Action and other community groups in helping us to design the Home Advantage Program. It's the American dream... and Star Bank, Cincinnati wants to help make it come true.''

Neighborhood Business Loans

Bullock said: ''Star Bank recognized that it is important to address the financial needs of businesses which are successfully operating in our neighborhood communities. To underscore the desire of Star Bank to help such businesses, we have targeted $5 million over a 5-year period for business loans in targeted low- and moderate-income census tracts in Hamilton County.

''Lending to such neighborhood businesses will include equipment financing lines of credit, receivables, inventory and contract lending plus lending for facility expansion.'' Neighborhood Development Grant Program

''Under the Neighborhood Development Grant Program, local neighborhood organizations are encouraged to provide seminars, counselling, loan documentation assistance or any other programming that will educate their community about the Home Advantage Program and Star Bank's interest in neighborhood business lending, plus encourage qualified residents and businesses to apply.

"Local residents and businesses win by having the opportunity for the loans represented by the programs and it makes good business sense for Star Bank.''

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - McKesson Corp., as part of its program to improve the effectiveness of its financial communications program, Friday released its audited financial statements for the fiscal year ended March 31.

Today's release ''accelerates the process of making our audited financial statements available to investors,'' according to Alan Seelenfreund, chairman and chief executive officer of McKesson. In the past, investors would have to wait until publication of the company's annual report in late June to obtain this material, Seelenfreund noted.

In addition to being released to the media, the annual financial statements will be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission, are available to the public from the company's Investor Relations Department and may be accessed via the First Call data base, a computerized financial information retrieval system.

The statements also will be included as an appendix to the company's proxy statement to be mailed to shareholders later this month. In 1987, McKesson became the first public company to publish a summary annual report (SAR). This year the company is issuing its fourth SAR.

In this format, the summary report contains condensed financial statements along with other financial highlights including certain forward looking information.

CHICAGO (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - United Airlines on Friday begins daily nonstop service between Portland's International Airport and Washington's Dulles International Airport.

Friday's inaugural flights mark the first time that United has offered nonstop service linking the nation's capital with Oregon.

United's Flight 169 with DC-8-71 aircraft is scheduled to depart Dulles daily at 9:00 a.m. and to arrive in Portland at 11:23 a.m. The daily eastbound Flight 170 is scheduled to depart from Portland at 1:05 p.m. and arrive at Dulles at 8:40 p.m.

Onboard Friday's inaugural Flight 169 from Dulles to Portland are Oregon Sen. Bob Packwood, Sen. Mark Hatfield, and Rep. Les AuCoin, who will hold a news conference and ribbon-cutting upon arrival at Portland's International Airport.

Accompanying the senators and congressman on the first Washington-Portland flight is Frank P. McCarron, district sales manager for United in Portland. McCarron will remain on hand to greet passengers departing on the eastbound inaugural Flight 170.

''The new flights are being added to meet additional demand for nonstop service during the summer months,'' said McCarron. ''The new service will be a real boost for both Oregon and United, bringing the average number of daily United departures from Portland to 30.

''In addition to the new Washington flights, United offers nonstop service from Portland to San Francisco, Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles, Sacramento, Seattle, Oakland and San Diego.''

In addition to the convenience of nonstop service to the nation's capital, customers can make convenient connections at United's Dulles hub to more than 50 United/United Express destinations to the north and south, as well as United's new daily nonstop service to Frankfurt.

PHOENIX (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - America West Airlines' (NASDAQ:AWAL/ PSE:AWA) Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Edward R. Beauvais has issued the following statement:

''We are gratified to learn that the Department of Transportation Public Counsel has recommended America West Airlines to receive the route authority to provide service between Honolulu and Nagoya.

''This is our third international route authority filing and the DOT Public Counsel has twice expressed their confidence in America West.

''However, this is only the first step in a very meticulous process. We are looking forward to DOT Chief Administrative Law Judge John J. Mathias' recommendation which is expected in early August. We anticipate the final decision from the DOT to be announced approximately 90 days after the CALJ's recommendation. At that time, a total of six Japan route authorities will be awarded.

''America West continues to remain optimistic toward our future expansion into the Pacific Rim. We are encouraged by the DOT Public Counsel's recommendation and we also have tentative plans to begin new service to Taipei and Hong Kong later this year.

''We will receive two Boeing 747s this year which we plan to use for these international routes. Our current 747 Honolulu operation offers superb inflight services which have been patterned after international flights. We are confident that the customer service provided by the employee-owners of America West ranks among the best in the world. And hopefully, we will have a chance to prove it in Taipei, Hong Kong and Nagoya.''

SCOTTSDALE, AZ (JUNE 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Transform Logic Corp. (NASDAQ:TLOG), the Scottsdale-based developer of CASE software development products, Friday announced positive second quarter results.

For the second quarter 1990, revenues were $3,219,800 and earnings were $35,700. This compares to revenue of $3,066,300 and a loss of $2,165,300 for the second quarter of 1989.

While revenues were increased, operating costs and expenses were reduced from $5,199,800 in the second quarter 1989, to $3,168,200 in the second quarter of 1990. James S. Campbell, president and chief executive officer said, ''These second quarter results represent the first quarter of our successful merger of Nastec into Transform Logic. Consolidation of most functions has been completed; this substantially reduced our costs. While the resulting profits were modest, they met our plan and we feel the combined operating organizations are on track towards a healthy future.''

IBM contract development revenues increased 130 percent in the quarter compared to the same period in 1989. Campbell stated that ''This growth supports our strategy to introduce future products within the IBM AD/Cycle framework which complement IBM's own and other vendors' products. Building on this positive relationship, IBM has just extended our development partner relationship by renewing their Master Services Agreement contract with us through November 1991.''

Campbell went on to state, ''The company will now concentrate on increasing product revenues. To support this effort: Gary Rippen has joined the company as vice president of marketing; investments in marketing programs were initiated; and new Transform application generator products are being launched. International sales, primarily through distributors, were particularly strong during the quarter, with 52 percent of product license fees generated from that area of business.''

Transform Logic is a leading producer of automated design, analysis and application generation software for use with IBM PCs and IBM mainframes, as well as other mainframes and PC compatibles. Among its major customers are American Express, Milliken, Kodak, Federal Reserve Bank, Internal Revenue Service and McDonnell-Douglas Corp.

HAYWARD, CA (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Occupational Medical Corporation of America Inc. (OMCOA), located in Hayward, Friday announced a major court victory.

On July 31, 1985, OMCOA purchased an industrial medical clinic located in Southern California from Dr. Joseph H. Cummings and Cummings Medical Corp (''Cummings'').

Disputes arose after sale which resulted in litigation. In that litigation, Cummings sought to recover in excess of $1 million, in part based on allegations that OMCOA defaulted in the payment of a promissory note for $700,000; together with interest thereon and attorneys' fees. OMCOA sought recovery for damages related to fraud, breach of contract, and unfair competition, along with other claims.

In response to a motion filed by OMCOA in this litigation, Judge Edward Kakita of the Los Angeles County Superior Court ordered dismissal of all of Cummings' claims against OMCOA, and Drs. Don R. Livingston and Larry Harikian of OMCOA. Further, Kakita struck Cummings' response to the claims asserted by OMCOA, allowing OMCOA to take default of Cummings.

On Thursday, Kakita denied Cummings' application to reconsider or modify his prior order.

The effect of Kakita's order is to extinguish the over $1 million dollars in damages Cummings was seeking against OMCOA and to permit OMCOA to proceed unopposed on its claims against Cummings. No date has yet been set for the hearing to prove up OMCOA's unopposed claims. When the hearing takes place, OMCOA will seek compensatory damages in excess of $3 million plus an undetermined amount in punitive damages.

Cummings has indicated that he will appeal the courts' rulings.

OMCOA operates eight occupational medical facilities and three rehabilitation centers in California, Washington and Oregon, and Chx, a medical review company.

SANTA ANA, CA (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Gish Biomedical Inc. (NASDAQ:GISH) a developer and manufacturer of specialized devices to specialty segments of the medical community announced a three-for-two stock split of its common stock Friday.

The record date for the split has been set for June 13, 1990, with an expected distribution date of July 5. Cash in lieu of stock will be distributed for fractional shares as determined by the market price of the company's common stock on June 13.

Per Jeanne Miller, Gish's vice president and chief financial officer, ''The board of directors felt that increasing the number of shares outstanding would result in a broader and more efficient market for the corporation's common stock.'' She also commented that the recent increase in the price of the company's common stock created a favorable environment for a stock split at this time.

Gish manufactures specialty devices used in open-heart surgery, autologous blood transfusions, oncology, orthopedics and other specialized applications within the hospital. Gish distributes its products through an international dealer network that sells directly to the hospital's specialists.

Gish maintains a competitive advantage through innovative product design, quality of manufacture and superior customer service.

COLUMBIA, SC (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - AnalySystems, a leading South Carolina drug testing company, is offering free drug tests to all candidates running for political office in the state of South Carolina.

''We have sent a letter to political candidates making our services available to them,'' said Barry Smith, general manager for AnalySystems, a Columbia-based business with eight offices in the state.

AnalySystems officials decided to make the offer to political candidates because drug testing has become a hot issue in many races this year.

''The issue of drug abuse has recently muscled its way into a a new arena: politics,'' Smith said. ''In South Carolina, we have seen it tinge the races for lieutenant governor and Richland County solicitor.

''In Berkeley County, there has been a call for all candidates to submit to drug testing. In Winnsboro, one candidate took out paid ads to challenge his opponent to take a drug test, and his opponent took out ads publicizing the results of that test.''

Since the demand for drug testing is there, AnalySystems wants to provide a public service to candidates, Smith said. ''We are a service organization with expertise in an area that, for whatever reason, has found its way to the front-burner of electioneering this year,'' he said.

''We attach neither strings nor values to what we are offering. All we're saying to candidates is, it's here if you want it and it's free.''

AnalySystems, a service of Columbia Bio-Medical, will not make public the names of those tested nor the results of tests. ''That decision is up to the individual,'' Smith said.

Anyone running for political office can get a free drug test, Smith said. Candidates can take the test at any of AnalySystems' eight offices, located in Anderson, Greenwood, Columbia, Greenville, Seneca, Spartanburg, Orangeburg and Charleston. To make an appointment, call 1-800-848-4245 between 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

FRESNO, CA (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - WestAir Holdings Inc. (ASE:WAH), operating as United Express through marketing agreements with United Air Lines (UAL), Friday reported preliminary traffic results for the month of May 1990.

The airline boarded 238,755 passengers during May, a 20 percent increase compared to the same month last year when the company boarded 199,662 customers.

Revenue passenger miles (RPMs) in May increased 29 percent from 40,932,000 in 1989 to 52,690,000 during May 1990, Available seat miles (ASMs) in May increased 34 percent from 92,468,000 in 1989 to 123,999,000 in 1990.

Load factor for the month was 42.5 percent, down 1.8 percentage points from the 44.3 percent figure logged during May 1989.

''We continued to add capacity in May through increased utilization of our aircraft, as well as the addition of one Embraer Brasilia to our fleet,'' said Timothy P. Flynn, chairman of WestAir Holding Inc.

''Our May 1 schedule adjustment featured the inauguration of service to Asheville, Tenn., from our Dulles hub, along with the redeployment of jet capacity from our winter markets (Tucson and Palm Springs) to our strong summer jet markets.''

''Also in May, we saw fuel prices continue to decline and, despite some promotional pricing during the month by airlines serving the Bay Area-L.A. Basin corridor, early indications are our yields have been minimally affected,'' Flynn said.

Through the first five months of 1990, WestAir Holding Inc. boarded 1,121,064 passengers, up 28 percent over the same period last year when 875,306 passengers were boarded. Revenue passenger miles for the five months were up 38 percent, with 250,803,000 RPMs logged in 1990, compared to 181,606,000 during 1989. Available seat miles through May were 578,370,000, up 41 percent compared to the 410,540,000 ASMs logged in 1989.

Load factor during the first five months of 1990 was 43.4 percent, down .8 percentage points compared to the 44.2 percent figure logged during the same period in 1989.

WestAir Holding Inc., which operates through two wholly owned subsidiaries and one operating division -- WestAir/United Express, NPA/United Express, and Atlantic Coast Airlines/United Express -- is the largest regional airline company in the United States.

The company operates over 850 daily flights and serves 57 cities in the West and along the East Coast utilizing both jet and turbo-prop aircraft. The company's major hubs are Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Ore., Seattle, Fresno, Sacramento and Washington D.C.

SOUTHBOROUGH, MA (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Bytex Corp., based here, announces Comdisco Disaster Recovery Services Inc. (CDRS) in Rosemont, Ill., has installed Bytex UNITY Network Switching Systems and UNITY Management System software in five of their national Computer and Business Recovery Facilities.

This is part of a new $1 million contract. Future plans call for Bytex installations in all CDRS installations.

UNITY 50 Network Switching Systems are providing Comdisco's Computer and Business Recovery Facilities with increased capability to reconfigure Comdisco's customers' networks, as well as providing them with enhanced network test and monitoring functions.

The five CDRS sites using Bytex systems are loacted in Cypress and San Ramon, Calif.; Smyrna, Ga.; Carlstadt, N.J. and Wood Dale, Ill.

UNITY 50 systems protect networks in each site against failure. All UNITY 50 subsystems, power, control and data paths are fully redundant to ensure there is no single point of failure. On-line diagnostic programs continuously monitor and test all subsystems. If a failure occurs, redundant subsystems are switched on-line immediately, with no interruption of operation.

CDRS manages their UNITY 50 Switching Systems via UNITY Management Systems (UMS). UMS provides CDRS with the flexibility they require to create and store a large number of custom configurations. The configurations can be easily updated to reflect changes made to customers' networks.

In the event of a disaster at one of the CDRS customers' sites, applicable configurations are quickly downloaded from UMS to the UNITY Switching System at the CDRS recovery facility. This provides their customer with backup facilities resembling their on-line network.

Founded in 1980, CDRS is the world's leading provider of Business Continuity services. It provides a network of fully equipped Computer and Business Recovery Facilities which provide backup computing and network capabilities in the event of fire, flood, power outage or any disaster affecting a customer's data center or end-user areas.

In addition to its network of North America Recovery Facilities, CDRS also covers Canada through Comdisco Disaster Recovery Services Canada Ltd., and is affiliated with FAILSAFE ROC Ltd. (ROC), located in the U.K., and Ageris International in Paris, France.

Comdisco Inc., parent company of CDRS, is traded on the New York and Midwest stock exchanges with the trading symbol of CDO.

Bytex designs, manufactures, markets and supports fault-tolerant electronic matrix switching systems and related data communications products. Bytex is the leading worldwide supplier with an installed base of more than 4,000 switches. According to International Data Corp., Bytex has approximately 36 percent of the U.S. market. Bytex is traded on the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol BYTX.

OAK BROOK, IL (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - McDonald's Corporation announced Friday that it's 8,200-plus U.S. restaurants will post complete nutrition information -- including all ingredients and nutrient values.

Nutrition information will be posted by the end of July.

Ed Rensi, President of McDonald's U.S.A., said the decision to be the first restaurants nationwide to post complete nutrition and ingredient information on all permanently listed menu items is a ''natural step in our long-standing commitment to provide our customers with this information, which we began offering nearly two decades ago.''

''As a foodservice company, we care about both nutrition and our customers. It only makes sense to do everything we can to address both. We've expanded our menu to offer a variety of dietary choices. We've lowered the fat, cholesterol and sodium in our products. And we provide our customers with the information they need to make informed choices.

''We think the simpler it is for our customers to learn the facts about our products, the easier it will be for them to see how well McDonald's fits into their own balanced diet,'' said Rensi.

According to Michael Goldblatt, Ph.D., Director of Nutrition and Product Development at McDonald's, ''this program provides simple, complete nutrition and ingredient information on all our products. And since this information will be permanently posted in our restaurants, we can now guarantee our customers that all the information they require to make smart menu choices is there when they need it.''

McDonald's is the world's leading foodservice organization, serving 22 million people each day in more than 11,200 restaurants in 52 countries. About 75 percent of McDonald's restaurant businesses are locally owned and operated by independent entrepreneurs.

BEDMINSTER, NJ (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - NUI Corp. (NYSE: NUI) announced Friday that it had been informed that United Water Resources, (NYSE: UWR) would not exercise its right to terminate the previously announced agreement to purchase the water operations and related assets of Pennsylvania Enterprises Inc. (NASDAQ: PENT) and its wholly owned subsidiary Pennsylvania Gas and Water Co.

UWR had until June 7 to terminate the agreement if it determined that the suit, concerning water quality, would materially adversely affect the water business. Since UWR did not terminate the agreement by the June 7 deadline, it cannot terminate the agreement in the future on the account of any future developments in this litigation.

The merger between NUI and PEI and the sale to UWR of the water operations and related assets is dependent upon a number of other conditions including the expiration of the waiting period under Federal antitrust laws; receipt of regulatory approvals and NUI, PENT and UWR stockholder approvals.

As previously announced, the merger agreement between PEI and NUI provides that stockholders of PEI will receive $52.05 for each share of PEI common stock. Forty percent of the aggregate purchase price will be payable in cash and the remaining 60 percent in shares of NUI common stock, valued at the average price over 20 trading days prior to the merger.

In no event will PEI stockholders receive more than 3.0 shares or fewer than 2.6 shares for each full share of PEI common stock exchanged for NUI common stock. The consummation of the transactions contemplated by the merger agreement is conditioned on the sale of the water operations and related assets to UWR.

NUI is the parent company of Elizabethtown Gas and its Florida division City Gas of Florida. Headquartered in Bedminster, it is an exempt public utility holding company with approximately 6.0 million shares of common stock outstanding which are traded on the New York Stock Exchange and quoted under the symbol ''NUI''. It is engaged in the distribution of natural gas to approximately 300,000 customers in New Jersey and Florida.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - American International Group Inc. (AIG) and Fischbach Corp. jointly announced Friday that they have executed a merger agreement in which a newly-formed subsidiary of AIG will acquire Fischbach for $11 per share of Fischbach common stock.

Pursuant to the merger agreement, the AIG subsidiary will commence a cash tender offer to purchase all of the outstanding common stock of Fischbach for $11 per share.

Immediately after execution of the merger agreement, AIG exercised its previously announced option to purchase from APL Corp. (''APL'') the common stock of Fischbach owned by it for the same price per share and, as permitted by such option, requested that APL tender the shares subject to the option for purchase in the tender offer.

As previously reported, APL owns an aggregate of 2,068,370 shares of Fischbach common stock, $470,000 aggregate principal amount of Fischback's 8-1/2 percent convertible subordinated debentures and $6,001,000 aggregate principal amount of Fischbach's 4-3/4 percent convertible subordinated debentures or approximately 54 percent of Fischbach's outstanding voting securities (assuming the conversion by APL of such debentures owned by it).

The purchase of Fischbach common stock by AIG under the merger agreement and pursuant to the exercise of the option is subject to customary terms, conditions and approvals, including the expiration of applicable waiting periods under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976 and the delivery and review of certain schedules called for by the merger agreement.

AIG is a leading international insurance organization and the largest underwriter of commercial and industrial insurance in the United States. Its member companies write property, casualty, marine, life and financial services insurance in more than 130 countries and jurisdictions, and are increasingly engaged in a range of other financial services.

American International Group Inc.'s common stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange, as well as the stock exchanges in London and Tokyo.

LOUISVILLE, KY (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Rally's Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:RLLY) expects to achieve record earnings for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1990, the company said Friday.

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Richard F. Sherman said the company's results will be in line with analyst expectations for fiscal 1990. Sherman said he believes the company will exceed analysts' projections for calendar 1990 of 72 cents per share.

Sherman said a report yesterday confused fiscal and calendar 1990 estimates.

As previously reported, the company reported record revenues and earnings for the quarter and nine months ending April 1, 1990. Earnings for the third quarter reached $934,000 (14 cents per share) and revenues were $17.4 million. That compares with earnings of $242,000 (6 cents per share) on revenues of $7.6 million during the same period in 1989.

For the nine-month period, revenues nearly doubled from $21.7 million in 1989 to a record $42.7 million in 1990, and net income rose from $1.2 million (31 cents per share) to $2.5 million (44 centsper share). Systemwide sales for franchised and company units increased 66 percent from the prior period to $115 million.

Rally's, cited recently by INC. Magazine as the nation's fifth fastest growing public company, is the largest operator of double drive-thru restaurants in the United States.

CLEVELAND, OH (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Cleveland-Cliffs Inc. said today The Algoma Steel Corporation, Limited will seek to sell its United States coal and iron ore interests including its Tilden Mine interest. Tilden Mine is owned by subsidiaries of Algoma, Cleveland-Cliffs Inc and Stelco Inc., with a Cliffs' subsidiary as manager. In a separate announcement today, Algoma stated that it would redeploy the proceeds from any disposition to retire debt and invest in its core steel business. Algoma holds its U.S. raw material interests through a wholly-owned U.S. subsidiary.

The owners of the Tilden Mine, a Michigan iron ore pelletizing operation, are contractually committed to the cost and production obligations of the mine. Algoma sources its iron ore from the Great Lakes region due to a delivered cost advantage. Cliffs expects Tilden pellets to continue to be delivered to Algoma in the event of a change in ownership interest. Cliffs said it has discussed the possible change with Algoma.

Tilden is scheduled to produce 6.5 million tons in 1990 which is 97 percent of its current design capacity. Algoma's share is approximately 2.6 million tons.

The Tilden Mine began operation in 1974 and was expanded in 1979. In 1988 the mine partnership arrangements were restructured and since then the partners spent $30 million to install magnetite pellet production capability in addition to the mine's original hematite pellet capability. The new process began operation in August, 1989 and reached 88 percent of its capacity in the first quarter of 1990.

Cleveland-Cliffs Inc, as manager of six iron ore mines in North America and Australia for the ownership interests of Cliffs and various steel companies, is the world's largest producer of iron ore pellets. Cliffs holds a major iron ore reserve position in the United States and is a substantial iron ore merchant.

PITTSBURGH, PA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - ''Starting Oct. 1, 1992, with the opening of Midfield Terminal, Pittsburgh will have a world-class airport facility and Greater Pittsburgh International Airport will be the jewel in the USAir crown.''

USAir Group Chairman and President Edwin I. Colodny told the Greater Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce at its Business Executives Luncheon Friday.

''With 50 domestic jet gates and access to international gates, Greater Pittsburgh International will be our premier airport.''

''By 1995, USAir will be operating some 375 daily jet departures from Pittsburgh, up 28 percent from the 294 jet departures offered today,'' Colodny said.

That increase to 375 daily departures includes the new daily nonstop service to Frankfurt, which USAir inaugurates on June 15. In the planning stages is the expansion of international service with ''flights to London, Paris, and perhaps Mexico,'' Colodny told the business executives. ''Canadian service will also be improved.''

To support expanded operations by USAir and other carriers, the Pittsburgh airport, with Midfield's 50 percent increase in gate capacity, will need a ''comparable increase in airfield capacity,'' Colodny cautioned.

''Additional runway capacity is vital to maintaining today's level of efficiency and to minimize delays while maximizing the $593 million investment in the new facility,'' Colodny said.

''It is essential that there be a new, fourth parallel runway in Pittsburgh's future.''

In conclusion, Colodny said, ''USAir looks forward to the next stage: a renewed commitment to Pittsburgh, an increasing international presence, and competing in the global marketplace.''

HIROSHIMA, JAPAN (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Mazda Motor Corp. Friday announced its consolidated financial results for the 1990 fiscal year which ended Mar. 31, 1990.

Consolidated net sales totaled 2.40 trillion yen (US $15.20 billion)(a), a 16.1 percent increase over fiscal 1989. Consolidated ordinary income -- income before taxes and extraordinary items--was 48.76 billion yen (US $308.6 million)(a), a 27 percent increase over 1989.

Consolidated net after-tax income was 23.43 billion yen (US $148.3 million)(a), a 37.4 percent increase over 1989. Consolidated net income per share increased to 21.87 yen (US 14 cents)(a).

Comparisons with fiscal 1989--which was a shortened five month fiscal period, due to a change in fiscal year-- were made on the basis of a theoretical projection of the five month figures to a 12 month basis (five month result x 12/5).

The consolidated figures incorporate the financial results of Mazda Motor Corp. and its 11 major subsidiaries:

- Mazda Motor Manufacturing (USA) Corp., the manufacturing plant in Flat Rock, Mich. - Mazda Motors (Deutschland) GmbH, the Mazda importer in West Germany - Mazda Canada Inc., the Mazda importer for Canada - Mazda Australia Pty. Ltd., the Mazda importer in Australia - Mazda Chuhan Co. Ltd., a Mazda used car distribution and sales company - Kurashiki Kako Co. DALLAS (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Uranium Resources Inc. (''URI'') disclosed that the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit recently ruled on two long-standing cases related to the assertions by the Navajo Nation that it should have governmental authority, including taxing authority, over various lands outside of the existing Navajo Reservation.

The court ruled that the Navajo Nation does not have authority over fee owned, or state or Federal owned lands around the reservation. This means that, subject to the possible appeal by the Navajos to the U.S. Supreme Court, the company's uranium reserves in New Mexico at Churchrock and Crownpoint are not subject to the taxing or other regulatory authority of the Navajos.

The company has previously disclosed in press releases and in its prospectus for the sale of common stock in March 1990 that it had been informed that one of the major reasons that Rio Algom Ltd. had decided to withdraw from acquisition negotiations for the company was the Navajo litigation issue as it potentially affected the company's New Mexico reserves.

Commenting on the positive ruling by the court, Raymond G. Larson, president, said, ''While the Company has not believed that this situation materially affected the value of our New Mexico reserves, others apparently did not agree with those conclusions.

''We are extremely pleased that this perceived cloud has been lifted from the valuation of these reserves so that the value of our company can be established on a purely economic basis without the negative implications of this contingency. As disclosed in our Annual Report, we expect to produce approximately 3,000,000 pounds of uranium annually from these New Mexico properties within three to four years to meet the demand for uranium that we expect to exist at that time.''

Uranium Resources Inc. is a Dallas based uranium mining company, whose shares trade on The Toronto Stock Exchange under the symbol URI and on NASDAQ under the symbol URIX. The company's warrants and units trade on NASDAQ under the symbols URIXW and URIXU, respectively. The company produces uranium in South Texas using low cost in situ solution mining techniques, and holds substantial uranium reserves in New Mexico.

BASEL, SWITZERLAND (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Roche has noted with great satisfaction the approval by the shareholders of Genentech Inc., South San Francisco, of Roche's US$2.1 billion investment in Genentech.

The approval by Genentech shareholders represents a further step towards the creation of a strategic relationship in which Genentech will remain an independent, publicly traded company. Roche now looks forward to completion of its investment agreement with Genentech after the necessary clearance has been received from U.S. Federal authorities.

Under the terms of the transaction, Roche will invest US$492 million directly into Genentech and Genentech shareholders will receive US$36 per share in cash for half of their shares, whereas the other half will be converted into new Genentech redeemable common stock. As a result of the transaction, Roche will have a 60 percent equity interest in Genentech.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Another first in the hotel industry was recognized earlier this week when Hilton Hotels Corp. was awarded the Silver Effie Award for its BounceBack Weekend Program.

The award, given by the American Marketing Association, recognizes excellence in advertising that influences sales.

Created by Hilton's advertising agency, McCann-Erickson, the BounceBack Weekend program is the first-ever branded and trademarked Brand name weekend program in the industry. The program was selected as a prestigious Effie winner because of its success in meeting the objectives and increasing Hilton weekend occupancy rates by more than 300 percent.

The advertising invited the target audience to take the two-day weekend and relax, reduce stress and ''bounce back'' for the challenging work-week ahead.

BounceBack reached the target audience of overworked overachievers, age 25-49 defined as couples and families with a median income of $30,000+. It increased reservations and inquiries via the ''BounceBack Hotline,'' 1-800-HILTONS, by 300 percent and it changed Hilton's day of highest occupancy distribution to Saturday.

The Burson-Marsteller driven public relations campaign added to the marketing mix to increase awareness of the program through a highly publicized ''drudgery poll,'' a media tour with stress expert Dr. Peter Hanson and a consumer guide with tips on how to reduce stress and balance work and play.

To date, the public relations program generated more than 300 million gross impressions in newspapers and magazines, 1,500 radio mentions and 17 television interviews or story mentions.

Headquartered in Beverly Hills, Calif., Hilton Hotels Corp. is a publicly traded company with assets in excess of $3 billion. The company is involved in a wide range of hospitality businesses including domestic and international properties, franchising, gaming and hotel planning and development.

Hilton has more than 270 hotels and inns with 93,000 rooms in 220 U.S. cities.

McCann-Erickson is the $4.8 billion international advertising agency formed in 1902. McCann-Erickson Los Angeles has billings of more than $190 million and is a major Southern California full-service agency.

ANNOUNCEMENT:

Kansas City Southern Industries Inc. commenced a $14 per share tender offer for all validly tendered shares on May 17, 1990.

Pursuant to a merger agreement dated June 5, 1990, the original offer was revised by raising the offer price to $15.85, per share among other things.

The changes to the tender offer and merger were negotiated between KCSI and a special committee of outside directors of DST Systems Inc (TICKER: DSTS), and upon receiving an investment banker's opinion that the revised transactions were fair from a financial point to DST shareholders, the committee unanimously recommended approval to the DST board.

A lawsuit was filed on May 17, 1990 allegedly on behalf of all shareholders of DST against the company, its directors and KCSI.

An additional lawsuit has been filed in connection with the proposed transaction by an individual claiming to be a shareholder of DST.

The suit alleges that the defendants have violated federal securities laws by allegedly manipulating the price of DST stock.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows as reported on May 29, 1990, United Heritage Corp. filed a lawsuit in the District Court in Johnson County, Texas, against Auldridge Broadcasting Inc., Jack Auldridge and Mary Beth Auldridge. The lawsuit claimed fraudulent misrepresentation on the part of the Auldridges during their sale of substantially all of Auldridge Broadcasting to United Heritage. The suit seeks a return to United Heritage of the common stock which it gave as consideration for the acquisiton of Auldridge, as well as monetary damages.

According to the suit, certain representations concerning the nature of the FCC licenses possessed by Audridge Broadcasting, as made by Audridge, are untrue. United Heritage discovered these facts in November of 1989.

United Heritage originally acquired a 48% interest in Auldridge Broadcasting in March of 1988 for a consideration of 250,000 shares United Heritage common stock. At that time and as part of that purchase, the president of United Heritage, Mr. Walter G. Mize, guaranteed a loan of $902,000 from Texas American Bank Fort Worth, as secured by the assets of Auldridge Broadcasting. In November of 1989, United Heritage purchased a further 51% interest in Auldridge for a cash consideration of $50,000.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows Friedman Industries Inc. has agreed to purchase steel mill equipment and related assets from Fort Collins Pipe Co., a subsidiary of Lone Star Steel Co., for $1.257 million in cash. The 8-K filing says close of that agreement was expected on or about June 1, 1990.

In related news, Friedman Industries announced an agreement in principal between itself and Lone Star Steel for its purchase from Lone Star of land currently leases for its coil processing facilities in Lone Star, Texas. Further, Friedman intends to enter into a three year lease with purchase option on other land in Lone Star it currently leases from Lone Star, on which Friedman's Tubular Products Division currently sits. Consummation of these agreements are subject to the execution of definitive agreements between the companies and entry of plans with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court having jurisdiction over Lone Star Steel's Chapter 11 reorganization.

Friedman Industries Inc. is a Houston-Based manufacturer and distributor of steel products.

The executive office of Friedman Industries is located at 4001 Homestead Road, Houston, Texas 77028, and its telephone number is (713) 672-9433.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows Advanced Environmental Recycling Technologies Inc. reported it received notice on May 29, 1990 from its independent auditors, Ernst & Young, of their declination to stand for reappointment as the company's auditors.

The company reports it recently relocated its headquarters to Junction, Texas and the cost considerations and general engagement fee constraints associated with future accounting services caused Ernst & Young to decline to seek reappointment.

The report on the financial statments of the company for the four-month period ended March 31, 1989 by Ernst & Young did not contain an adverse opinion or a disclaimer of opinion. However, it did contain an explanatory paragraph related to a going concern.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) COMTEX - Cap Rx Ltd. filed a registration statement with the NASD in which it proposes to offer 650,000 units. Each unit consists of three shares of common stock and three Class A warrants.

It is anticipated the initial public offering price will be $10.00 per unit.

D.H. Blair & Co., J.E. Sheehan & Co., Synalgest S.A., and Klenner-Skoumal GmbH are managing the offering.

The company was organized under the laws of Bermuda to develop and, through the reinsurer, reinsure a specialty insurance program for certain corporations, labor unions, health maintenance organizations and other entities, which will cover prescription drug costs of their employees or members in excess of a prescribed limit.

The company's executive office is located at Craig Appin House, No. 8 Wesley Street, Hamilton HM GX, Bermuda and its telephone number is (809) 295-5454.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows Fidelity Federal Savings Bank announced on June 4, 1990 that it will add $77,000 to its general valuation allowance for the quarter ended June 30, 1990. Fidelity Federal reports it expects to show lower earnings for the quarter ended June 30, 1990.

Fidelity Federal states the measure was taken to strengthen its general valuation allowance as a result of the increasingly uncertain real estate market.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows Florida Federal Savings Bank terminated Deloitte & Touche as its independent auditors as of May 31, 1990.

Deloitte's report on Florida Federal's 1988 financial statements did not contain an adverse opinion nor a disclaimer of opinion, but it did, however, introduce the uncertainty involving the inappropriate collection activities in Florida Federal's student loan division.

Florida Federal's 1989 financial statements contained a disclaimer of opinion due to uncertainties as to its ability to continue as a going concern, and was not modified as to audit scope or accounting principles.

Stahl filed an amended complaint against Apple Bancorp concerning Apples's rights plan and the withholding by Apple of certain confidential information.

Stahl said in the complaint that the definition of ''beneficial ownership'' in the rights plan bars stockholders from acting together to wage a proxy contest.

He also alleged that Apple has agreed to give third parties access to confidential information that he cannot obtain unless he abandons his tender offer and proxy contest.

The complaint seeks to prohibit Apple from trying to influence the election of directors at the annual meeting and to force it to change the definition of beneficial owner in the rights plan, among other things.

DAKAR (JUNE 8) - Several people were hurt, one of them seriously, when suspected separatists in Senegal's southern region of Casamance threw a grenade into the home of a Moslem from the north of the country on Thursday, reliable sources said here Friday.

The sources said the attack took place in the Casamance town of Bignona.

A dozen or so attacks attributed to separatists wanting independence for the region, which is separated from most of the rest of Senegal by the Gambia, have been made since April 21, leaving some 10 dead and about 100 wounded.

Casamance separatists have been active in the region since 1982, but the current level of violence is unprecedented.

Amnesty International in May criticised repression by the Senegalese authorities of the separatists.

TROLLHAETTAN, Sweden (JUNE 8) - Saab-Automobile made a loss of 995 million kronor (about 165 million dollars) for the first four months of the year, and has decided to close its Kristinehamn factory and abolish more than 700 jobs, the firm announced here on Friday.

The Kristinehamn plant, 230 kms (140 miles) west of Stockholm, makes car seats, a task that will now be turned over to a subcontractor.

Saab-Auto has also decided to do away with the production of electrical cables at Kramfors, 400 kms (250 miles) north of Stockholm and at Halden, Norway.

In addition, the bulk of production of Saab 900s will be shifted from the Finnish Saab-Valmet plant at Nystad, northwest of Helsinki, to the new factory in Malmoe (Sweden), inaugurated last year.

MEXICO CITY, June 8 (AFP) - President Carlos Salinas can expect Japan to announce its backing for a major anti-pollution plan for Mexico City when he visits Japan later this month, the Japanese ambassador to Mexico said Friday.

Mr. Salinas is to make an official visit to Japan June 16-20, during which a series of bilateral cooperation agreements are expected to be signed.

Ambassador Ryukichi Imai told journalists Friday that Japan "could join in projects to improve the quality of gasoline, diesel and other Mexican combustible fuels and to install anticontaminant equipment in autombile engines, industry and thermo-electric power plants."

He said the amount of Japanese aid for these anti-pollution measures "will surely be announced during the visit of President Salinas."

These projects, he felt, would require investments amounting to "several billion dollars."

Japanese diplomats say that their country invested some 1.35 billion dollars in Mexico last year, and this represented five per cent of all foreign investments in Mexico last year.

NEW DELHI (JUNE 8) - India Friday agreed to restore in full trade ties with landlocked Nepal after a 14-month blockade, Indian officials said here.

The decision, described by national television as a "major breakthrough", emerged during talks here between visiting Nepalese Prime Minister Krishna Prasad Bhattarai and Indian Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh.

Mr. Bhattarai, who took office after King Birendra bowed to pro-democracy protests in Nepal two months ago, had said before leaving Kathmandu that he would resign if trade ties were not restored.

Former Indian premier Rajiv Gandhi's government imposed the near-total economic blockade of the Himalayan kingdom in March 1989 due to differences which diplomats said centered on Nepal's arms purchases from China.

After a 1988 weapons purchase order, India demanded a new composite treaty covering both trade and transit arrangements, despite Nepal's arguments that the geopolitical climate had changed.

India fought a war with China in 1962 over their disputed border, while Nepal, sandwiched between the two Asian giants, has tried to balance the relationship without compromising its sovereignty.

Mr. Bahttarai at a banquet hosted by Mr. V.P. Singh after the talks quoted a Nobel prize winning Bengali poet as saying that "friendship means independence and friendship between nations and peoples could exist only in independence."

Mr. V.P. Singh's National Front government's decision to reverse the actions of its predecessor, which shut most trade openings to landlocked Nepal through Indian territory, should help bring the two neighbours back to a non-confrontational stance, observers said.

New Delhi's unprecedented action last year had brought severe economic hardship to Nepal, leading to a scarcity of consumer goods and fuel.

Mr. Bhattarai, who was given a ceremonial welcome on his first visit to India as prime minister, and Mr. V.P. Singh discused in detail matters relating to all aspects of bilateral ties at their meeting, which lasted two hours.

The two prime ministers are to hold one more round of talks.

Mr. V.P. Singh in a banquet speech called for full normalisation of strained India-Nepal ties.

Mr. Bhattarai had made a major concession to India before his visit when he scrapped the latest shipment Chinese arms shipment.

Earlier, welcoming Mr. Bhattarai on arrival, Mr. V.P. Singh commented that the two leaders had the "political will to resolve all problems" and recalled his own government's election pledge to restore bilateral relations with Nepal.

Mr. V.P. Singh had said his first priority in foreign relations would be to remove India's "bully" image with its smaller neighbours, and had described the dispute with Nepal as "unnecessary."

Diplomats here and in the subcontinent had viewed this week's Nepal talks as a crucial indication of Mr. Singh's ability to put his foreign policy election promises into effect.

The diplomats said however that many deep seated problems remained to be worked out by the two governments, Mr. Singh's only six months old and Mr. Bhattarai's a mere two months old.

They said a clearer indication of how things really stood should be apparent at the end of the visit Sunday.

Mr. Bhattarai is accompanied by a high level delegation including Finance Minister Devendra Raj Pandey, Commerce and Industry Minister Mrs. Shanana Pradhan and Foreign Secretary Nirendra Bikram Shah.

COPENHAGEN (JUNE 8) - The continuing economic blockade imposed by the Soviet authorities on Lithuania has brought the tiny Baltic republic "to the brink of disaster," Lithuanian Foreign Minister Algirdas Saudargas said here Friday.

Mr. Saudargas, speaking after a meeting with officials of Estonia and Latvia on the sidelines of a European security conference here, said the blockade represented "economic war by a big nation against a small country."

The Soviet authorities imposed a blockade on Lithuania after the republic made a unilateral declaration of independence from the Soviet Union on March 11.

The Lithuanian official said the republic was suffering shortages of medecines, fuel and food, and was suffering massive unemployment and considerable financial losses because of the blockade.

Mr. Saudargas said some 65,800 people had been laid off because of the lack of fuel and raw materials to work their factories.

He added that since the blockade started on April 16, only 16 per cent of the normal supplies of Soviet natural gas had reached Lithuania, and petrol and diesel fuel stocks would run out between June 15 and June 20 unless new supplies were received.

He also said that the central Soviet authorities had refused a total of 227 requests for visas from foreigners seeking to visit Lithuania between April 17 and May 28.

Mr. Saudagras spoke in the company of top officials from Estonia and Latvia, the two other Baltic states whose nationalist administrations are seeking independence from the Soviet Union.

The three states were annexed by Stalin's regime in 1940 under the terms of the Soviet-Nazi pact signed the previous year.

The Baltic officials were in Copenhagen to press their countries' causes before the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

MAKKUM, THE NETHERLANDS (JUNE 8) - Donald Trump, the flamboyant U.S. real estate magnate and casino owner, has decided to halt construction of a 200-million-dollar yacht at a yard in this northern Dutch town, the daily newspaper NRC Handelsblad said Friday.

The director of the Amels Holland BV company said that Mr. Trump, who has recently been rumoured to be financially overstretched due to the construction of a massive new casino in Atlantic City, New Jersey, had given a change in the yacht's design as the reason for the stoppage.

The director refused to comment on whether Mr. Trump's financial situation could be the real reason for the suspension.

However, he expressed concern for the future of the 85 employees who have been working on the vessel. The yard took on extra staff to deal with the work generated by the "Trump Princess," which is destined to replace an earlier yacht of the same name.

HONG KONG (JUNE 8) - Shanghai Mayor Zhu Rongji arrived here Friday with a top level trade delegation in a week-long visit seen as aimed to attract investment and expertise to the eastern city's latest development projects.

The 15-member delegation, organised by Shanghai Industrial Development Co. Ltd. here, will attend a seminar on Shanghai's economic development for the 1990's and promoting bilateral ties between Shanghai and the British colony.

The delegation will mainly try to raise funds for the development project of Pudong, a 350-square-kilometre (140 square mile) area of undeveloped land on the outskirts of Shanghai, Chinese sources here said.

The Pudong development, which has been designated by Beijing as China's most important reform project of 1990s, if successful, is expected to turn Shanghai into an important economic centre for east Asia.

Shanghai, once China's economic powerhouse, has now been overtaken by neighbouring Guangzhou.

A spokesman for the organising firm said Mr. Zhu will visit Singapore for several days after his trip here, and there is a "possibility" that he will travel to the United States next month.

Chinese sources said the trips were connected with the multi-billion dollar project.

Mr. Zhu is also scheduled to meet the governor Sir David Wilson to discuss the promotion of cooperation between Shanghai and Hong Kong, where a large number of business tycoons from Shanghai settled after fleeing China in the 1949 communist revolution.

The arrival of the delegation, which consists of top officials in the eastern metropolis, followed the release on Tuesday of Hong Kong student Yiu Yung-chin, 20, after spending one year in a Shanghai prison for pro-democracy activities.

Mr. Yiu, an economics student at Shanghai's Fudan University, was arrested one week after the military brutally crushed pro-democracy demonstrations in Beijing.

ATLANTA, GA (JUNE 8) - An Eastern Airlines DC-9 carrying 102 people blew a tire on takeoff from Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport and was forced to make an emergency landing, an official said.

There were no reports of injuries among the 97 passengers and five crew, who were evacuated from the airliner.

Airport spokesman John Braden said the DC-9 blew a tire on the left main landing gear Thursday night as it was taking off on a flight to Tallahassee, Florida.

The pilot shut down his left engine and made an emergency landing, blowing out a second tire, Mr. Braden said.

Tokyo (JUNE 8) - Japan's gold consumption in 1989 reached 465.5 tons, up 6.2 percent from 1988, marking a record high for the sixth year in a row, precious metal industry sources said Friday.

Steady consumption was due to declining gold prices and the abolishment of a luxury excise tax on gold accessories following the introduction of a 3 percent general consumption tax in April last year.

The demand for gold for integrated circit products for electronics parts saw a 21 percent growth. The tally of gold ignots owned by individuals grew only one percent to reach 266.2 tons.

HONG KONG (JUNE 8) - Australia-based media baron Rupert Murdoch will sell 49 percent of his wholly-owned Hong Kong subsidiary, South China Morning Post Holdings Ltd., a company statement said Friday.

Market analysts estimated that the sale would bring two billion Hong Kong dollars (256 million U.S.) to the company's Australian parent, News Corp. Ltd.

Fourteen per cent of the offer would be made to Singapore interests, the statement said.

The local firm, whose key asset is the South China Morning Post daily, Thursday applied to the Hong Kong Stock Exchange for the listing of its entire issued capital of 1.5 billion shares at 10 Hong Kong cents (1.3 cents U.S.) each.

It would make a public offer of 17.5 percent of the stock and place another 17.5 percent with institutional investors.

Subject to approval of the listing application, Singapore's United Overseas Bank Ltd. and the Singapore Press Holdings Ltd. would buy nine and five per cent respectively, the statement said.

It said that at the end of the day News Corp. would hold a 51 percent stake in the Hong Kong arm "and intends to retain that majority shareholding."

Of the Singapore buyers, Singapore Press Holdings (SPH) has government appointees sitting on its board and is listed on the stock exchange there.

Foreigners are not allowed to own more than 49 percent of the company, which was born of a merger of the Straits Times Press and the Singapore

News and Publications Ltd.

The company prints major Singapore newspapers including the English-language Straits Times and the Chinese-language Lianhe Zaobao.

SPH has a subsidiary which distributes local and foreign publications in Singapore.

The United Overseas Bank is also a public Singapore firm, which operates 79 branches at home and 125 abroad.

BUCHAREST (JUNE 8) - Output at the principal coal mining region of Jiu in the west of Romania has fallen dramatically, despite a flurry of concessions and pay rises for miners from the country's new rulers.

The official news agency Rompres said that for the first five months of this year there was a production shortfall of 135,000 tons, without specifying the target figure.

Rompres said production targets had already been cut in half compared with 1989.

The agency blamed the fall on an "alarming increase in absenteeism and a drop in the number of hours worked at the coal face". It also blamed a lack of spare parts for mine machinery.

The coal mines in Jiu are one of Romania's main resources. Miners have a basic salary which is about twice that of other workers and have always been favoured by the ruling power, reliable sources said here.

After Nicolae Ceausescu's overthrow, the country's new rulers followed the same policy and awarded a number of pay rises to miners, who on several occasions either struck or threatened to strike.

On February 19 miners from the region were brought by special trains to Bucharest to stage a pro-government rally at a time when anti-communist forces had taken to the streets.

In the May 20 general elections Jiu voted almost 90 percent for Ion Iliescu and the ruling National Salvation Front.

PARIS (JUNE 8) - Paris, Moscow and Prague are to become joint venues of free mega concerts against racism, anti-semitism and nationalism on Saturday.

The event, which has been called Trans Europe Concert, is being organized by the Paris-based SOS-racism movement, which was created in 1985 and has held annual anti-racist meetings and concerts here since.

A spokesman said SOS-racism had sought to extend the concert formula to eastern nations as East Europe's battle for democracy was "being threatened by various forms of nationalism, rising anti-semitism and a surge of the far-right".

Concerts will be held in Moscow's Gorky Park, the Old City Square in Prague and at Vincennes, a Paris suburb, and broadcast live late Saturday by French television.

Acts include Boy George (in Moscow) and Murray Head (in Prague).

SINGAPORE (JUNE 8) - Refiners in Singapore and the region are looking at expansion plans amid expectations of continued strong demand for oil, a senior Singapore International Chamber of Commerce official said Friday.

Outgoing Chamber chairman Boon Yoon Chiang of Jardine Matheson told the annual general meeting that upgrading projects amounting to one billion dollars (almost 500 million U.S.) were scheduled for completion in 1990.

Though oil demand in the world outside the communist countries grew by a moderate one per cent in 1989, he said developing countries continued to see strong oil demand growth of 4.3 percent.

He said the regional product import market would remain strong in 1990 as new refineries and expansions in Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia and South Korea were not expected to be ready until 1992-1993.

MANILA (JUNE 8) - The Philippine Congress has approved a bill raising so-called "sin taxes" on liquor and tobacco products, spokesmen said Friday.

The taxes were approved late Thursday, shortly before the legislature went on an annual recess, but were slightly watered down by a joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives due to opposition from some members.

The bill will immediately raise taxes on liquor from 37 percent to least 50 per cent, rising to 60 percent after 12 months. Taxes on tobacco products in turn will go up to five percent.

The taxes, as originally designed, were intended to raise about four billion pesos (173 million dollars) yearly as part of efforts to shrink a ballooning budget deficit.

The government of President Corazon Aquino previously called for the raising of liquor taxes to 60 percent immediately, and wanted soft drinks included among the products, but the Congress resisted these moves.

The new taxes were part of a series of measures to raise an additional 20 billion to 22 billion pesos (866 million to 953 million dollars) this year to shrink a budget deficit that may rise to 28 billion pesos (1.2 billion dollars).

EINDHOVEN, Netherlands (JUNE 8) - The Netherlands electronics giant Philips has opened a company in the Soviet Union for servicing hospital equipment in cooperation with two Soviet partners, it was announced here Friday.

It is Philips's first venture into eastern Europe, said group spokesman Hans de Witte.

The agreement was signed in Moscow Thursday between Philips Medizin System, a wholly-owned Philips subsidiary based in Hamburg, West Germany, the Moscow Children's Hospital and a high technology research cooperative, Tomotek (Moscow), said the communique.

The new company, Philips Medical Systems Services, based in Moscow, is 55 per cent owned by Philips, 30 per cent by Tomotek and 15 per cent by the hospital. It will operate "under normal western conditions", said Mr. de Witte.

About a dozen highly qualified technicians, chiefly from West Germany, will service the latest medical equipment sold by Philips throughout the Soviet Union, said Mr. de Witte. They will also train Soviet specialists.

SINGAPORE (JUNE 8) - Singapore Airlines (SIA) announced Friday that it had decided to join the International Air Transport Association (IATA).

A press statement said that three other Asian airlines - Cathay Pacific, Malaysia Airlines and Royal Brunei Airlines - would also become members of IATA with effect from July 1.

SIA said, however, membership would be confined to the trade association of IATA and that it would just maintain an "observer" status on the tariff coordinating body.

The airline said that the principal reason for staying out previously was the highly regulated stance of IATA but added that the body "had changed sufficiently over the last couple of years for the four carriers to contemplate joining the Association."

"Membership will give SIA a voice in the key industry forums and greater access to the large pool of IATA technical expertise," SIA said.

The statement noted that the four airlines felt they could play an active part in influencing and shaping the aviation industry of the future, particularly in the Asia Pacific, which was increasingly important in trade and tourism.

LISBON (JUNE 8) - The Bank of Portugal has intervened to contain a rise in the value of the escudo caused by speculation that the currency would soon join the European monetary system (EMS), financial circles said here on Friday.

The speculation began abroad on Wednesday, and has involved the purchase of escudos worth some 500 million dollars in London, Madrid and New York, because of a statement by Prime Minister Anibal Cavaco Silva that Portugal would soon join the EMS.

Twice within a week he said that membership could come soon, but he did not give a date.

Several experts here hold that Portugal will not join before next year.

The first wave of investment in escudos was carried out by Scandinavian banks, which were followed by West German and British banks.

The Lisbon daily Diario Economico said on Friday that during the previous 24 hours, 250 million dollars had flowed into escudos in London.

Membership of the EMS would oblige Portugal to accept tight economic policy in order to ensure exchange stability, halting the current practice of allowing the escudo to slide downwards.

Observers said that while the recent wave of buying might have been based on a mistaken understanding of what had been said, the escudo could well jump in value each time the question of EMS membership was mentioned.

They also warned that those banks which had followed the Scandinavians into the escudo, and had paid a relatively high price, might well sell their holdings in the short term when they realised that membership was not imminent.

MADRID (JUNE 8) - The Spanish Iberia airline made a pre-tax profit of 6.215 billion pesetas (about 62 million dollars) in 1989, down from 24.256 billion pesetas in 1988, the company reported on Friday.

The company had expected to make a profit of 24.616 billion pesetas.

The outgoing company president, Narcis Andreu, who has been replaced by Miguel Aguilo, said that 9.5 billion pesetas of the shortfall was due to strikes by technicians.

The number of passengers carried had fallen, and the price of fuel had risen, he said.

HARARE (JUNE 8) - The Zimbabwe Iron Steel Company on Friday reported a loss of over 54 million Zimbabwe dollars (21,6 million U.S. dollars) last year bringing the accumulated loss to 481.5 million Zimbabwe dollars (192.6 million U.S. dollars).

A company report released here said the accounts for the financial year ending June 30, 1989 reflected a net loss of 54,104,000 Zimbabwe dollars (21,641,600 million U.S. dollars). Commenting on the financial position of the company, the report said the net loss had been reduced from 76.7 million Zimbabwe dollars (30.68 million U.S. dollars) in 1987-88 to just over 54 million Zimbabwe dollars (21.6 million U.S. dollars) last year.

The overall performance showed a general improvement and this was attributed to improved sales on the local market of 18,605 tonnes which contributed an increase in revenue of seven million Zimbabwe dollars (2.8 million U.S. dollars).

"The favourable position was mainly due to sustained improved export sales and the weakening of the Zimbabwe dollar against major currencies," the report said.

BUCHAREST (JUNE 8) - The Romanian lei should be devalued as part of the changes required to introduce a market economy, Secretary of State for Privatisation Adrian Severin said on Friday.

He told a news conference on the highly nature of the Romanian economy that "a devaluation is necessary" in the context of changes to a market system but that the advantages and cost of such a move should be studied carefully.

The lei was this week valued on international currency markets at 21.06 to the U.S. dollar.

Devaluation would have two positive effects since it would attract foreign capital and stimulate exports, Mr. Severin said. This would improve the market, supply would improve openly and the black market would be disrupted.

Mr. Severin said that he wanted prices to be freed from controls, adding that this had been done for agriculture and for small and medium-sized companies.

It would be necessary to adopt "laws which reduce the intervention of the government by a maximum amount", and he added that "in all countries the government interferes in the economy, but it is necessary to know how and to what extent".

The problems in Romania could not be compared to those in other countries in East Europe since "the process of transition had been started in Hungary, despite appearances, since 1956, and Poland also has considerable experience".

Mr. Severin stressed that "the route towards a market economy cannot be planned as such an approach would contravene the laws of this kind of economy".

NAIROBI (JUNE 8) - Kenyan Finance Minister George Saitoti has presented a tight budget in line with intentions to boost exports in a bid to cut the trade and budget deficits.

The focus on what Saitoti called an "outward, export-oriented development strategy" was seen as stemming from concern about the trade deficit, which hit a record 24.3 billion Kenyan shillings (1.05 billion dollars) last year.

Western sources said the budget was in line with International Monetary Fund and World Bank guidelines.

Stressing the need to attract foreign private capital, Saitoti proposed a series of export incentives including a 10-year tax exemption for local and foreign investors who set up export businesses, with only 25 percent income tax for the next 10 years.

Saitoti, who is also vice-president, presented his budget to parliament Thursday. He announced a five percent reduction in import duties on raw materials, intermediate goods and spare parts in line with moves to restructure industry "away from production for import substitution... to production oriented towards the export market".

He said tight fiscal measures would reduce the budget deficit, currently 4.2 percent of gross domestic product (GDP) to 3.8 percent by 1991 in an effort to release funds for private sector export businesses, emphasising "the need for a dynamic private sector as a driving force in the economy".

The budget was seen as signalling a shift away from state control of industry. Saitoti warned publicly-owned corporations, or parastatals, that the treasury would look closely at their operations before paying their debts.

The vice-president said the economy had grown five percent last year, slightly below the 5.2 percent growth recorded in 1988.

Earnings from tourism, the country's biggest source of hard currency, grew 24 percent, Saitoti said. Western sources estimated that tourism brought Kenya 8.1 billion shillings (352 million dollars).

Saitoti said agriculture had grown 3.9 percent last year, although Kenya's economy was hit by falling world coffee prices in the wake of the collapse of the quota system of the international coffee agreement last July.

Imports rose 26.2 percent by value in 1989, while exports grew a mere 7.1 percent.

Kenya invested 25.6 percent of gross domestic product, of which 34.4 per cent was financed from abroad. Debt relief from Western donors helped to reduce the debt-service ratio to 27.5 percent of export revenue.

Saitoti forecast that gross recurrent expenditure would rise 26.7 per cent in fiscal 1990-91 to 57.9 billion shillings (2.52 billion dollars), while development expenditure would be 19 billion shillings (826 million dollars), up 14.7 percent from the previous fiscal year.

Foreign donors have pledged 20.6 billion shillings (895 million dollars) in aid, covering 26 percent of expenditure.

Saitoti said the government would raise some 10 billion shillings (434 million dollars) from local borrowing through treasury bonds and bills.

LUXEMBOURG (JUNE 8) - Common Market countries must find ways of treating their own toxic waste instead of exporting it to underdeveloped nations, environment ministers from the 12 EEC nations decided here on Friday.

While the ministers dicussed imposing stricter rules on the transportation and elimination of toxic waste within the Common Market, no date was set for the enforcement of such rules, an European Economic Commission spokesman said.

Among the measures discussed, one would oblige transporters of toxic waste to be registered with European authorities. They would also have to obtain authorization each time dangerous waste is moved. Such a measure would strengthen an EEC directive of 1974.

Also, all toxic waste would have to be treated as close as possible to where it was produced, except waste to be recycled.

EEC countries have been criticized in the past for exporting their toxic waste, which amounts to 1.1 billion tons annually, to the 68 countries in the Third World.

Last December, EEC environment ministers agreed to put a stop to such a practice, which had been denounced by Third World countries who had signed the Lome Convention between the EEC and African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) nations.

RIYADH (JUNE 8) - The leader and last member of a gang of five highway robbers who sowed panic in the capital last year was Friday publicly executed here, an Interior Ministry statement said.

Rashash bin Saif al-Shibani, a Saudi Arabian also found guilty of drug trafficking, was charged with his accomplices with robbing and killing car passengers, the statement said.

It was the first execution since the end of March, which coincided with the start of the holy fasting month of Ramadan when death sentences are ordinarily suspended.

Three of Mr. Shibani's cohorts were sentenced to death and executed three months ago while the fourth was killed a few weeks later during a chase when a security officer was also killed, it said.

GALANG REFUGEE CAMP, INDONESIA (JUNE 8) - Indochinese boatpeople are arriving here at the rate of 100 a day, threatening to overwhelm the resources of this refugee camp where officials say the situation is now critical.

On Thursday alone 169 Vietnamese refugees arrived, bringing to 16,487 the number of boatpeople crammed into a camp first set up in 1979 and intended to hold a maximum of 5,500 people at most, officials said.

"The arrivals are never ending and we are now close to the record of 1982 when Galang held about 20,000 Vietnamese refugees," said Colonel Dukseno, one of the Indonesia officials who run the camp jointly with the office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR).

UNHCR official Sudang Kaentrakool said the most pessimistic projections of the camp housing 20,000 by the end of the year were "completely out of date", given that in May alone 3,000 boatpeople arrived in Galang, just south of Singapore.

Some 125,000 Vietnamese refugees passed through the camp between 1979 and 1989 en route to resettlement overseas but now only 497 refugees were classed as seeking asylum in a third county.

In the past six months, another 444 left Galang for the United States, Canada, Australia, West Germany and France.

The remaining nearly 16,000 landed here after March 17, 1989 when new regulations intended to separate those fleeing their countries for genuine political reasons from economic migrants seeking a better life came into effect.

Col. Dukseno said the authorities had been interviewing some 60 to 70 Vietnamese a month since December. Informed sources said this probably represented about 600 people in all as only the head of the family was questioned about the reasons for leaving their country.

Camp officials said that no final determination about any of the screened boatpeople had yet been made and none was expected before July.

On a visit to Galang, which is completely controlled by the Indonesian military, journalists were told it now also held some 1,354 Cambodians, mostly youths.

The arrival of Cambodian boatpeople in Indonesia is a completely new development, with the first coming ashore on the country's main islands in January.

The camp authorities classify them as people seeking asylum. But while the UNHCR consistently defends that position Indonesian political and military leaders have often described them as "illegal immigrants."

Col. Dukseno said several times that Indonesia's refugee coordinating agency had been set up to deal with Vietnamese boatpeople and that no Cambodian had as yet been interviewed.

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 8) - South African singing star Mirriam Makeba who has been in exile for 30 years is to return home this weekend, South African Musicians Alliance spokesman Jabu Ngwenya said here.

Known as the Mother of Song or Mama Afrika, politically active Makeba, 58, left the country after her anti-apartheid protest songs incurred the displeasure of the white minority Pretoria government.

Until late last year her songs were banned on state-run radio stations as a result of an address in 1975 to the United Nations General Assembly in which she spoke out against apartheid.

NAIROBI (JUNE 8) - Despite claims by the government that no-one was killed when Nairobi city commission askaris demolished a slum area two weeks ago, the provost of the All Saints Cathedral contended that eight people lost their lives.

In a hard-hitting press statement, the Reverend Peter Njenga said Friday that on May 25, the day the slum was razed, he saw with his own eyes the bodies of two young boys and a male adult.

The male adult, he was told by residents of the Muoroto slum area, was the driver of a bulldozer who flattened their dwellings and was shot dead with an arrow.

The other five victims were two city askaris who were beaten and killed, a woman who died on her way to hospital, a man who was beaten up by askaris and later died of the injuries sustained, and a baby found days later under the rubble.

The provost deplored that the sanctity of life was no longer honoured and instead blame shifted to persons who stood up and protested, and compared the Muoroto incident with the way the murder of the late foreign minister

Robert Ouko had been treated.

Some 2,000 people were rendered homeless during the raid but were later allowed to stay and put up their shacks again after a nation-wide outcry over the brutality of the city commission and its askaris.

Last Tuesday, the city commission fired the assistant director of the city inspectorate. But the next day, President Daniel arap Moi sacked his minister for agriculture, Maina Wanjigi, because he had criticised the slum raid.

SINGAPORE (JUNE 8) - Singapore's first deputy premier, Goh Chok Tong, will succeed Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew when Lee steps down later this year, the presidential palace confirmed here Friday.

Goh, who entered politics in 1976 at the age of 35 at the request of Lee, told reporters: ''I am all set for the job.''

Dubbed a ''political moderator'' and said to have the confidence of the people, Goh once declared that his main tasks were to tackle domestic problems and meet the peoples' aspirations.

A masters of Arts in Development Economics from Williams College in the United States, Goh has a wide perspective of international affairs.

''The world is experiencing a general shaking up, with Communism crumbling and a desire to improve superpower relations evident,'' he has said.

A firm advocate of a united Europe and a single Germany, Goh has repeatedly called on entrepreneurs to look West towards Europe and tap the economic potential there for a better Singapore.

Commenting on international developments, Goh, who is also defense minister, said ''the U.S. presence in this part of the world will diminish because of massive domestic pressure.''

He predicted that China, India and Japan would contest for leadership in the region and warned of a greater likelihood of localised conflicts.

He named the Paracel Islands, claimed by China and Vietnam, and the Spratley Islands, disputed by China, Vietnam, Malaysia and the Philippines ''as possible flash points.''

Of Lee, Goh said: ''Lee is leaving Singapore in a very good state ... I want to build on Mr. Lee's excellence.''

Goh, who is assistant secretary-general of the ruling People's Action Party (Pap) and also a member of the Pap's central executive committee, denied that he was assuming the premiership as an ''interim measure'' prior to Lee's eldest son, General Gen Lee Hsien Loong, trade and industry minister, becoming premier.

''There will be no high watermark to measure performance. The mark will be the next elections in 1992. If I win the next elections substantially for the party, do you think the party would want a change of leadership?'' Goh asked.

BONN (JUNE 8) - West German retail sales rose by 4.7 percent in real terms in April compared with April 1989 which was longer by two shopping days, provisional official figures showed on Friday.

Growth in nominal terms was 6.2 percent. The increase was due mainly to growth of sales of food, electronic goods and clothing. During the month, big high-street outlets experienced an increase of 11 percent in sales, while mail-order companies experienced a fall of three percent.

During the first four months of the year retail sales rose by 5.3 percent in real terms and by 7.3 percent in nominal terms compared with one year earlier.

MOSCOW (JUNE 8) - Moscow is "the centre of world politics" and changes now underway in the Soviet Union are the most important this century, Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev said here Friday.

"We are here at the focal point of world politics and whoever has not understood this hasn't understood anything in world politics," he told a press conference jointly held with visiting British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

"Don't forget we are doing very serious things," he told western journalists, adding "you must write very seriously about us, so that perestroika, the changes, do take place, and you need them as much as we do".

Mrs. Thatcher, for her part stressed that the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) had to give assurances to the Soviet Union on German reunification.

"We are working on what reassurances could exist and would demonstrate the consciousness and sensitivity of NATO to find these reassurances on the consequences of German reunfication," she said.

A forum for wider discussions on the subject might be found in the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, she said.

She had earlier held talks with the Soviet leader at the Kremlin, notably on disarmament and German reunification.

Mrs. Thatcher, who arrived Thursday night from Scotland where she stopped off briefly at a meeting of foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation, also met with Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov and Defence Minister Dmitri Yazov.

Friday morning, Mrs. Thatcher also had a meeting with Moscow mayor Gavriil Popov, a recently-elected reformist economist, with whom she discussed the building of a British-Soviet trade centre here.

The British prime minister also signed a number of agreements here, including one on a 10-year bilateral economic and industrial cooperation and one to provide Soviet managers with business.

On Saturday, Mrs. Thatcher will travel on to Kiev, in the Ukraine, where a British trade and cultural fair is being held, and on Sunday she will open a British-funded school in Leninakan, Armenia, a town nearly destroyed by the December 1988 earthquake.

VELDHOVEN, NETHERLANDS (JUNE 8) - United Bus B.V., an Anglo-Dutch bus and coach manufacturer is to buy the Dutch Den Oudsten bodywork (coachbuilding) firm to become Europe's sixth biggest manufacturer of coaches, the two companies said on Friday.

United Bus will then hold six percent of the market in western Europe with annual sales of 490 million guilder (258 million dollars), and employing 1,200 people.

Annual production will total 1,700 chassis and 960 finished buses and coaches.

The North American bodywork company New Flyer, which is part of the holding company owning Den Oudsteen, will continue as before and will not be integrated into United Bus, the statement said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) - Lavender lights will shine from the top 30 floors of the Empire State Building to mark Gay Pride Weekend June 22-24, organizers and building owners say.

"Everybody is going to look up that weekend, gay and straight, and they will see that New York City is recognizing the existence of the gay and lesbian community," said Tom Lynch, a member of the Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation (GLAAD).

GLAAD said it has pressed the management of the 102-story building for the past six years to light up New York's most famous skyscraper in recognition of the gay rights cause.

Owners and managers of the edifice issued a statement saying "we are in total agreement with ... leaders who seek to end the bigotry and discrimination directed against gay and lesbian New Yorkers."

On other holidays the building is illuminated with colors such as green on St. Patrick's Day and red, white and blue on Veterans Day and Independence Day.

Lavender is the traditional color of the gay and lesbian movement.

Gay Pride Weekend includes a parade that is expected to draw 150,000 marchers this year.

ROME (JUNE 8) - The Italian government could outlaw wildcat strikes in the public sector by decree to ward off disruption of rail traffic during the World Cup, a top parliamentary official said here Friday.

The Senate, Italy's upper house of parliament, overnight Thursday approved the new law, the first regulating strike action since 1946, amid growing public anger at a steady number of unannounced walkouts.

The new legislation would normally not become effective until the end of the month, but could take immediate effect as a decree. It took three years to get through both houses of parliament.

It forces employees in key public services to announce strikes at least 10 days in advance and provides for minimum services, with fines and disciplinary action for employees who fail to meet the minimum requirements.

The law covers public transport, health, environmental, cultural and civil defence services, garbage collection, power supplies, legal services, social security agencies, post and telecommunications and news broadcast on public television.

According to the chairman of the Senate's social affairs committee, Gino Giugni, the law could become effective at once if the government enacted it by decree.

There have been fears that lightning strikes will paralyze Italy's railways for the next weeks, threatening to delay football fans crossing the country to attend World Cup matches.

A regular 24-hour strike has been called for Wednesday.

Italy's main trade unions have welcomed the law. Observers said much depends on how the government may use its power to force striking workers back to duty under the minimum service provisions. There is nothing in the law on preventing strikes by obligatory arbitration.

MONROVIA (JUNE 8) - Rebels seeking to overthrow Liberian President Samuel Doe have attacked the West German-run Bong Mining Company 70 kilometers (43 miles) north of here and abducted a former minister, Information Minister Emmanuel Bowier said here Friday.

Mr. Bowier told a news conference that the National Patriotic Front (NPFL) rebels attacked the mine area Wednesday and shot dead members of the Mr. Doe's Krahn tribe and Muslim traders from the Mandingo group accused of sympathizing with the government.

They also carried off former foreign minister Ernest Eastman, the company's general service manager. The mine is Liberia's second largest after Yekepa in Nimba County, which was taken by rebels after launching their December 24 attack.

Mr. Bowier said "calm" has returned to the region but that rebel elements were still present.

West German officials are now working to evacuate their 140 nationals at the mine, and 80 others in the capital.

The NPFL forces are being led by Charles Taylor, a former government official who fled Liberia in 1984 after authorities charged him with embezzling about a million dollars.

TURNBERRY, SCOTLAND (JUNE 8) - U.S. Secretary of State James Baker issued a fresh warning to the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) on Friday that the United States would not tolerate terrorism in the Middle East peace process.

Mr. Baker was reacting to a report in the Washington Times that said the United States planned to break its dialogue with the PLO for failing to condemn the May 30 Palestinian attack on Israeli beaches.

Mr. Baker has yet to decide when and how to halt the talks, the Times said.

Despite repeated questioning at a press conference after the NATO foreign ministers' meeting here, Mr. Baker declined to confirm or deny the report but said the dialogue "has not been terminated."

"We've said all along that this is a very, very serious matter," he said.

"When we are satisfied that we know all we need to know about this issue, we will act in a way that reflects our dual commitment to ... peace and to being resolute in countering terrorism," he said.

But he reminded reporters that the United States had had other partners for dialogue in its Middle East initiative.

"I do not mean to suggest that the dialogue with the PLO is a part of the peace process in terms of the process that we were working on prior to the collapse of the Israeli government," he said.

"As you know, we were working very hard to bring the Israelis and the Palestinians together, we were working very hard with Egypt to accomplish this."

Four Palestinian guerrillas were killed and 12 were captured when Israeli forces successfully countered a seaborne attempt on two beaches north and south of Tel Aviv, Israeli officials said.

One of the group, they said, admitted that the attack was on the personal orders of Abul Abbas, head of a PLO component known as the Palestine Liberation Front (PLF).

The Washington Times said the administration of President George Bush was pondering whether to scrap contacts definitively, freeze them for a long time, or suspend them until the PLO had taken concrete action against the PLF.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd told reporters that he "thoroughly" understood and endorsed U.S. anger at the raid.

But he warned that "a break in the dialogue would be a real setback" to hopes for peace in the Middle East.

He called on PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat to be "more precise and specific" in condemning the operation.

ATHENS (JUNE 8) - Greek coastguards Friday averted the threat of an 18-kilometre-long oil slick to the country's best beaches.

Using suction equipment they removed the 40-metre-wide and 20-centimetre thick oil from the waters.

Meanwhile, local people and holidaymakers helped to clear up considerable quantities of oil which had reached parts of the shore near the small town of Neapolis.

Fishermen had spotted the slick Thursday evening some six miles south of Cape Malea, at the southernmost point of the Peleponnese peninsula.

Officials said Friday they had not identified the source of the slick. Oil tankers frequently pass the popular holiday area on their way to refineries at Piraeus.

ATHENS (JUNE 8) - The Greek balance of payments showed a massive record deficit for the first quarter mainly because of fears that the drachma might be devalued, according to the Bank of Greece.

The deficit for the first quarter totalled 2.52 billion dollars compared with a figure of 880 million dollars for the same period of 1989. It was nearly as big as the deficit for the whole of 1989 of 2.57 billion dollars.

Financial experts here have estimated that the deficit is likely to show an increase of about 500 million dollars during May.

The Bank of Greece said late Thursday that the "enormous increase" was the result of an increase of 39 percent in the trade deficit and of a reduction of 25 percent of the surplus on invisible trade.

The figure for imports rose by 24 percent while exports stagnated. Income on invisibles fell by nine per cent while outflows rose by 19 percent.

Currency taken abroad by Greeks for travel purposes rose by 74 percent, while the amount sent back to Greece by Greeks working abroad fell by 11 per cent.

Patriated profits and dividends fell by 22 percent and subsidies from the European Economic Community (EEC) were down by 31 percent.

The bank said that political uncertainty preceding a general election on April 8 had contributed to the deficit which had been caused mainly by "expectations of a devaluation of the drachma which were prevalent on financial markets during the early months of the year".

The threat of devaluation faded in May although the drachma slipped continuously against other currencies, losing 6.96 percent against the European Currency Unit (ECU) and 4.87 percent against the dollar.

The daily economic newspaper Express said that Greece was experiencing "shocking deficits", but there was "light" at the end of the tunnel because because there were some definite signs that matters would improve during the summer.

The weekly Economicos Tachydromos, quoting authoritative Greek sources, said that Greece had obtained a loan of 1.2 billion dollars from the EEC to finance its participation in development programmes carried out jointly with the Community.

The loan was made under arrangements to help member countries which were experiencing serious and unexpected balance of payments problems.

LONDON (JUNE 8) - The Coloroll Group, which has been placed in receivership, has debts of about 300 million pounds (500 million dollars) which are "unlikely" to be paid in full, one of the receivers said on Friday.

The receiver Nigel Young of accountants Ernst and Young said that the outlook for shareholders was "bleak".

Shares in the household furnishings company have fallen from 170 pence on year ago to 6.5 pence at suspension.

Many companies had expressed interest in buying parts of the group, Mr. Hamilton said.

Coloroll employs 8,500 people. It made a pre-tax profit of 10 million pounds on sales of 283.5 million pounds in the first half of the last financial year.

Coloroll, which was consiered to be an example of dynamic success under the leadership of Michael Ashcroft in the 1980s, was hit by the doubling of interest rates during the last two years.

This had a major impact on its balance sheet since it had continued to expand on borrowed money once the boom of the mid-1980s had faded.

PARIS (JUNE 8) - The Paris Bourse resumed its losing ways with a vengeance on Friday, following a slight gain on Thursday that had put an end to a week's downward streak.

The CAC-40 stock price indicator, down 0.28 percent at the Friday opening, continued to lose ground through the session, and was off 1.42 percent at the close.

That poor performance reduced the market's net price gain since the start of the year to a mere one percent.

Operators continued to blame the government's more leftist policies for the Bourse's depression. They say the government will have to work hard in preparation of the 1991 budget to regain the financial world's confidence.

In addition, the Bourse has been discouraged by the fact that Wall Street seems to have been marking time lately, particularly because of uncertainty about the trend of U.S. interest rates in advance of release next week of some important U.S. statistics.

The biggest losses on Friday ranged from three to more than five percent, as Salomon was down 5.3 percent, Pechelbronn five, and Saint Louis, Vallourec and the Rhone-Poulenc certificate 3.3 percent.

Pechiney International was off three percent, and Generale des Eaux 2.8.

LONDON (JUNE 8) - A City of London firm gone into the football arena, offering a futures market on the World Cup finals in Italy over the coming month.

On the opening day of the competition, City Index was offering futures quotes on the number of goals to be scored in the contest.

Goal futures work in exactly the same way as more traditional markets, which offer a chance to buy and sell bets on the price of a commodity at the end of a period.

The company are offering to sell World Cup goal futures at 134.5 goals. They will buy at 132.5, the two goal difference being their profit on the transaction.

If a speculator thinks more than 134.5 goals will be scored he can buy bets at that level, if he thinks the total will be fewer than 132.5 he can sell units.

If a higher than expected number of goals are scored in the early stages, the City Index "spread" will move up accordingly and investors will have to buy and sell at the new level.

City Index is also offering quotes on total goals scored by each team in the competition. The offer spread for Italy is 9.7-10.2 goals, for Brazil 9.6-10.1, and England 6.8-7.2.

For outsiders Costa Rica, the United Arab Emirates and the United States, City Index will buy at 1.4 goals and sell at 1.7.

The company's sports index chief Jonathan Sparke said interest in the market has already been "massive", with more than 25,000 pounds (42,000 dollars) hanging on every goal so far.

Sparke said some clients had expressed an interest in betting on a hooligan index, based on the number of arrests during the competition. "We decided not to try to make a market in hooligans because it would difficult to track."

PARIS (JUNE 8) - The Western COCOM organisation, which put an economic stranglehold on Communism during the Cold War, is now relaxing restrictions on exportable technology to resuscitate economies in Eastern Europe.

It has decided that the keys to economic recovery are computer technology, machine tools, and telecommunications, and that western industry should be allowed to supply hitherto secret equipment.

COCOM officials said that most countries, including the Soviet Union, would benefit.

Throughout the years of the Cold War, the COCOM organisation tried with modest means to freeze exports of strategic technology to Communist countries.

Now that the Thaw has set in, the western Allies and Japan have agreed to reduce the scope of the operation to protection of members' vital minimum interests in terms of political and military security.

Under COCOM regulations, it has been forbidden to export items listed under 116 categories, but the restrictions are to be eased by mid-August by removal of 38 categories.

A new, briefer list of items of "truly sensitive" technology will be drafted by the middle of December.

AMSTERDAM (JUNE 8) - The Netherlands has extradited to Belgium a 26-year-old Irish man suspected of having shot a Belgian police officer in Antwerp last December, the public prosecutor in Amsterdam said Friday.

The extradition of Anthony Kerr, a member of the Catholic, para-military Irish People's Liberation Army, was authorized by an Amsterdam court on March 13.

Mr. Kerr is suspected of having shot and wounded the Belgian policeman, on Dec. 9, after the officer asked to check his papers. Mr. Kerr is also wanted on a hostage-taking charge, for he allegedly fled towards Amsterdam in a hijacked taxi and threatened the driver with a gun.

Mr. Kerr was arrested in Amsterdam on Dec. 11 in an apartment where police found false identity papers.

In April, an Amsterdam judge sentenced Mr. Kerr to six months in prison for unlawful possession of a firearm.

His sentence served, Mr. Kerr was handed over to Belgian authorities to face charges there.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) - Greek Prime Minister Constantine Mitsotakis said Friday he will crack down on terrorism and drug trafficking, and called on Turkey to help bring an end to the 16-year conflict over Cyprus.

Mitsotakis, who has pledged to develop warmer ties with Washington, said Greece intends ''to completely eliminate terrorism in Greece and to do away with the idea that Greece can be a way station for terrorists from other countries''.

The former newspaperman said he would decide by September 30 whether to extradite Palestinian terrorist Mohammed Rashid to the United States or try him in a Greek court.

But he reassured the United States that either way, ''we will never let Rashid free''.

Mitsotakis met with President George Bush Wednesday and urged him to get more actively involved in Cyprus. But Bush said he would stay out of the conflict and back the efforts of U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar instead.

''Your country can do a lot to convince Turkey to change its policy'' on Cyprus, Mitsotakis told the National Press Club. ''The key to a solution may be a change in the policy of Ankara.''

He called the occupation of the northern third of the country by 30,000 Turkish troops ''a terrible blot on the entire reputation of the entire Western alliance''.

EAST BERLIN (JUNE 8) - Mongolian President Punsalmaagiyn Ochirbat Friday rejected opposition demands that foreign observers monitor general elections planned for July, the East German news agency ADN reported.

Mr. Ochirbat told an extraordinary union congress in the capital Ulan Bator that Mongolian society was not divided and had no need to learn about how to hold democratic elections.

Inviting foreign observers would also be costly, he added.

The ruling Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party (MPRP) set up most of the electoral commissions charged with organising the elections before the pro-democratic opposition parties formed recently could formally register, ADN said.

The opposition parties have charged that the current electoral law contains "a series of ambigious formulations."

The central election commission called on all six parties contesting the elections strictly to adhere to the current electoral law in the run up to the vote, ADN said.

ABOARD AIR FORCE ONE (JUNE 8) - President George Bush, commenting on the apparent formation of a new government in Israel, said Friday that he was prepared to work with any administration in that country, and called anew for Israeli-Palestinian dialogue.

Mr. Bush's statement, which came as he flew from Iowa to Nebraska, was in response to reporters' questions on caretaker Premier Yitzhak Shamir's signing of accords allowing him to form a rightwing government.

That government is still subject to approval by the Israeli parliament.

Mr. Bush said, "Israel can do what it wants with this government and I'll work with whoever that country puts forward as their government."

"But they know the policy of the United States on peace talks," Mr. Bush added. "U.S. policy is firm. We want the peace talks to begin."

The United States has been pressing for Israeli-Palestinian talks in Cairo to discuss long-standing Israeli plans for Palestinian elections in the occupied territories. The voting would select leaders for talks on the future status of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Disagreement over a U.S. framework for Cairo talks, put forward by Secretary of State James Baker, led to the collapse of Mr. Shamir's coalition government in March.

Mr. Shamir Friday informed President Chaim Herzog that he had formed a rightwing coalition with religious and far-right parties.

The prime minister will present the proposed cabinet for a parliamentary vote of confidence Monday.

MONTREAL (JUNE 8) - Brazil's Ayrton Senna got one back on his bitter French rival Alain Prost on Friday by smashing his track record at the Gilles Villeneuve circuit in Montreal.

Senna and his McLaren teammate Gerhard Berger dominated the first day of practice for Sunday's Canadian formula one grand prix.

The Brazilian, winner in Monaco two weeks ago, pushed his car to set a new record time of 1min 20.399 secs. Prost set the previous Montreal record (1:20.973) last year while still Senna's teammate.

Berger clocked 1:20.465, while world champion Prost had to be content with the third best time of 1:20.826.

Drivers complained about the track on Friday saying it was dusty and uneven.

Works are still being carried out around the track but this should be put right for Saturday's practice.

Official practice results: 1. Ayrton Senna (Brazil) McLaren-Honda 1min 20.399sec, 2. Gerhard Berger (Austria) McLaren-Honda 1:20.465, 3. Alain Prost (France) Ferrari 1:20.826, 4. LAGOS (JUNE 8) - Troops Friday arrested Olisa Agbakoba, the president of the Civil Liberties Organisation (CLO), a Nigerian human rights group, a reliable source said here.

The source said five soldiers went to Mr. Agbakoba's home in central Lagos and asked him to accompany them "for an interview" in the offices of the commission investigating Nigeria's failed military coup bid of April 22.

Mr. Agbakoba on Thursday caused a stir in legal circles by withdrawing a suit the CLO had filed a week earlier against the federal military government over the arrests and detention of several members of the family of Nigerian businessman Great Ogburu.

Mr. Ogburu, who has evaded arrest, is suspected of having financed the coup attempt against the military government of President Ibrahim Babangida.

MILAN (JUNE 8) - Shell-shocked Argentine captain Diego Maradona refused to blame goalkeeper Nery Pumpido for Cameroon's stunning 1-0 win in the opening World Cup match here Friday.

"You cannot blame any one player. We all lost. If Cameroon won it was simply because they were better than us," said Maradona, refusing to take anything away from the Africans.

"Our attack never got going. We had three early chances and we didn't take them. In any case the result speaks for itself."

The Napoli star said it was upto manager Carlos Bilardo to find a winning formula to get Argentina through to the second round.

"It's up to Bilardo to take the decisions, to pick the team. We have to win against the Soviet Union and Romania and that will not be easy.

"We cannot afford one more mistake but we're all determined to get this defeat behind us as quickly as possible," he added.

NIAMEY (JUNE 8) - Security forces during Thursday night entered the university campus of Niamey, whose students are on strike, and arrested a number of students, an official source said Friday.

Student sources put the number of arrests at about 100.

The education ministry meanwhile announced that the university was closed because of the unrest.

Witnesses said police first entered the medicine faculty Wednesday after clashes between striking students and non-strikers. The police mounted a second intervention during the night of Thursday to Friday, they said.

No details of the intervention were available and it was not immediately known what was behind the student strike.

Sources said the situation was tense but calm Friday in the Niger capital, where student and workers unions had called for a mass meeting Saturday morning and a general strike for Monday.

On February 9, clashes between students and police at Niamey left three dead according to official sources, 14 according to the students.

SAO PAULO (JUNE 7) EFE - Brazilian Federal Police Thursday arrested three men in Sao Paulo state believed responsible for at least 32 death squad-style killings, including the murder of one of the detainees' own fathers.

Officials said the three, who had operated in the Sao Paulo locality of Diadema over the last five years, acted on orders of local businessmen.

Their victims allegedly included a one-year-old child and the father of one of the killers.

The gang had enjoyed impunity from local policemen, the Federal officers said.

The officials claimed that more than 300 death squads are operating in Sao Paulo state, thanks to the complicity of local authorities.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) EFE - FBI agents have arrested a former U.S. Army sergeant in Tampa, Florida and charged him with passing NATO secrets to unspecified foreign governments during a tour of duty in West Germany.

The FBI said the suspect, Roderick James Ramsay, had been identified in the course of a long and complex investigation as an accomplice of convicted spy Clyde Lee Conrad.

Conrad, who was sentenced to life imprisonment this week by a West German court on espionage and treason charges, was also convicted of smuggling components for advanced technology computers to East Bloc countries.

MOSCOW (JUNE 8) EFE - Ethnic clashes in the Soviet Central Asian republic of Kirghizia have claimed at least 78 lives, a Soviet Army commander reported Friday from Frunze, the capital of the violence-torn region.

But Thursday night had passed in "relative calm" said Maj. Felix Kulov, who took over from civilian authorities after a state of emergency and dusk-to-dawn curfew were imposed on Frunze earlier that day.

Kulov said 330 people were injured and 249 houses burned during four days of rioting in the town of Osh, which borders the republic of Uzbekistan, and where the situation still remained "tense and complicated".

On Thursday, Soviet Interior Minister Vadim Bakatin warned that the violence could escalate into a full-scale confrontation between the two republics.

Moscow rushed some 1,500 troops to beef up security forces in Osh and Andizhan, on the other side of the Uzbek border, after clashes between the Kirghiz majority and the Uzbek minority in Kirghizia broke out over the distribution of homestead land.

LISBON (JUNE 8) EFE - U.S.-backed Angolan UNITA rebels have offered to declare a truce in their 15-year-long war against the Marxist government in order to hold peace talks, in a statement made public Friday in the Portuguese capital.

The statement, signed by UNITA leader Jonas Savimbi, said the three-month truce would go in to effect June 22 if the government in Luanda agreed to do the same.

Savimbi asked Portugal and the official government-rebel mediator, Zairean President Mobutu Sese Seko, to help convince the Soviet-backed government of President Jose Eduardo Dos Santos to agree to the peace initiative.

Government representatives and UNITA guerrillas met for the first time without foreign mediators in April in the Portuguese town of Evora, though no accords were reached.

Civil war broke out in Angola as soon as it won independence from Portugal in 1975.

MANILA (JUNE 8) - The chief of the Philippines Armed Forces confirmed Friday that he had ordered a full military alert because rebel troops were planning a seventh coup attempt against President Corazon Aquino, but he said the mutineers would not succeed.

Gen. Renato de Villa said that ex-lieutenant colonel Gregorio (Gringo) Honasan, the leader of previous coup bids, was preparing a seventh attempt to oust Aquino, and that the 160,000-strong military had been placed on full alert.

Rumours of an imminent coup reached fever pitch in Manila Wednesday night when Army trucks were seen ferrying troops around the city's principal military bases, while troops put up checkpoints on roads leading to the presidential palace, the international airport and the Air Force headquarters.

"We can assure the people that the Armed Forces will remain faithful to the Constitution, will remain intact and solid in protecting the national interest, our people and our government," said De Villa, who returned last week from a brief private trip to the United States.

The general also said that the 2,000 soldiers who participated in last December's attempted takeover have either surrendered or been captured, and that 340 of them have been released on the grounds that they had been misled by their superior officers.

More than 100 people died and nearly 700 were wounded in that coup bid, the sixth and most serious armed challenge against the Aquino government, which involved more than 3,000 mutineers.

Last week, deputy military chief Maj. Gen. Rodolfo Biazon warned that intelligence reports showed that rebel troops were planning to launch their seventh try this month, possibly on or before the June 12 Independence Day celebrations.

De Villa admitted that the renegade military "will continue to plan" unless they are arrested. He said Honasan has been seen moving around Manila during the past month but that his exact whereabouts were unknown.

"They have the capability to conduct terrorist actions and crimes but they do not have the capability to overthrow the government," he said. "We are prepared to meet them and to crush them as many times as they try."

TEHRAN (JUNE 8) EFE - Oman has told the United Nations that its was willing to host direct peace talks between the presidents of Iran and Iraq the Iranian news agency IRNA said Friday.

Omani diplomat Ezzat Bin Sabil Alzatghani met Thursday with United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to discuss the proposal, IRNA said.

On Aug. 20, 1988, Iran and Iraq declared a cease-fire in the bloody, eight-year-long conflict in which an estimated one million troops died.

But U.N.-sponsored peace talks broke down over the exchange of prisoners of war, and the sovereignty of the Shatt al-Arab waterway that divides the two countries in the south.

Oman is an Arab nation at the gateway to the Persian Gulf, and has maintained good realtions with both countries.

Last month Iraqi President Saddam Hussein sent two letters to his Iranian counterpart, Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, calling for direct talks to end the stalemate between the two countries since the 1988 cease-fire.

On Wednesday, Rafsanjani said Tehran has not given a negative answer to the Iraqi proposal for talks, but added that there should first be preliminary meetings of experts from both countries and U.N. observers.

Last week the Iranian president set two conditions for the summit: an immediate withdrawal of Iraqi troops to the internationally-recognized borders, and that the talks be held in the Moslem holy city of Mecca in Saudi Arabia.

BUENOS AIRES (JUNE 8) EFE - Argentine laborers working on a site in the center of the capital have uncovered secret underground prison cells used by former military governments for illegal detentions, a Buenos Aires daily reported Friday.

The workers found the detention center while carrying out renovation work on the Galerias Pacifico building used by the Argentine state railway company, the daily Sur said.

Bullet marks could be seen on the walls of the 15 tiny cells, as well as messages written by people detained there between 1976 and 1981, workers on the site told reporters.

The center was also particularly useful for target practice as loud noises could not be heard outside the building, Sur said in its article.

Some 10,000 people were killed or disappeared under the repressive military juntas which ruled between 1976 and 1983, according to the National Commission on Disappearances, while rights organizations have denounced around 30,000 cases of abuses over the same period.

Former military presidents Jorge Videla and Roberto Viola, and former Admiral Emilio Massera were imprisoned for human rights crimes, however all three are to be pardoned by the government of President Carlos Menem.

Sao Paulo (JUNE 8) EFE - The rate of inflation in Brazil's largest city, Sao Paulo, increased by 8.53 percent last month according to one report published Friday, which conflicted with another study putting the city's May price rises at 11.23 percent.

The 8.53 percent figure calculated by the independent FIPE group, whose estimates are recognized by the government, compared to nationwide consumer price rises in May that were officially given as 7.87 percent.

The government has, however, consistently poured scorn on data given out by the private DIEESE group, although its 11.23 percent figure for Sao Paulo in May was almost half the 22.29 percent it estimated for the city in April.

President Fernando Collor de Mello's administration claims the DIEESE figures are biased and unreliable since the group's inflation calculations are used by trade unions when pressing wage demands.

Both sets of figures are a blow to Collor de Mello's tough anti-inflationary policies, which succeeded in bringing down inflation from 84.6 percent in March, when he took office, to 3.29 percent in April.

Brazil's financial markets Friday were trading on a presumed rate of inflation for June at 7.76 percent.

FIPE and DIEESE concurred that May price rises in Sao Paulo were triggered by the increased cost of clothing and rent.

SAO PAULO, BRAZIL (JUNE 8) EFE - Brazil's main labor union has withdrawn calls for a nationwide general strike to protest the government's anti-inflationary austerity program after failing to rally other labor groups to the stoppage.

The United Workers' Union (CUT) Thursday called off the strike, which was planned for next week, after the two factions of the more moderate General Workers' Federation, one of which supports Labor Minister Rogerio Magri, rejected the CUT's call to walk off the job.

The national executive of the 15-million strong CUT has however voted to push ahead with limited stoppages next Tuesday.

CUT leader Jair Meneguelli rejected claims that the failure to rally other unions behind the strike move was a serious setback to efforts to force the government of President Fernando Collor de Mello back down on a wage freeze.

Brazil's unions are seeking wage hikes to keep up with inflation which hit 84.3 percent in March and 3.29 percent in April.

Meneguelli said that labor pressure had forced Congress to throw out a presidential decree last week allowing a national labor court to over-rule wage hikes decreed by regional courts.

Collor de Mello sparked controversy by re-issuing the decree last Friday.

Since taking office in March, Collor de Mello has imposed a series of tough economic austerity measures including a radical monetary squeeze and drastic state spending cuts in a bid to revive the crippled economy that he inherited.

The measures have sparked labor unrest and strikes among dock and transport workers.

Brazilian oil workers suspended an indefinite nationwide strike earlier this week.

Mexico City (JUNE 8) EFE - A total of 380 people have died over the past several weeks in northern Mexico where temperatures soaring as high as 47 degrees Celsius are causing outbreaks of disease, officials said Friday.

Dehydration and gastro-intestinal disease are the biggest heat wave killers in a region where people are struggling to find supplies of fresh water, said health workers in the states of Chihuahua, Sonora, Sinaloa, Durango and Jalisco.

Forest fires are also sweeping the region, with mountainous regions of Chihuahua being the hardest hit.

Over 500,000 head of cattle have died and millions of dollars worth of crops have been destroyed by the drought which will result in future food shortages, farmer's associations said.

The authorities in the northern state of Nuevo Leon have announced that if the heat wave continues for another two weeks, they will bombard the sky with clouds of silver nitrate in the hope of provoking rain.

The rainy season in Mexico usually begins in the middle of May but delays over the past three years have caused many deaths, particularly among children.

TOKYO (JUNE 8) KYODO - JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES INITIALED AN AGREEMENT FRIDAY TO MAKE IT EASIER FOR U.S. COMPANIES TO SUPPLY JAPAN'S SATELLITE MARKET, PUTTING AN END TO ONE OF THE THORNIEST BILATERAL TRADE ISSUES, JAPANESE OFFICIALS SAID.

UNDER THE AGREEMENT, JAPAN WILL PERMIT U.S. MAKERS OF COMMUNICATIONS SATELLITE VENDORS TO BID FOR ORDERS FROM BOTH PUBLIC AGENCIES AND PRIVATE COMPANIES ON AN EQUAL FOOTING WITH JAPANESE COMPANIES, THE OFFICIALS SAID.

TO THAT END, THE GOVERNMENT AND PUBLIC AGENCIES WILL MAKE PUBLIC IN OFFICIAL GAZETTES THEIR PLANS TO PURCHASE SATELLITES TO HELP KEEP POTENTIAL BIDDERS INFORMED OF SUCH PROJECTS, THEY SAID.

ALSO, THE ACCORD MAKES A DISTINCTION BETWEEN RESEARCH SATELLITES AND COMMERCIAL SATELLITES, REFLECTING JAPAN'S WISH TO DEVELOP ITS PROJECTED RESEARCH SATELLITES ON ITS OWN.

THE AGREEMENT CAME AFTER 11 MONTHS OF NEGOTIATIONS HELD UNDER THE THREAT OF ECONOMIC SANCTIONS BY THE U.S. AGAINST JAPAN UNDER THE SUPER 301 PROVISIONS OF THE 1988 U.S. TRADE ACT.

TRADE IN SATELLITES WAS ONE OF THE THREE AREAS CITED BY THE U.S. FOR POSSIBLE TRADE SANCTIONS AGAINST JAPAN UNDER THE LEGISLATION.

TOKYO AND WASHINGTON REACHED A BASIC AGREEMENT ON SATELLITE TRADE LAST APRIL, LEAVING DETAILS TO BE RESOLVED.

AGREEMENTS ON TWO OTHER AREAS, SUPERCOMPUTERS AND WOOD PRODUCTS, HAVE ALSO BEEN REACHED IN PRINCIPLE.

SEOUL (JUNE 8) KYODO - SOUTH KOREA'S HYUNDAI BUSINESS GROUP DENIED A REPORT FRIDAY THAT IT IS PLANNING A JOINT VENTURE WITH FORD MOTOR CO. OF THE UNITED STATES TO BUILD AUTOMOBILE ASSEMBLY LINES IN THE SOVIET UNION.

YONHAP NEWS AGENCY, QUOTING HYUNDAI OFFICIALS, SAID HYUNDAI AND FORD ARE PLANNING TO BUILD CARS FOR THE SOVIETS ON A KNOCKDOWN BASIS. OTHER REPORTS SAID YONHAP'S INFORMATION CAME FROM INDUSTRY SOURCES.

BUT HYUNDAI PUBLIC RELATIONS OFFICIALS DENIED THE REPORT AS TOTALLY GROUNDLESS.

ACCORDING TO YONHAP, HYUNDAI HAS FINISHED CONSULTATIONS WITH THE SEOUL GOVERNMENT ON THE PLAN AND IS NOW CONSIDERING EMPLOYING NORTH KOREANS AT THE PLANNED AUTOMOBILE ASSEMBLY PLANT IN THE SOVIET UNION IN A BID TO HELP IMPROVE RELATIONS BETWEEN SOUTH AND NORTH KOREA.

THE REPORT SAID THE HYUNDAI GROUP'S CHAIRMAN, CHUNG SE YUNG, YOUNGER BROTHER OF THE GROUP'S FOUNDER CHUNG JU YUNG, IS EXPECTED TO DISCUSS THE PLAN WITH THE SOVIETS DURING HIS CURRENT VISIT TO THE SOVIET UNION.

IF HE GETS AN AFFIRMATIVE RESPONSE FROM THE SOVIET SIDE, CHUNG WILL VISIT FORD FOR CONSULTATIONS, THE YONHAP REPORT SAID.

IT SAID THE SOVIETS EXPECT DEMAND FOR PRIVATE TRANSPORTATION TO SOAR DUE TO ITS PROJECT TO DEVELOP SIBERIA, AND WANTS AUTOMOBILE ASSEMBLY LINES BUILT IN THE REGION EAST OF THE URALS.

SEOUL (JUNE 8) KYODO - CHINA HAS ISSUED PERMISSION FOR A SOUTH KOREAN AIRLINE TO FLY OVER CHINESE TERRITORY BETWEEN SHANGHAI AND KUNMING IN CONNECTION WITH THE BEIJING ASIAN GAMES THIS FALL, THE SOUTH KOREAN TRANSPORTATION MINISTRY SAID FRIDAY.

THE MINISTRY SAID THE FIRST FLIGHT OF A KOREAN AIR PLANE BOUND FOR TRIPOLI LIBYA, VIA THE NEW ROUTE LEFT FROM SEOUL'S KIMPO INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT ON FRIDAY. FLIGHT TIME WILL BE SHORTEND BY 37 MINUTES BETWEEN SEOUL AND TRIPOLI AS A RESULT OF THE CHANGE.

CHINESE AUTHORITIES RESTRICTED PERMISSION TO THE PERIOD JUNE 8-OCTOBER 27, BEFORE AND AFTER THE INTERNATIONAL ATHLETIC MEET, MINISTRY OFFICIALS SAID.

THE GAMES WILL BE HELD IN BEIJING FROM SEPTEMBER 22 TO OCTOBER 7. SOUTH KOREA IS ASKING THE CHINESE AUTHORITIES TO EXTEND THE PERIOD, THE OFFICIALS SAID.

EARLIER CHINA PERMITTED KOREAN AIR TO OVERFLY ITS TERRITORY IN 1988 WHEN SOUTH KOREA HOSTED THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

TOKYO (JUNE 8) KYODO - THE HEAD OF THE U.S. SEMICONDUCTOR INDUSTRY ASSOCIATION (SIA) SAID FRIDAY SOME BILATERAL PACT WILL BE NEEDED WHEN THE EXISTING JAPAN-U.S. SEMICONDUCTOR TRADE AGREEMENT EXPIRES IN JULY NEXT YEAR.

SIA CHAIRMAN WILFRED J. CORRIGAN MADE THE COMMENT IN AN INTERVIEW WITH KYODO NEWS SERVICE AFTER THE SIA AND ITS JAPANESE COUNTERPART, THE ELECTRONICS INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATION OF JAPAN (EIAJ), HELD TALKS ON INCREASING THE FOREIGN SHARE IN JAPAN'S CHIP MARKET.

THE BILATERAL AGREEMENT WAS SIGNED IN 1986 AFTER A DISPUTE OVER U.S. ACCESS TO JAPAN'S CHIP MARKET.

UNDER THE ACCORD, JAPAN PLEDGED TO STOP SELLING CHIPS IN THE UNITED STATES AT UNFAIRLY LOW PRICES AND REPORTEDLY AGREED TO A GOAL OF 20 PERCENT OF THE JAPANESE MARKET FOR FOREIGN SEMICONDUCTORS BY JULY 1991.

THE FOREIGN SHARE HAS BEEN A THORNY ISSUE BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES AS THE EIAJ HAS CALLED THE 20 PERCENT TARGET ''A NONBINDING TARGET,'' WHILE THE SIA HAS SAID IT WAS A GUARANTEE BY JAPAN.

OFFICIALS FROM THE INDUSTRY GROUPS REPORTED NO PROGRESS IN RESOLVING THE DISPUTE AT THEIR LATEST MEETING.

THE FOREIGN SHARE IN JAPAN'S CHIP MARKET HAS BEEN GROWING STEADILY SINCE THE 1986 PACT, REFLECTING A SERIES OF MEASURES TAKEN BY THE JAPANESE TO BOOST IMPORTS OF FOREIGN SEMICONDUCTOR PRODUCTS.

BUT THERE ARE TWO SEPARATE FIGURES ON THE FOREIGN SHARE, LEAVING THE SIA AND THE EIAJ SHARPLY DIVIDED OVER THE EXTENT OF THE U.S. PRESENCE IN JAPAN.

ACCORDING TO STATISTICS FROM THE MINISTRY OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY (MITI), THE FOREIGN SHARE STOOD AT 17.2 PERCENT FOR THE FIRST QUARTER OF 1990, BUT IT WAS GIVEN AS 13.0 PERCENT IN DATA FROM WORLD SEMICONDUCTOR TRADE STATISTICS INC., A TRADE STATISTICS REPORTING PROGRAM IN WHICH MAJOR WORLD CHIP SUPPLIERS TAKE PART.

CORRIGAN CRITICIZED THE EIAJ FOR STICKING TO THE MITI STATISTICS, AND URGED THE JAPANESE TO ACHIEVE THE 20 PERCENT TARGET.

DESCRIBING THE 20 PERCENT TARGET AS THE MINIMUM ONE, CORRIGAN NOTED THAT HE THINKS A TARGET OF 30 PERCENT SHOULD HAVE BEEN SET.

BUT CORRIGAN APPLAUDED EFFORTS BY THE JAPANESE TO BOOST PURCHASES OF FOREIGN SEMICONDUCTOR PRODUCTS, SAYING THAT THE JAPANESE MARKET IS MOVING IN A DESIRABLE DIRECTION.

MANILA (JUNE 8) KYODO - JAPAN AND ITALY ARE BLOCKING THE RESCHEDULING OF ABOUT 799.08 MILLION U.S. DOLLARS OF MATURING PHILIPPINE LOANS, PROMPTING MANILA TO APPEAL TO THE PARIS CLUB OF CREDITOR NATIONS TO EXTEND TALKS UNTIL THIS MONTH, PHILIPPINE FINANCE MINISTRY OFFICIALS SAID FRIDAY.

THE OFFICIALS SAID JAPAN AND ITALY HAVE FOUND UNACCEPTABLE THE PROPOSAL OF THE PHILIPPINE NEGOTIATING TEAM IN THE MATTER OF INTEREST RATE REDUCTION.

JAPAN, WHICH HAS AN EXPOSURE OF 768.56 MILLION DOLLARS OF MATURING LOANS COVERED IN THE NEGOTIATIONS ON A TOTAL AMOUNT OF 2.2 BILLION DOLLARS, HAS INFORMED THE PHILIPPINES THAT IT ALREADY EXTENDS LOW INTEREST RATES TO LOANS MATURING FROM 1988-1992.

THE NEGOTIATIONS STARTED IN SEPTEMBER 1988.

OF THE TOTAL JAPANESE EXPOSURE, ABOUT 300.75 MILLION DOLLARS WORTH CAME FROM THE MINISTRY OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY, 323.93 MILLION DOLLARS WORTH FROM THE OVERSEAS ECONOMIC COOPERATION FUND, AND 135.86 MILLION DOLLARS FROM THE EXPORT-IMPORT BANK OF JAPAN.

THE OUTSTANDING ITALIAN LOANS WHICH HAVE TO BE RESCHEDULED AMOUNT TO 30.52 MILLION DOLLARS.

PHILIPPINE FINANCE OFFICIALS INDICATED CONFIDENCE THAT THE PARIS CLUB WILL NOT SLAP ANY SANCTIONS ON MANILA WHILE THE DRAWING UP OF A RESCHEDULING PROPOSAL IS UNDER WAY.

MANILA HAS CONCLUDED RESTRUCTURING NEGOTIATIONS WITH 12 OF THE 14 OFFICIAL CREDITOR COUNTRIES, NAMELY, THE UNITED STATES, CANADA, WEST GERMANY, FRANCE, SWITZERLAND, BELGIUM, THE NETHERLANDS, FINLAND, BRITAIN, SPAIN, DENMARK, AND AUSTRIA.

THE PHILIPPINES EARLIER SOUGHT A LONG-TERM RESTRUCTURING AGREEMENT WITH THE PARIS CLUB COVERING MATURING LOANS FROM 1988 TO 1992, A DEPARTURE FROM PAST NEGOTIATIONS, WHICH ONLY COVERED MATURING LOANS FOR 18 MONTHS.

TOKYO (JUNE 8) KYODO - THE FAIR TRADE COMMISSION (FTC) HAS REINFORCED ITS ANTIMONOPOLY FORCES IN RESPONSE TO U.S. CALLS FOR STRICTER ENFORCEMENT OF JAPAN'S ANTIMONOPOLY LAW, FTC ANNOUNCED FRIDAY.

THE FTC'S MEASURES, PROMISED IN THE APRIL INTERIM REPORT ON THE SO-CALLED STRUCTURAL IMPEDIMENTS INITIATIVE (SII) TALKS WITH THE U.S., WERE FORMALIZED THURSDAY AS THE 1990 NATIONAL BUDGET WAS APPROVED IN THE DIET.

THE COMMISSION HAS INCREASED THE NUMBER OF PERSONNEL OF ITS INVESTIGATION DEPARTMENT BY 20 PERCENT, FROM 129 TO 154.

IT HAS ALSO CREATED A NEW UNIT, NAMED "THE SECOND INFORMATION ANALYSIS OFFICE," TO COLLECT INFORMATION ON VIOLATIONS OF THE LAW.

THE FTC ALSO OPENED A NEW SECTION AT ITS EXECUTIVE BUREAU, WHICH IS IN CHARGE OF CONSULTATION AND HANDLING COMPLAINTS FROM FOREIGN FIRMS SEEKING

ACCESS TO JAPANESE MARKETS.

THE NEW SECTION -- CONSULTATION AND COMPLAINT SECTION FOR FOREIGN FIRMS -- IS DESIGNED TO HELP FOREIGN COMPANIES IN FILING COMPLAINTS WITH THE FTC AND TO FACILITATE THEIR NOTIFICATION TO THE FTC OF POSSIBLE ANTIMONOPOLY LAW VIOLATIONS, IT SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 8) KYODO - THE MINISTRY OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY (MITI) WILL PROPOSE TO THE UNITED STATES A SET OF MEASURES TO EXPAND TECHNOLOGY EXCHANGES BETWEEN JAPANESE AND U.S. MAKERS OF AUTO PARTS IN AN EFFORT TO ALLAY U.S. COMPLAINTS OVER THE SKEWED BILATERAL TRADE IN THE FIELD, A MITI OFFICIAL SAID FRIDAY.

A HIGH-RANKING OFFICIAL OF MITI'S MACHINERY AND INFORMATION INDUSTRIES BUREAU SAID THE MINISTRY WILL ALSO PROPOSE TO MOBILIZING THE RECENTLY ENACTED TAXATION MEASURES TO PROMOTE IMPORTS AND REDUCE JAPAN'S HUGE SURPLUS IN CAR COMPONENTS TRADE WITH THE U.S.

THE PROPOSALS WILL BE PUT ON THE TABLE IN THE WORKING-LEVEL MEETING BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES NEXT WEEK, ACCORDING TO THE OFFICIAL, WHO SPOKE ON CONDITION OF ANONYMITY.

"WE HOPE THE MEASURES WILL ALLEVIATE THE LINGERING U.S. DISSATISFACTION OVER THE ISSUE," HE SAID.

JAPAN'S OTHER PROPOSALS INCLUDE PROVIDING U.S. MAKERS WITH INFORMATION ABOUT JAPANESE AUTOMAKERS' PLANS FOR AUTO PARTS PURCHASES, AND EXTENDING LOANS TO COMPANIES THAT SEEK TO IMPORT U.S.-MADE AUTO PARTS.

THE TECHNOLOGY EXCHANGES TO BE PROPOSED INCLUDE EXCHANGES OF ENGINEERS AND REPRESENTATIVES OF INDUSTRY ORGANIZATIONS, AS WELL AS ESTABLISHING A FORUM FOR DISCUSSIONS BETWEEN MAKERS FROM THE TWO COUNTRIES ABOUT DEVELOPMENT OF NEW CARS.

MITI PLANS TO DRAW UP A HANDBOOK FOR JOINT DEVELOPMENT OF CARS AIMED AT INFORMING U.S. PARTS MAKERS OF THE FUNCTIONS AND TECHNOLOGICAL LEVELS THAT JAPANESE CAR MANUFACTURERS REQUIRE.

THE MINISTRY WILL ALSO PUT TO USE THE IMPORT-PROMOTING TAXATION RELIEF MEASURE ESTABLISHED LAST YEAR TO BOOST JAPAN'S IMPORTS OF AMERICAN AUTO PARTS, THE OFFICIAL SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 8) KYODO - THE GOVERNMENT AND BUSINESS GAVE A CAUTIOUS WELCOME FRIDAY TO THE COCOM DECISION TO EASE RESTRICTIONS ON EXPORTS TO COMMUNIST BLOC COUNTRIES.

THE PARIS-BASED COORDINATING COMMITTEE ON MULTILATERAL EXPORT CONTROLS HAS AGREED TO CUT 38 CATEGORIES OFF ITS LIST OF 116 COMMODITIES THAT HAD BEEN RESTRICTED FOR EXPORT TO EAST BLOC NATIONS.

MINISTER OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY KABUN MUTO SAID AT A PRESS CONFERENCE AFTER A CABINET MEETING, "IT'S DEFINITELY A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION."

"I EXPECT THE DECISION TO PROVIDE A SIZABLE THRUST TO EAST EUROPEAN COUNTRIES' EFFORTS TO TRANSFORM THEIR ECONOMIES INTO CAPITALIST ONES," HE SAID. "JAPAN IS READY TO GIVE ANY ASSISTANCE IT CAN TO THESE COUNTRIES IN THE FIELDS OF TECHNOLOGY AND MANAGEMENT."

A SENIOR MINISTRY OFFICIAL ALSO SAID THE COCOM DECISION IS "IN LINE WITH JAPAN'S STANCE" OVER THE ISSUE.

THE MINISTRY HAS BEEN CALLING FOR A DRASTIC LOOSENING OF THE COCOM GRIP ON HIGH-TECHNOLOGY EXPORTS FOLLOWING DRAMATIC CHANGES IN THE POLITICAL LANDSCAPE IN EASTERN EUROPE.

BUT IT HAS ALSO BEEN CAUTIONING THAT ANY SUCH EASING SHOULD NOT LEAD JAPANESE COMPANIES TO LOWER THEIR GUARDS, RISKING ANOTHER SCANDAL LIKE THAT INVOLVING TOSHIBA MACHINE CO. WHICH WAS ACCUSED SEVERAL YEARS AGO OF EXPORTING NON-COCOM APPROVED PRODUCTS TO THE SOVIET BLOC.

BUT THE OFFICIAL WAS SKEPTICAL ABOUT ANY IMMEDIATE WAVE OF EXPORTS TO THE AREAS.

"THE MARKETS IN THE SOVIET UNION OR EASTERN EUROPE ARE STILL QUITE SMALL, AND I CAN'T IMAGINE ANY AVALANCHE OF EXPORTS TO THESE REGIONS WILL HAPPEN IMMEDIATELY," HE SAID.

BUSINESS CIRCLES DISPLAYED MIXED REACTIONS TO THE COCOM DECISION. WHILE EXPORTERS ARE GENERALLY HOPEFUL ABOUT THE POSSIBLE EXPANSION OF BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES IN THESE AREAS, THE BITTER AFTER-EFFECT OF THE TOSHIBA MACHINE SCANDAL IS STILL BEING FELT.

AN OFFICIAL OF A MAJOR ELECTRONICS MAKER SAID, "WE CANNOT JUMP THE GUN. WE NEED TO FIRST FIND OUT HOW U.S. AND EUROPEAN COMPANIES MOVE."

A COMPUTER MAKER OFFICIAL SAID, "I WELCOME THE DECISION IN PRINCIPLE, BUT WE HAVE LITTLE CHOICE BUT TO WAIT TO SEE WHAT OTHER GUYS DO."

"THE GROWTH POTENTIAL OF THE MARKETS IN THESE AREAS IS LARGE, BUT THE ANTIQUATED INFRASTRUCTURE AND LACK OF ENGINEERS COULD SERVE AS A MAJOR SNAG FOR ANY RAPID EXPANSION," HE SAID.

MACHINERY MAKERS ARE MORE CAUTIOUS. "WE WANT THEM TO DRAW A CLEAR LINE BETWEEN THE PRODUCTS THAT WE CAN EXPORT AND THOSE WE CAN'T," SAID AN OFFICIAL AT A LEADING MACHINE TOOL MAKER. "OTHERWISE WE MAY STRAY INTO AN UNEXPECTED PITFALL LIKE TOSHIBA MACHINE DID."

A SPOKESMAN FOR ANOTHER MAKER SAID COCOM RESTRICTIONS HAVE BEEN EASED SUBSTANTIALLY IN THE COMPUTER FIELD WHERE THE U.S. ENJOYS THE LEAD.

"BUT THE MACHINE TOOL FIELD, WHERE JAPAN AND WEST GERMANY HAVE TRADITIONALLY BEEN STRONG, HAS NOT RECEIVED SO MUCH BENEFIT FROM THE DECISION," HE SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 8) KYODO - A STUDY GROUP OF ACADEMIC RESEARCHERS AND BUSINESS LEADERS SUBMITTED PROPOSALS FRIDAY FOR REFORMS OF JAPAN'S SHORT-TERM MONEY MARKET, CALLING FOR GREATER USE OF TREASURY BILLS (T-BILLS) AS A TOOL OF THE BANK OF JAPAN (BOJ)'S MONEY MARKET OPERATIONS.

THE STUDY GROUP, JOINTLY SPONSORED BY THE CENTRAL BANK AND THE FINANCE MINISTRY, SAID INCREASED ISSUANCE OF THE T-BILLS OR SHORT-TERM GOVERNMENT SECURITIES SHOULD HELP REDUCE THE HEAVY RELIANCE OF THE BOJ ON LENDING IN ITS MARKET ENGINEERING.

THE REPORT CAME IN RESPONSE TO REPEATED URGING FROM THE UNITED STATES AT BILATERAL FINANCIAL TALKS FOR LIBERALIZATION OF JAPAN'S SHORT-TERM MONEY MARKET.

BUT FINANCIAL SOURCES SAID THE PROPOSED EXPANSION OF THE ROLE OF THE T-BILL AS A MARKET OPERATIONS INSTRUMENT WILL LIKELY BE DIFFICULT TO CARRY OUT, GIVEN THE MINISTRY'S RELUCTANCE TO INCUR GOVERNMENT DEBT.

THE REPORT ALSO SUGGESTED ABOLITION OF THE CURRENT TRADING SYSTEM FOR SECURED CALL MONEY, IN WHICH ONLY SEVEN DESIGNATED MONEY BROKERS VIRTUALLY CONTROL RATES BY OFFERING THEIR OWN BID RATES TO MARKET PLAYERS.

IN VIEW OF REQUESTS BY FOREIGN FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS, IT ALSO PROPOSED THAT MORE TRADING BYPASS SUCH BROKERS, WITH MORE COMPANIES, INCLUDING FOREIGN FIRMS, ALLOWED TO ENGAGE IN MONEY BROKING SERVICE.

AKIYOSHI HORIUCHI, A PROFESSOR AT TOKYO UNIVERSITY WHO HEADED THE PANEL, CALLED ON THE BOJ TO SMOOTHLY IMPLEMENT THE PROPOSALS.

HE ALSO EXPRESSED AGREEMENT WITH CRITICISM FROM ABROAD THAT THE BOJ'S LENDING RATES, WHICH ARE SIGNIFICANTLY LOWER THAN PREVAILING MARKET RATES, CONSTITUTE A "SUBSIDY" TO JAPANESE COMMERCIAL BANKS.

TOKYO (JUNE 8) KYODO - MATSUSHITA ELECTRIC INDUSTRIAL CO. ANNOUNCED FRIDAY IT HAS COMMERCIALIZED A NEW LASER PROBE WITH THE WORLD'S FIRST FIBER OPTIC CARBON DIOXIDE LASER SYSTEM.

THE PROBE, WHEN COMBINED WITH AN ENDOSCOPE AND A GASTROSCOPE, CAN BE USED FOR OPERATIONS ON CANCERS AT EARLY STAGES, THE ELECTRIC AND ELECTRONIC APPLIANCE GIANT SAID.

THE CARBON DIOXIDE LASER IS ABSORBED ON THE SURFACES OF IRRADIATED SUBSTANCES, INSTANTLY VAPORIZING TUMORS AND OTHER INVASIVE GROWTHS IN THE BODY.

THE USE OF LASERS HAVE BEEN LIMITED, HOWEVER, TO ORDINARY SURGICAL OPERATIONS OTHER THAN THOSE FOR CANCER TREATMENT, SINCE THE LASER DISSOLVES OF CONVENTIONAL TYPES OPTIC FIBERS AND ARTICULATED ARM-LIKE PROBES USING METAL TUBES AND MIRRORS HAVE ONLY BEEN AVAILABLE.

TO OVERCOME THE PROBLEM, MATSUSHITA DEVISED A NEW OPTIC FIBER WITH EXTRUDED CRYSTAL MADE OF SILVER CHLORIDE AND SILVER BROMIDE IN COOPERATION WITH ITS DEVICE PROCESS TECHNOLOGY RESEARCH LABORATORY.

WITH THE NEW OPTIC FIBER, 0.4 MILLIMETER IN DIAMETER AND 2.5 METERS IN LENGTH, THE CO2 LASER PROBE, COMBINED WITH A GASTROSCOPE AND OTHER EQUIPMENT, CAN INCISE CANCERS IN THEIR EARLY STAGE, AS WELL AS POLYPS WITHOUT HOSPITALIZATION, IT SAID.

MOCHIDA PHARMACEUTICAL CO. WILL MARKET THE FIRST DOMESTICALLY-MADE LASER SYSTEM, THE COMPANY SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 8) KYODO - JAPAN SHOULD THINK MORE OF CONSUMER INTERESTS, RATHER THAN INSIST ONLY ON ITS POLICY OF SELF-SUFFICIENCY IN RICE PRODUCTION, GARETH EVANS, VISITING AUSTRALIAN MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS AND TRADE, SAID FRIDAY.

IN A SPEECH TO THE FEDERATION OF ECONOMIC ORGANIZATIONS (KEIDANREN), EVANS SAID, "SOME DEGREE OF FLEXIBILITY -- A WILLINGNESS TO GIVE AS WELL AS TAKE -- WILL BE REQUIRED" FROM EVERY PLAYER IN THE CURRENT URUGUAY ROUND OF MULTILATERAL TRADE TALKS, IF THEY ARE TO BE COMPLETED SUCCESSFULLY BY DECEMBER.

"FOOD SECURITY SHOULD NOT...BE THE ONLY CONSIDERATION THAT COUNTS," THE AUSTRALIAN MINISTER SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 8) KYODO - A PROJECT TO BUILD A NEW LINEAR MOTOR TRAIN CAPABLE OF ACHIEVING SPEEDS OF 500 KILOMETERS PER HOUR MOVED CLOSER TO REALITY IN YAMANASHI PREFECTURE, WEST OF TOKYO, FRIDAY.

THE TRANSPORT MINISTRY SAID IT GAVE JAPAN RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION PUBLIC CORP., THE COMPREHENSIVE RAILWAY RESEARCH INSTITUTE, AND CENTRAL JAPAN RAILWAY CO. THE GREEN LIGHT TO CONSTRUCT A 42.8-KILOMETER-LONG, 304 BILLION YEN EXPERIMENTAL LINE.

THE GROUP PLANS TO START OPERATIONAL TESTS IN 1993, COMPLETE ALL FACILITIES, INCLUDING THE GUIDEWAY, BY 1995, AND PUT THE MAGNETICALLY LEVITATED TRAIN INTO SERVICE ON A COMMERCIAL BASIS BY 1997.

EXPERIMENTS WITH A LINEAR MOTOR TRAIN SYSTEM HAVE BEEN UNDER WAY FOR SOME TIME IN THE SOUTHERN JAPAN PREFECTURE OF MIYAZAKI.

THE NEW EXPERIMENTAL LINEAR MOTOR LINE WILL RUN FROM SAKAIGAWA, A VILLAGE NEXT TO KOFU, CAPITAL OF YAMANASHI PREFECTURE, TO AKIYAMA, A VILLAGE BORDERING ON KANAGAWA PREFECTURE, CROSSING THE KAWAGUCHI LINE OF THE CHUO EXPRESSWAY.

THE MAJOR PART OF THE ROUTE IS MOUNTAINOUS WITH SOME 80 PERCENT BEING TUNNELS.

THE ROUTE WILL OPEN THE WAY FOR POSSIBLE LINKS WITH LINEAR SHINKANSEN BULLET TRAIN LINES THAT ENTERPRISERS IN NAGANO, AICHI, AND MIE PREFECTURES PLAN TO CONSTRUCT IN FUTURE, THE MINISTRY SAID.

EXPERIMENTS IN YAMANASHI WILL EXAMINE THE FEASIBILITY OF TRANSPORTING 10,000 PASSENGERS AN HOUR BY 14-CAR LINEAR MOTOR TRAIN, SAFETY ISSUES, AND THE IMPACT OF TUNNEL PASSAGE, AS WELL AS THE ECONOMIC EFFICIENCY OF THE SYSTEM.

WITH THE FULL GO-AHEAD BY THE AUTHORITIES, THE THREE PARTICIPATING COMPANIES WILL ENTER INTO NEGOTIATIONS WITH LANDOWNERS FOR PURCHASE OF THE RIGHT-OF-WAY REQUIRED FOR CONSTRUCTION OF THE EXPERIMENTAL TRAIN LINE.

SPECULATIVE LAND BUYING HAS ALREADY STARTED IN THE NEIGHBORHOODS ALONG THE ROUTE, INFORMED SOURCES SAID.

SINGAPORE (JUNE 8) KYODO - SINGAPORE'S EXPORTS TO JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES, TWO OF ITS LARGEST MARKETS, SUFFERED DOUBLE-DIGIT YEAR-ON-YEAR DECLINES IN APRIL, THE SINGAPORE TRADE AND DEVELOPMENT BOARD SAID FRIDAY.

THE REPUBLIC'S DOMESTIC EXPORTS TO JAPAN IN APRIL FELL 13 PERCENT FROM THE SAME MONTH A YEAR EARLIER TO 347 MILLION SINGAPORE DOLLARS (188 MILLION U.S. DOLLARS), DUE TO A DROP IN THE EXPORT OF NONOIL DOMESTIC PRODUCTS, THE BOARD SAID IN ITS LATEST MONTHLY STATEMENT OF TRADE FIGURES.

THE EXPORT OF THESE GOODS DROPPED MAINLY BECAUSE OF WEAKENED DEMAND FOR RADIOS AND CHEMICALS, IT SAID.

SINGAPORE'S DOMESTIC EXPORTS TO THE UNITED STATES, ITS LARGEST MARKET, FELL 11.8 PERCENT TO 1,296 MILLION SINGAPORE DOLLARS. THE BOARD ATTRIBUTED THE DROP TO A DECLINE IN DOMESTIC EXPORTS OF MAJOR GOODS SUCH AS ELECTRONIC TUBES, TELECOMMUNICATION EQUIPMENT, RADIOS, AND PARTS FOR OFFICE AND DATA PROCESSING MACHINES.

OVERALL, THE COUNTRY'S EXPORTS -- INCLUDING BOTH OIL AND NONOIL DOMESTIC EXPORTS AND REEXPORTS -- FELL 3.8 PERCENT TO 6,986 MILLION SINGAPORE DOLLARS.

A FALL IN DOMESTIC EXPORTS OF INTEGRATED CIRCUITS AND PARTS FOR DATA-PROCESSING MACHINES AND MICROCOMPUTERS CONTRIBUTED TO A 3.4 PERCENT FALL IN NONOIL DOMESTIC EXPORTS, THE BOARD SAID.

IN ADDITION, THE DEMAND FOR RADIOS, COLOR TELEVISIONS, AND HOUSEHOLD APPLIANCES WAS ALSO WEAK, ESPECIALLY FROM THE U.S. AND JAPAN MARKETS.

HOWEVER, SINGAPORE'S EXPORTS TO ITS OTHER MAJOR MARKETS, THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITY (EC) AND MALAYSIA, WERE MAINTAINED.

EXPORTS TO THE EC GREW 9.7 PERCENT TO 701 MILLION SINGAPORE DOLLARS, WHILE EXPORTS TO MALAYSIA JUMPED 9.9 PERCENT TO 431 MILLION SINGAPORE DOLLARS.

IMPORTS IN APRIL ROSE 3.2 PERCENT TO 8,568 MILLION SINGAPORE DOLLARS, COMPARED WITH THE SAME PERIOD A YEAR BEFORE, BRINGING SINGAPORE'S TOTAL TRADE DOWN 0.1 PERCENT TO 15,554 MILLION SINGAPORE DOLLARS.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (JUNE 8) MCS -- A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2)MONEY & ECONOMY.

IN THE NEWS:

The COMMERCE DEPARTMENT says businesses plan to spend 5.5% more this year on buildings and equipment than they did last year. That April survey figure is down from a projected 7.9% additional spending in the February survey. The FEDERAL RESERVE reports a $584 million increase in consumer credit in April, compared to a $2.4 billion increase the month before.

Pulling back from Thursday's rally, the Nikkei drops below the 33,000 level, losing 199 points to close at 32,993. ... KOHLBERG KRAVIS ROBERTS & CO. says it will sell BEATRICE CO. to CONAGRA INC. for $1.34 billion in cash and stock. ... SEARS and K MART both managed just a 0.9% gain in sales in May over May 1989. Several other retailers did better, led by WAL-MART with an 11% gain. J.C. PENNY rose 1%, DAYTON HUDSON 4.2%, MAY 4% LIMITED 6%, WOOLWORTH 3%, CARTER HAWLEY HALE 2.2% and NEIMAN-MARCUS 9.5%. ... USX says shareholders rejected CARL ICAHN's proposal to spin off the company's steel unit. VOLGA AUTO WORKS to sell GM-designed engine parts. ... NBC reports 1990 ad revenue will be down $200 million from 1989's $3.2 billion.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

PRESIDENT BUSH meets with WEST GERMAN CHANCELLOR HELMUT KOHL today. ... A committee of unsecured creditors of DREXEL BURHAM LAMBERT says it will oppose the investment firm's reorganization plan. ... The HOUSE GOVERNMENT SUBCOMMITTEE holds hearings on children in the workplace. Witnesses include BURGER KING, DOMINO'S PIZZA, LITTLE CAESAR'S, and MCDONALD'S. ... LEE IACOCCA says he will stay at CHRYSLER indefinitely -- but won't have to be told when the time comes to leave.

FROM THE BULLS:

WILLIAM LeFEVRE of ADVEST INC. says the market is going through "a pullback and not a correction" but that the retrenchment probably is over. He says yesterday's third consecutive drop was "it" for the pullback. "We'll take off and go on the upside again." (FNN "Business Tonight", 6/7)

FROM THE BEARS:

"We're in a blowoff state," says BARTON BIGGS, head of the $30 billion MORGAN STANLEY ASSET MANAGEMENT. "The bigger they are, the harder they fall. And we're going to fall -- and I mean hard." He looks for a Dow of 2200 to 2300, possibly in the next quarter. ("USA Today", 6/8)

In mountain climbing, "one important thing you're not supposed to do is look down," says JOSEPH BATTIPAGLIA, associate director of research at GRUNTAL & CO. "For the last ... month and a half we've had such good news on interest rates ... that the market took off." However, with weak economic figures, investors have a tendency "to look down and say, 'Gee, I've got a good profit in here. Maybe I ought to take it,'" says Battipaglia, adding that the market is due for a correction and, "we are starting to see [that correction] evolve." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/7)

"The market needs a rest and it's going to get one," says B.J. WILLINGHAM, head of the $10 billion TRANSAMERICA/CRITERION money management firm in Houston. He sees a 2700 Dow in three to four weeks. ("USA Today", 6/8)

STOCK MARKET:

"We have been net sellers since it [the Dow] went over 2900," says RAJIV SHARMA, president of SERCO INVESTMENTS in Sausalita, Calif. "It's better to take profits now and let the market play itself out." He started selling technology, oil-drilling and environmental- services stocks at 2850, and started shedding Dow industrial stocks at 2900. (WSJ, 6/8)

"There is some risk to corporate earnings this late in the economic cycle " says A. DARREL BRASWELL, managing director of QUANTILOGIC ASSET MANAGEMENT CO. in San Francisco. "Stocks are a little overvalued." (NYT, 6/8)

The Dow could still make a run for 3000 if there is no bond market retreat says GENE SEAGLE, technical-research director at GRUNTAL & CO. If the extreme bears decide to jump in and there are few 200- million-share trading days, he says "we'll go through 3000 to 3150 before we have an intermediate correction." (WSJ, 6/8)

SCUDDER, STEVENS & CLARK investment strategist ROY McKAY says profit taking "may go on for some time. The key to this market is to stick with companies with durable, consistent earnings growth." (FNN "Marketwrap", 6/7)

Yesterday's market decline was muted because many investors are willing to buy at lower prices, says DAN WILLIAMS, head of institutional trading at DILLON READ. "They are not anxious to chase the market, but buyers are still around." (WSJ, 6/8)

"There's too much money to ditch the rally and that's what's going to hold [the Dow] above 2880," says CHARLES LEWIS of SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON. Despite his prediction for the Dow, Lewis follows the S&P 500 index much more closely because he believes it paints a more accurate picture of the direction of the market. (CNBC "World Business View", 6/7)

"Stocks are coming down, but not hard," says JERRY MARKOWITZ, partner in charge of over-the-counter trading at MONTGOMERY SECURITIES in San Francisco. "I think it will run its course within a day or two." (WSJ, 6/8)

"I believe what we're seeing is a healthy consolidation. I didn't see much selling pressure and there was very little dumping," says GERALD

KENNEDY, president of KENNEDY CAPITAL MANAGEMENT in St. Louis. "My feeling is the market wants to go higher. There is a lot of cash and it wants to go into stocks. The institutions have been doing quite a bit of buying during the rally, but it has tapered off the past few days." He continues "If interest rates stay flat or move lower, then stocks should advance. But if interest rates should turn up, then I think the stock market will drop quickly. So, a lot depends on interest rates." ("Investor's Daily", 6/8)

"They're [bullish investors] getting a little tired, but I don't think they're dead," says ROBERT O'TOOLE SR. head of OTC trading at SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON. "There are bids all the way down with these stocks." (WSJ, 6/8)

STOCK TIPS:

STEPHEN CARNES, a food industry analyst with PIPER JAFFRAY & HOPWOOD INC., is among those hailing the purchase of the BEATRICE CO. by CONAGRA. "There are three large sections to a supermarket," he notes. "Conagra had business businesses in frozen foods and refrigerated goods, but not in the third, shelf-stable groceries that are not refrigerated. With Beatrice, they've got the third." (NYT, 6/8)

BARRINGTON RESEARCH ASSOCIATES recommends stock in GIDDINGS & LEWIS INC., a leading maker of automation products. The research firm says the company's earnings should grow 12% annually for the next few years, partly as it attempts to boost overseas revenue by 25% to 50%. ("USA Today", 6/8)

WESTINGHOUSE is winning acclaim from savvy money managers for its recent stock-boosting tactics, including last month's 2-for-1 split and a recently unveiled stock buy-back plan, according to the "Heard on the Street" column in "The Wall Street Journal." (WSJ, 6/8)

Analysts say several engineering and construction firms are likely to benefit from the vote by Californians to boost their state gasoline tax to pay for road repair and mass transit projects. BARBARA ALLEN of KIDDER, PEABODY renewed a "buy" recommendation this week for concrete maker SOUTHDOWN and MARTIN COSGRAVE of BATEMAN EICHLER looks for a big boost to KASLER, a heavy construction company. ("USA Today", 6/8)

TEREX CORP. is the "Stock of the Week" in "Investor's Daily." The company which was once known a a niche player in construction and mining equipment has diversified in the growing business of truck trailers with the acquisition of FRUEHAUF TRAILERS nearly a year ago. "We're looking for about 60% of the business now, for 1990, to be Fruehauf ... in terms of sales," says MICHAEL MAUBOUSSIN, an analyst for the NOMURA RESEARCH INSTITUTE. "Fruehauf is a leader in the market." ("Investor's Daily", 6/8)

Telecommunications analyst JACK GRUBMAN of PAINEWEBBER says yesterday's federal court decision striking down a ruling that would have allowed the seven so-called Baby Bell regional telephone companies into certain businesses like telephone answering services won't hurt the companies that much. If the companies have to set up separate businesses, the extra costs will just be passed on to consumers, he says, adding that "These judges did a typically stupid move, which is never to focus on the interest of consumers of telephone service." ("USA Today", 6/8)

"We manage $100 million and are 85% in stocks," says GERALD KENNEDY, president of KENNEDY CAPITAL MANAGEMENT in St. Louis. "But we're hedging by being in high-yielding, growth stocks with the idea if the market should fall they will not be hurt that much. We are in issues like FREEPORT McMORAN COPPER CO., GLENFED INC., STANDARD PACIFIC L.P. and SANTA FE PACIFIC PIPELINE L.P." ("Investor's Daily", 6/8)

FALLS CHURCH, VA (JUNE 8) MCS -- A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

RONALD HOLZER, chief foreign exchange dealer at HARRIS TRUST & CO. in Chicago, says the currency market is waiting to see what fallout there might me from the upcoming German monetary unification, and also whether the Federal Reserve would adjust its credit policy. ("Investor's Daily", 6/8)

FEDERAL RESERVE VICE CHAIRMAN MANUEL JOHNSON says he will resign Aug. 3 to return to teaching at GEORGE MASON UNIVERSITY. "The time has come to return to private life," says Johnson of his surprise move. "This doesn't change the politics there," says DAVID JONES, chief economist at AUBREY G. LANSTON & CO. He sees little likelihood of major policy shifts assuming Johnson's replacement shares his centrist viewpoint. ("USA Today", 6/8)

Outgoing Fed Member MANUEL JOHNSON tells "CNBC" he had no immediate "intention of being a candidate for chairman," but does not rule out the possibility of being interested in the top post "some years down the road." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/7)

LYLE GRAMLEY, a former Fed member himself and now chief economist for MORTGAGE BANKERS ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, says the resignation of FED VICE CHAIRMAN MANUEL JOHNSON will have little impact on the course of policy. "It's one thing to be missed, it's another thing to have a decisive influence on policy. I don't think Governor Johnson's absence will make all that much difference to the course of monetary policy." (CNBC "World Business View", 6/7)

"I think the Fed will ease policy, but that's probably two or three months away," says JEFF THREGOLD, chief economist at KEYCORP, who says the Fed needs to stick to it's inflation fighting in the near term. "We're still looking at an inflation rate that could reach five percent for the year and that's clearly too high." (CNBC "World Business", 6/8)

"We are in a very narrow counter-trading market," says one government bond trader. "That means when prices go down by a few ticks you see some buyers and when they go up by a few ticks you see sellers. I think it will stay that way through the end of next week at least." (NYT, 6/8)

New York state drew strong investor demand for $4.1 billion of short- term notes at its spring borrowing. "We have orders for about $5.5 billion, with a good degree of institutional participation as well as retail," says FRANK MURPHY, senior vice president and head of the short-term municipal desk at SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON. (WSJ, 6/8)

Commenting on the announcement that MANUEL JOHNSON will be leaving the FEDERAL RESERVE, DARWIN BECK, an economist at the FIRST BOSTON CORP., says "from the market's perspective, the announcement of who will replace him might well cause more of a flurry than his resignation created." (NYT, 6/8)

"Bonds received some support from an unexpectedly small $584 million rise in April consumer credit," comments JOHN LONSKI, chief economist at MOODY'S. "While April's data is stale, the 4.3% year-to-year increase reflects a sluggish consumer" borrowing pace. "Until an easier official monetary policy emerges, consumer restraint could rule," says Lonski. "Both the attendant reductions in household borrowing and inflationary pressure stemming from consumer conservatism should help the bond market even before Fed policy ease develops." ("Investor's Daily", 6/7)

FRED DEMLER of PAINEWEBBER says the collapse of gold prices may continue. "Bearish sentiment has been building up all year long," says Demler. With the price of gold below $360, "now the market is looking a little lower, maybe at the $345 area, as low as $325." He says low inflation and the strength of the stock market have drawn support away from gold. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up, 6/7)

IAN MacDONALD of CREDIT SUISSE reports gold lost more of its luster yesterday. "It's not just rumors or apparent Soviet sales. What we have to look at is the overall fundamentals of the market. The market has been in a bad trend for more than a year now and the prime reason is really low inflation or the lack of any inflation, as well as high interest rates.

Other investments have been much, much better." (CNBC "World Business View", 6/7)

KEN SAFIAN, president of SAFIAN INVESTMENT RESEARCH, says the credit crunch is merely the result of the fact that "many banks were being investigated, and they were more careful in their lending practices, and fearful of what the authorities might find to be a good loan or a bad loan a good asset or a bad asset." He feels the Fed will make sure enough funds are available to avoid any credit crunch. (FNN "Marketwrap", 6/7)

THE ECONOMY:

ERICH HEINEMANN, chief economist at LADENBURG, THALMANN, says weakening in consumer demand, coupled with the downward revision in projected business spending, "is consistent with the developing pattern of a slowdown that I think will take the equity market below current levels and boost bond prices very substantially. There is nothing I can see around the corner to turn the economy back up again." (NYT, 6/8)

MONROE GREENSTEIN of BEAR STEARNS reports the meager gains in retail sales are due to "a slowdown in durable goods now that has lasted for approximately a year, and now we have the first signs that its actually spilling over to the retail business as well." (CNBC "World Business View", 6/7)

The CONFERENCE BOARD reported yesterday that its survey shows the world economy continuing to expand at a very slow pace, while Japan's soaring business growth has halted. The leading index representing the economic development of the 11 most industrialized nations currently indicates a growth rate of 1%, down from 2% three months ago and 3% six months ago. "The Pacific region continues to show the greatest strength, mainly in Taiwan where the leading index is growing at an annual rate of 8%. Growth has slowed in Japan where the leading indexes are growing at zero percent." The survey report also says, "The weakest economy among these 11 countries is still Australia, where the long drop in the leading index -- declining at a rate of 6% -- looks more and more like a recession." ("Investor's Daily", 6/8)

IN WASHINGTON:

SEN. BOB PACKWOOD (R. - Ore.) believes Congress will have to resort to sequestration before a viable budget can be worked out, but he is optimistic that once an agreement is reached, it will be a good one. "I think the sequester will have to come. We can live with the sequester for October and November, and then we'll come back in December [when] we'll start to have the projections of what will happen if we keep the sequester all year, and then I think we'll get an extraordinarily good package." ("Nightly Business Report", 6/7)

"The odds are high they [the Fed] will move [to lower interest rates] when the time comes," says an administration aide. "The question is whether it will be far enough or fast enough." The administration thinks a budget deficit reduction deal should be worth an interest rate decline of at least 1.5%. (WSJ, 6/8)

ARGENTINA met with leading banks in New York and made a $40 million payment yesterday on its $6.1 billion in past-due interest in an attempt the country wants to regain access to world financial markets. (NYT, 6/8)

The SENATE COMMERCE COMMITTEE has approved a bill to reregulate cable television after a compromise reached with the industry unraveled over antitrust and competitive issues. (WSJ, 6/8)

The HOUSE of REPRESENTATIVES overrides PRESIDENT BUSH's veto of legislation on AMTRAK, but SENATE action has been delayed until next week as Republicans attempt to rally support for the veto. (NYT, 6/8)

DALLAS (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Elvira, Mistress of the Dark, will introduce a new fragrance Tuesday, June 12, which gives women the opportunity to enjoy a new perfume without contributing to the suffering or endangerment of animals.

" 'Evil(tm) by Elvira' is for the woman who wants a beautiful fragrance at a reasonable price and at the same time the knowledge that no animals were harmed in the making of the product," explained Elvira.

" 'Evil by Elvira' helps women feel better about themselves as they face the challenges of the 90's. And because it was developed without aniaml testing and contains no animal ingredients, they can feel better knowing they did something to make the world a better a place. Remember, Evil spelled backwards is 'Live,'" Elvira said.

Elvira was scheduled to participate in the March For Animals this Sunday in Washington, D.C., sponsored by numerous animal rights organizations, and later was scheduled to address leading chain drug store buyers who have made commitments to place approximately $4 million in orders for her new fragrance.

A portion of the proceeds from "Evil by Elvira" will be donated to the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, PETA, a non- profit group dedicated to alleviating animal abuse and suffering by promoting humane legislation, education and cruelty-free lifestyles.

"Evil by Elvira" is an original blend of orange flower, jasmine, tuberose, ylang-ylang, gardenia and rare oriental spices offering a distinct, dramatic scent that is a classic for day or evening wear.

The fragrance was created by Elvira and developed by Florasynth, a leading essential oil supplier. Florasynth also developed Giorgio, Charlie and other major fragrance lines.

"Evil by Elvira" will be sold in chain and independent drug stores, mass merchandisers and other selected retail outlets. The suggested retail price is $7.95 for an .8-ounce cologne spray and $11.95 for the 1.7-ounce size.

Elvira's June 12 introduction of her new fragrance will take place in Dallas at 11:45 a.m. at Loews Anatole Hotel, Miro Room, with cocktails and luncheon. RSVP 800-272-2425 or 213-942-1285.

BEAVERTON, OR (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - FPS Computing (NYSE: FLP) reported today second quarter revenue of $11.8 million, compared to $11.7 million for the first quarter, and reported a loss of $1.9 million compared to a first quarter loss of $2.5 million. The company's second quarter results were favorably affected to the net extent of $1.5 million due to the write-off of accumulated currency translation adjustments resulting from the sale of certain company assets to Canon Sales Co. Inc. in Japan, offset by the reversal of previously recorded taxes.

Under the terms of the previously announced agreement with Canon Sales Co. Canon will acquire certain assets from FPS Computing and expects to do business in Japan using the name FPS Computing. The agreement follows a series of successful FPS Computing supercomputer installations by major Japanese corporations, including a recent sale of a second Model 500EA system to Nippon Telephone & Telegraph.

Other recent sales include a four processor Model 540EA UNIX supercomputer to the Nuclear Electric Co., formerly a division of Britain's Central Electricity Generating Board; a ModelJ522EA system to Simon-Horizon Ltd., a worldwide seismic processing company headquartered in the United Kingdom; a Model 500EA to the University of Wisconsin in Madison for installation at the Institute for Enzyme Research; and a Model 500EA to Science Applications International Corp., a major aerospace contractor.

FPS Computing has one of the largest installed bases of high performance computing equipment in the industry. The firm designs, manufactures and markets high performance computing solutions for scientific, engineering and technical applications. The FPS Computing product line includes UNIX supercomputers and array processors. Founded in 1970 as Floating Point Systems Inc., FPS Computing is headquartered in Beaverton, Ore., and is listed on the New York and Pacific stock exchanges.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - U.S. Power San Francisco Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Power Corporation Plc (Power), announces that it has purchased the San Francisco Centre at Fifth and Market Street, which is centrally located in the premier retailing area of San Francisco. The seller was Fifth and Market Associates (The Gordon Company) and the broker was Peter P. Dunne.

The 670,000 sq. ft. San Francisco Centre comprises a nine-story vertical mall (shopping center), with retailing on eight floors. The concourse at basement level connects directly to the city subway system.

The anchor tenant for the Centre is Nordstrom, one of America's most profitable, quality department stores. It occupies 336,000 sq. ft. on the top four floors. Each of the eight retailing floors has a different tenant mix, with restaurants and food courts mainly at basement level, designer goods on the ground and first floors, and tenants who merchandise more moderately priced goods on the upper floors. Servicing is from the basement where access is gained by 60,000 lb. capacity freight elevators, large enough to accommodate the largest of trucks.

The Centre is approximately 90 percent leased and a number of new tenants are due to start trading over the next few weeks. Power will also introduce some European tenants. When the center is fully occupied, the rental income is expected to be in the excess of $9 million annually.

The mall is unique in that it is the only center in the United States with circular escalators. These were specially manufactured in Japan for the project. It also features an elliptical atrium with a retractable skylight. Chandeliers, bronze floor medallions and brass fittings, combined with exotic interior granite and marble finished, make it one of the most elegant shopping centers in the United States. In 1989, in won the prestigious American Shopping Center Award as the finest new shopping center in the United States.

Power Corporation Plc. is a publicly quoted company whose shares are quoted on the London and Dublin Stock Exchanges. For the convenience of the American investor, it has recently been granted an American Depository Receipts Listing (ADR) whose sponsor was the Bank of New York.

Power specializes in high-end retail developments and has a "hands on" management approach to the centers it owns. San Francisco Centre will greatly enhance its portfolio.

Power currently owns and operates developments in London, New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco as well as in its home base in Ireland.

BROOMALL, PA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Scangraphics Inc. (NASDAQ: SCNG) announced today that it is in negotiations with IBM for a subcontract on a $4.9 million Texas Utilities (NYSE: TSU) (TU) project.

IBM was selected by TU to provide a totally automated document storage and retrieval system for installation at TU sites in Dallas and Glen Rose, Texas. Scangraphics values its contracts potential with IBM in excess of $750,000.

The TU project involves scanning, storing, viewing and printing millions of documents, both large format and page-size. IBM chose Scangraphics to fulfill an integral piece of the TU solution based on Scangraphics' high quality large format scanner offering and its IBM PS/2(A) based imaging software system. Scangraphics will provide multiple CF 500 Large Document Scanners for scanning engineering drawings and utility maps. The company will also provide multiple licenses for its FRIENDS (Front-end Raster Imaging Editing Network Display System) software for data capture, viewing and printing. FRIENDS, when integrated with Scangraphics CF Scanner, proprietary compression/decompression card, and IBM PS/2, provides a complete front- end raster imaging subsystem.

"We are very pleased about the IBM/TU contact," said Andrew E. Trolio, president of Scangraphics. "It means several key things to us. One, it further strengthens our Business Partner relationship with IBM to provide high quality hardware and software components for integration into IBM solutions for electronic image management. Two, it strengthens our position in the utility marketplace which is a major element of our corporate strategy. It demonstrates our continued commitment to provide effective scanning and imaging solutions to the utility industry."

Scangraphics is a major supplier of document and aperture card scanners and software to Value Added Remarketers and Systems Integrators in the image management industry.

FOUNTAIN VALLEY, CA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - FHP International Corp. (NASDAQ: FHPC) announced today the adoption of a shareholder rights plan.

Dr. Robert Gumbiner, FHP's chairman and chief executive officer, stated that the plan was designed to protect the interests of the company's stockholders and other constituencies in the event of an unsolicited takeover attempt. He added, however, that the plan was not adopted in response to any known effort to acquire control of FHP. "By adopting this plan," Gumbiner explained, "FHP's board is expressing its confidence in the company's future and its determination that FHP stockholders be given every opportunity to participate fully in that future. This plan is designed to strengthen the company's independence policy and to assure fair and equal treatment of the company's stockholders."

The rights initially will trade together with FHP's common stock and will not be exercisable unless certain triggering events occur. Among the triggering events is the acquisition of 15 percent or more of the common stock. If the rights become exercisable, they would entitle the holder to purchase additional shares of common stock at a discounted price. This would make a proposed takeover more expensive for the shareholder owning 15 percent or more of the stock, whose rights would become void. Prior to the time the rights become exercisable, the board of directors has the power to redeem them at the price of one cent per right.

The rights plan provides for the distribution of one right for each outstanding share of common stock held of record at the close of business on June 29, 1990. The rights will expire on June 29, 2000.

FHP International Corp., through its wholly owned subsidiary, FHP Inc., operates staff model and individual practice association (IPA) model health maintenance organizations, and a life and health insurance plan. FHP has operations in California, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and Guam. The company is the second largest Medicare risk contractor in the nation.

PINEVILLE, LA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - A Louisiana district court has ruled that a Central Louisiana Electric Company, Inc. (NYSE: CNL) (CLECO) proposal to provide electric service to the city of Opelousas cannot be accepted by the city. The proposed agreement is for a ten-year period beginning August 1991. The Opelousas city council accepted CLECO's proposal, following an October 1989 city referendum to select a new electric supplier. Subsequent to the council's acceptance of the company's proposal, the current electric supplier filed suit contesting the city's authority to contract with Central Louisiana Electric based upon the results of the referendum.

According to Scott Brame, president and chief executive officer, the company believes that the court decision is incorrect and will appeal.

Sales to the city's 7,000 customers would equal about 2 percent of Central Louisiana Electric's 1989 kilowatt-hour sales. The company operates solely in Louisiana as an electric utility serving 199,000 customers in 23 of the state's parishes.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Citibank said today it is expanding its program to provide individuals in the United States with deposit accounts denominated in foreign currencies.

Since the law changed allowing the accounts in January, Citibank's Private Bank has test marketed FDIC-insured time deposit and money market accounts in British pounds, Canadian dollars, Deutschemarks, Japanese yen, or Swiss francs.

Beginning this month, the Private Bank will actively market these accounts to U.S. customers. In addition, the accounts will be available to other individual customers in the U.S., as well as overseas clients of the Private Bank and Citibank's Worldwide Personal Banking customers.

"Over the first few months of the year, we've really seen interest building among selected individuals in U.S. multi-currency accounts," said David Hessney, head of product development for Citibank's Private Banking activities for high net worth individuals throughout the U.S. "Now that we've seen exactly what customers look for in a multi-currency product, we're expanding our product offering."

Before 1990, U.S. banking regulations prohibited banks from offering individual customers non dollar-denominated deposit accounts that were FDIC insured.

Hessney noted that U.S. multi-currency accounts have proven attractive to individuals looking to diversify their investments or simplify multi-currency cash flows, while maintaining the convenience and security of a U.S.-based, FDIC-insured account.

To date, customers have established multi-currency accounts to help manage their international activities, and to diversify their U.S. dollar investments and deposits. In addition to Private Banking customers, the accounts are available to Citibank consumer banking and Worldwide Personal Banking customers.

"In effect, we're bringing more of Citibank's resources to bear in meeting the financial needs of individuals," Hessney said. "These accounts combine Citibank's expertise as the worldwide leader in foreign exchange with years of experience in providing individuals in other countries with multi-currency accounts."

Citibank's U.S.-based accounts - which have a minimum balance of $50,000 - pay market rated in each currency, which can be higher or lower than those available for similar U.S. dollar products. Fixed-rate time deposits are available with maturities ranging from one month to one year. Money market account interest can fluctuate daily, with payment monthly.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - One of the South Coast Air Quality Management District's highest awards was presented last night to ARCO for its development of EC-1 Regular, the nation's first reformulated gasoline to control emissions from cars and trucks.

Accepting AQMD's "Advancement of Air Pollution Technology" award during ceremonies in Industry Hills, Calif., was George H. Babikian, president of ARCO Products Co., the refining and marketing division of ARCO.

EC-1 is an unleaded gasoline designed for pre-1975 cars and pre- 1980 trucks without catalytic converters that otherwise use leaded gasoline. It is lower in sulfur, benzene, aromatics and vapor pressure than conventional regular gasoline, resulting in lower emissions of carbon monoxide and reactive chemical components that are precursors of smog. EC-1 has been on sale in Southern California since September 1989.

The EC-1 development team worked under the direction of Dwaine H. Smith, ARCO Products Co.'s senior vice president of manufacturing, engineering and technology. Team members included William S. Dickinson, Jack S. Segal Linda Cohu, Eric G. Lingman, and Larry A. Rapp.

The AQMD award was the second received by ARCO this week for its EC-1 breakthrough. On June 7, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley presented the company with the Mayor's Significant Achievement Award in Pollution Prevention.

AQMD's second annual Clean Air Awards dinner recognized 12 companies and individuals for significant contributions to the reduction of air pollution.

"The positive steps taken by tonight's 12 award recipients are easily within the grasp of all of us. The distance we must travel is only the space between vision and actualization," said Norton Younglove, chairman of AQMD's board of directors.

Award candidates were evaluated by a technical review committee with representatives from AQMD, the California Air Resources Board and the American Lung Association of Los Angeles County. A panel of AQMD board members selected the winners.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Atochem North America Inc. and Engelhard Corp. (NYSE: EC) today announced their intention to form a partnership of their respective worldwide base metal plating chemicals and equipment businesses.

Atochem's plating chemicals business was an integral part of M&T Chemicals Inc., which was recently merged with other Atochem activities to form Atochem North America Inc.

Engelhard entered the base metal plating chemicals business through the acquisition of Harshaw Filtrol Partnership in 1988.

Both companies offer complementary lines of generic and proprietary plating chemicals for decorative, functional and electronic applications on a worldwide basis.

"Combining the two businesses will result in a broader line of products and more complete worldwide service than is available from either company today," Seymour S. Preston III, president and chief executive officer of Atochem North America, said. "It will also create an organization better positioned to support future customer needs through applied research and development."

The partnership would be 60 percent owned by Atochem and 40 percent owned by Engelhard. Details of the joint venture are still under discussion and the arrangement is expected to be consummated early in the second half of this year.

Atochem North America, a $1.7 billion dollar diversified chemicals manufacturer headquartered in Philadelphia, was formed Jan. 1, 1990, as the result of the merger of ATOCHEM Inc., M&T Chemicals Inc., and Pennwalt Corp. Atochem North America is a wholly owned subsidiary of Atochem S.A., a $6.5 billion dollar chemicals manufacturer headquartered in Paris.

ATLANTA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Yesterday at its annual meeting of shareholders, Colorocs Corporation (NASDAQ: CLRX) projected revenues from copier sales of approximately $15 million for the second quarter ending June 30, 1990, compared to $600,000 in the same quarter in 1989.

These projected revenues for the second quarter 1990 exceed 1989 second quarter results by 2,400 percent.

Colorocs expects to ship approximately 1,500 full color copiers in the second quarter.

Projected revenues for the second quarter do not include any lease sales of Colorocs brand copiers.

For the first six months ending June 30, 1990, Colorocs revenues are projected to be approximately $29 million.

During the second quarter, Colorocs opened five branch offices in Minneapolis, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Baltimore. The company now has eight branches in the United States and five in Australia.

Colorocs was formed in 1982 to develop and distribute full color copiers and electronic printers. Shipment of its first product, a full color copier, commenced in June 1989. Through May 31, 1990, Colorocs has shipped over 4,000 units.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - A Nuclear Regulatory Commission Incident Investigation Team (IIT) has completed its review of a March 20 incident involving the loss of electrical power for safety equipment at Unit 1 of Georgia Power Company's Vogtle nuclear power plant near Augusta, Ga.

Although the team concluded that adequate precursor information was available to make the incident preventable, it was determined that the Vogtle staff generally handled the incident well.

Unit 1 at the Vogtle plant was shut down for refueling on March 20 when a truck carrying fuel and lubricants backed into a power pole, knocking out offsite power for safety equipment. An on-site backup diesel generator started up but tripped off twice leaving Unit 1 without electrical power for safety equipment for a period of 36 minutes until the diesel was restarted and began operating properly. The residual heat removal system was made inoperable due to this power loss resulting in an increase in reactor coolant temperature from about 90 degrees Fahrenheit to about 136 degrees Fahrenheit. Offsite electrical power was continuously available to non-safety equipment throughout the event, and no damage to fuel resulted and no radiation releases occurred.

A Site Area Emergency was declared, consistent with procedures, and was downgraded to an Alert after the diesel generator began operating properly. The Alert was terminated when offsite power was restored to the unit after about three hours.

In its report, the team found that this incident was not unique and not without precedent because loss-of-offsite-power events, loss-of-decay-heat-removal events and diesel generator failures have occurred previously. Further, the industry has been informed of these events, and the NRC staff and the Institute of Nuclear Power Operations have provided lessons learned and other guidance related to them.

The IIT also concluded that a combination of non-conservative conditions at the time combined with a failure to control work in the switchyard led to the event. First, two of four sources of electrical power were out of service for maintenance. Second, the Vogtle staff had no effective control over the fuel and lubricants truck. The event had the potential for causing further damage in the switchyard if the fuel truck had caught fire as a result of electrical arcing. Such damage could have hampered efforts of the Vogtle staff to restore electrical power.

HOUSTON (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Oshman's Sporting Goods, Inc. (NASDAQ: OSHM), today reported sales and operating results for the first quarter ended May 5, 1990.

First Quarter Results: Sales: $70,075,000 this year versus $60,355,000 last year, a 16.1 percent increase.

Net loss: ($877,000) this year versus ($1,637,000) last year. Loss per share: ($.15) this year versus ($.28) last year. Alvin N. Lubetkin, chief executive officer, stated that sales increased 16.1 percent overall and 10.8 percent on a comparable same store sales basis, while the loss in the first quarter of 1990 was reduced to $877,000 or $.15 per share from $1,637,000 or $.28 per share in 1989.

Sales for the quarter benefited from a generally improved level of business throughout the company and from an early start of the company's Once A Year Sale in the Central Division, which began late in the first quarter this year as opposed to the second quarter in 1989. Additionally, the successful opening of an 80,000 square foot store in Houston, Texas on March 29 contributed approximately two million dollars in sales to the quarter.

At the end of the quarter, Oshman's was operating 194 stores compared to 193 at the end of the first quarter in 1989.

DEERFIELD, IL AND LAKELAND, FL (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Premark International, Inc. (NYSE: PMI) and Sikes Corporation today jointly announced Premark's consummation of the $16.40 per share cash tender offer for all outstanding Class A common stock of Sikes Corporation and concurrent purchase of all the outstanding Class B common stock of Sikes.

Approximately 10.3 million Class A shares, or 96 percent of the Class A shares outstanding on a fully diluted basis, were purchased pursuant to the tender offer.

All Class A shares validly tendered before the expiration of the offer were accepted for payment, including approximately 100,000 shares that were tendered by guaranteed delivery procedures. The offer expired at midnight, Eastern time, on Thursday, June 7, 1990. The closing of the offer will be followed by a merger in which the remaining Class A shares of Sikes will be converted into a right to receive the same cash consideration per share paid in the offer. Premark expects to effect the merger as soon as practicable and, in any event, within 90 days.

In addition, Sikes has established a settlement fund to provide for an additional contingent payment of approximately $.04 per share to holders of Class A shares in connection with the settlement of certain litigation. That payment is contingent upon court approval of the settlement.

Premark International, Inc. is a multinational company with $2.6 billion in sales that markets premium products under leading brand names such as Tupperware, West Bend, Wilsonart, Hobart, Vulcan, Hartco and Precor. Premark stock is listed on the New York, Pacific and London Stock Exchanges. Sikes Corporation is the third largest manufacturer of ceramic tile in the United States. Its Class A shares are listed on the American Stock Exchange.

DANBURY, CT (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Summit meetings among world leaders for the next 30 years are going to focus on environment and economic growth, said Union Carbide Chairman Robert D. Kennedy.

"The clash between global warming and world ecology issues and so- called sustainable growth for not only the Third World, but for all of us, is just heating up" he said.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Chemical Manufacturers Association (CMA) at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Kennedy added that although great strides will have been made in environmental improvement by the year 2000, the issue won't recede.

As outgoing CMA chairman, Kennedy applauded the group for its Responsible Care initiative, which sets environmental standards and measures of performance for members, and noted that it is catching on around the world.

"Now, either in part or in total, Responsible Care is being taken up by the British, European, Japanese and Australian chemical industry associations," he noted. "The United Nations environmental program is moving with Responsible Care and wants to consider Responsible Care as the basis for a new partnership between business and the U.N., pointing toward the 1992 World Conference on Development of the Environment."

Significant Growth of Community Outreach Effort Predicted Kennedy predicted significant growth for advisory and outreach groups. "I believe that along the way our CAER Program (Community Awareness and Emergency Response) will evolve into 2,000 community advisory and outreach groups around the country in every town where we have significant plants to maintain our continuing dialogue with concerned citizens."

He said he expected that annual progress reporting against Responsible Care management code targets will evolve into "some kind of publicly credible audit or report card, plant by plant, business by business." He said this would result in announcing publicly each year the progress made toward reducing spills and emissions, reducing waste and operating safe plants. "And the public will begin to believe," he said. "The public will begin to be reassured."

Finally, he stressed the importance of the chemical industry speaking out publicly in the media in its own behalf. "We've got to demonstrate our leadership and build a public consensus," he said.

HRD and B.U.S will jointly develop markets in their respective continents for technologies controlled by the other. HRD is headquartered in Palmerton, Pa. B.U.S is headquartered in Frankfurt and its common stock is owned 75 percent by Metallgesellschaft AG of Frankfurt.

Horsehead Industries, Inc. of New York currently owns 80 percent of HRD, 20 percent of HRD is owned by B.U.S's U.S. subsidiary. HRD filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission on May 9 relating to a proposed initial public offering of 3.25 million shares of common stock. Upon completion of the public offering and the sale of shares to B.U.S, Horsehead Industries, Inc. and B.U.S will both own 45 percent of HRD.

HRD and B.U.S. are both active in the area of recycling of metal-containing and other industrial residues. Each company said it believes that proven technologies controlled by it and applied in its home market have economic potential in the other company's market as well. HRD and B.U.S have agreed to develop these markets through joint ventures which will exclusively make use of these technologies.

The HRD-led joint venture will market in North America in particular B.U.S proven technologies for the reprocessing of aluminum-containing salt slag, the regeneration of spent foundry sands and the reprocessing of lead-containing batteries. The B.U.S-led joint venture will market in Europe in particular HRD's technologies for the recycling of certain industrial residues through the use of flame reactors, for waste water management through the ECOSORB process and for land reclamation. HRD and B.U.S have also agreed to exchange in future information on the development of technologies for the recycling and reprocessing of industrial residues and to make these technologies available for joint use in both markets.

SCHAUMBURG, IL (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Motorola, Inc. (NYSE: MOT), Communications Sector announced today it has filed applications with the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) for experimental licenses for enhanced private communications systems in the 1850 to 1990 MHz frequency band.

The experimental licenses will enable Motorola to conduct technical and market tests for enhanced private communications (EPC) systems in the Chicago and Atlanta urban areas and to determine the feasibility of spectrum sharing between EPC and microwave radio users. These cities were selected for the technological and geographic challenges they present. As two of the largest cities in the United States, each has highly concentrated business populations in "downtown" office areas, making them ideal candidates for the experimental systems. Chicago also has some of the tallest buildings in the world, which will prove beneficial for the purpose of studying propagation and interference potential.

The primary purpose of these experimental licenses is to test interference caused by and imposed on licensed microwave systems operating in Atlanta and Chicago in order to analyze the effects of coexistence of localized private communications systems.

Motorola will utilize digital microcell technology with maximum power output limit of 1 watt, to provide private cordless terminal products that will bring "low cost" wireless communications to business and corporate personnel.

A microcell consists of a small base station which can handle several handsets simultaneously. These handsets will be small and lightweight for use in multiple environments. Digital technology will enhance speech quality and provide a greater degree of security than analog equipment.

An EPC system can also act as an enhancement to a private pager system in campus environments such as hospitals, golf courses, educational institutions, etc. Additionally, when set up as a wireless PBX, the EPC system will enable business managers to walk freely around their offices or into meetings and still receive important calls. Other operations that can benefit from increased productivity are shipping, receiving and traffic departments which may offer more timely and efficient customer service.

ATLANTA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Oglethorpe Power Corp. today announced that it will delay by approximately three months the completion date for its Tritt Road substation in east Cobb County while discussions of community concerns over the facility continue.

At the same time, the corporation has suggested the formation of a Task Force, that would include representatives of the community, to search for an alternate site.

The substation on Post Oak Tritt Road had been scheduled to be completed and energized in March 1991. The new in-service date would be June 1, 1991.

Project Coordinator Mike Fiveash said the delay and offer to search for an alternate site were made "to demonstrate that we are seriously interested in addressing the concerns raised by some residents of the community."

Those concerns primarily involve perceived health effects from magnetic fields that would be present at the substation.

Oglethorpe Power maintains that research has not indicated a cause and effect relationship between such fields and adverse health. Further, the football field-length distance between the substation and a nearby community center will prevent magnetic fields from the substation from being present at the center.

Fiveash stressed that the critical need for a substation requires that any new site be identified and optioned within 30 days.

"It would also have to meet all applicable federal, state and county regulations," he said.

Since concerns over the substation were raised, Oglethorpe Power has met with representatives from the community on three occasions and discussions are expected to continue.

"We hope as our dialogue moves forward that we can resolve these issues to everyone's satisfaction," he said.

The Tritt Road substation is planned to relieve overloading on the electrical system that is occurring as new homes and businesses continue to be built in the area. The facility will serve about 6,000 - 7,000 households.

Oglethorpe Power Corp. is the generation and transmission cooperative providing power to 39 of Georgia's 42 consumer-owned Electric Membership Corps. (EMCs). These EMCs serve more than 2 million Georgians throughout the state.

DENVER (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Western Gas Processors Ltd. (NYSE: WGP pr) announced today that its board of directors declared a distribution of 45 cents per unit to unitholders of record at the close of business on June 30, 1990 of its $1.80 Participating Preference Units. The distribution will be paid to unitholders on or before Aug. 14, 1990.

Western is managed by its general partner, Western Gas Resources Inc. (NYSE: WGR) and is engaged in natural gas gathering and processing, natural gas liquid production and the marketing of natural gas and natural gas liquids. Western's operations extend throughout the Rocky Mountain Region and the Southwestern United States.

On May 24, Western signed a contract to acquire the assets of Parker Gas Treating Co. The assets involved are 15 gas treating facilities which condition natural gas by removing impurities from the gas stream. The facilities are located in several different areas in the southwestern United States. The closing is scheduled for the end of July.

Western is continuing to seek additional gas processing opportunities and believes that it is well positioned to take advantage of an improvement in both gas and liquids prices.

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, NJ (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Allied-Signal Inc. (NYSE: ALD) said today that Air Europe has selected the company's Traffic Alert and Collision Avoidance System (TCAS) as well as other advanced avionics for the airline's present and future aircraft.

Air Europe will install the communication, navigation and identification system, weather radar and TCAS manufactured by Allied- Signal's Bendix/King Air Transport Avionics Division in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Allied-Signal was the first manufacturer to certify TCAS avionics, an airborne collision avoidance system that operates independently of ground-based radar.

Bendix/King TCAS has been chosen by 17 domestic and international air carriers, as well as by Airbus Industrie, which announced in May that the system would be available as standard equipment on all its aircraft. European carriers now using TCAS include Lufthansa, Iberia, Finnair, Sabena, Aero-Lloyd Flugreisen, Minerve and Jugoslovenski Aerotransport.

TCAS informs pilots of the location of other aircraft in their vicinity and, if the situation warrants, advises them to change course. The U.S. government has mandated that all aircraft with more than 30 passengers flying in U.S. airspace be equipped with TCAS systems by the end of 1993.

Air Europe, an international scheduled and charter carrier, is based in West Sussex, England.

CALGARY, ALBERTA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - In an innovative step to deal with growing concerns about the Canadian environment, Shell Canada (Toronto, Montreal: SHC) announced today the launch of the Shell Environmental Fund during the company's Environment Week activity at Shell Centre in Calgary.

Jack MacLeod, president and chief executive officer, unveiled the $1-million-annual Shell Environmental Fund at a ceremony that included Alberta Environment Minister Ralph Klein, Calgary Mayor Al Duerr, invited guests and Shell employees.

The Shell Environmental Fund provides financial resources to individuals and groups for worthwhile environmental projects across the country.

''The goal of the fund is to help Canadians do something positive in the cleanup of the environment,'' said MacLeod. ''Furthermore, it is designed to accomplish this goal efficiently and effectively.''

Information about the fund and how to apply will be available through a wide distribution of posters and brochures sent to schools, community associations and environmental groups. The fund will also be advertised in selected newspapers.

There will be a strong regional focus to the fund. Review panels of two environmentalists, a government representative and a Shell person will be located in major Canadian centers and will assess applications. Funding will range from $50 to $5,000 for any individual project.

The Prairies and Northwest Territories review panel members are: Wendy Francis, president, Alberta Chapter, Canadian Parks and Wilderness Society; Rob Macintosh, director, the Pembina Institute; Vance MacNichol, Alberta deputy minister of the environment; and a Shell employee.

In accepting the invitation to review applications to the fund, Wendy Francis said, ''We are pleased to see the creation of the Shell Environmental Fund and encourage individuals and environmental groups in Alberta and across Canada to send in their applications.''

The Shell Environmental Fund brochures and application forms are available from Public Affairs, Calgary (403) 232-3198. Brochures will be mailed to Shell locations across Canada and the Shell Helps Centre at 1-800-661-1600 will accept requests for more information.

ALLENTOWN, PA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Air Products and Chemicals Inc. (NYSE: APD) has announced price increases in the United States for various industrial and specialty gas products.

The increases will become effective July 1 or Aug. 1, depending on location.

Effective July 1, 1990, the unit price portion of the schedules for liquid and bulk oxygen and nitrogen supplied to merchant and government accounts in Arizona, California and Nevada will increase by 7 percent. Customers will experience increases of 7 to 20 percent depending on their current price. Prices on liquid hydrogen and cylinder and specialty gases will also be increased. The above price revisions are necessary to cover higher production costs, principally electric power, at plants serving these states.

Also, effective Aug. 1, 1990, elsewhere in the United States, customers whose prices are below existing price schedules for liquid and bulk oxygen nitrogen and argon will be increased 7 to 10 percent. Cylinder and specialty gases will also be increased on this date. These changes are necessary to restore prices to levels that reflect the current costs of production and distribution, and to sustain adequate returns on investment.

Air Products last increased U.S. liquid and bulk oxygen, nitrogen, and argon prices in October 1989, and cylinder and specialty gas prices in December 1989.

STRATFORD, CT (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Science Accessories Corporation (NASDAQ: SEAS), a major manufacturer of sonic digitizers, today reported results for the second quarter and six months ended April 30, 1990.

For the second quarter, the company sustained a net loss of $5,787 on net sales of $876,935 versus a net loss of $53,712 or one cent per share on net sales of $733,895 for the same period last year.

For the six months, the net loss was $84,695 or two cents per share on net sales of $1,446,538, compared to a net loss of $99,061 or two cents per share on net sales of $1,448,596 for the first half of fiscal 1989.

"Contributing to the 19.5 percent gain in second quarter sales was the new application of a Science Accessories product to a diagnostic and treatment planning system for orthodontic analysis -- further evidence of the broadening spectrum of uses for digitizers," S.J. Sindeband, chairman and president, said.

"Costs as a percentage of sales declined, reflecting continued reductions in manufacturing costs and increased sales of products with higher profit margins," he added.

"We continue our aggressive research and development activities, expending over $105,000 in the second quarter, which impacted earnings. We remain confident that these investments will enhance shareholder value in the years ahead," Sindeband concluded.

ATLANTA (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Delta Air Lines (NYSE: DAL) today has asked the U.S. government to designate Delta to serve Hong Kong, based on certificate authority the airline currently holds for service to that city.

In its request, Delta said it will inaugurate service to Hong Kong promptly, or no later than six months after Hong Kong/United Kingdom authorities approve Delta's designation and grant the necessary operating permit.

Delta's service plans call for service to Hong Kong from one or more of three Pacific gateways -- Los Angeles, Portland, and Honolulu -- depending on equipment and marketing considerations.

In its request, Delta said it would not oppose authority to serve Hong Kong for other carriers provided Delta is the first carrier designated for new U.S. - Hong Kong service.

HOUSTON (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Dixie Carriers Inc., the largest subsidiary of Kirby Corp., a leader in the marine transportation industry, has been awarded the honor bestowed by Monsanto Chemical Co. on its top rated vendors, the designation as "Quality Partner." Dixie is the only barge transportation company to be awarded "Partner" status. Only eight other vendors out of 800 have earned this highest-level honor under Monsanto's "Total Quality, Total Partnership" program.

"Dixie was chosen both because of its excellent service reliability record and the fact that it is a leader in implementing a formal quality improvement process," said George Hazzard, manager of Monsanto's International and Water Transportation Department.

Monsanto began the "Total Quality, Total Partnership" program in 1987. Under the program, Monsanto works closely with key vendors and suppliers to ensure that they meet the company's established quality standards. This is the first year that Monsanto has designated awards under the program.

Accepting the award on Dixie's behalf was Joseph H. Pyne, president. "We are honored that Monsanto Chemical Co. has chosen Dixie Carriers Inc. as the first barge transportation company to receive this prestigious award," Pyne said. "Customer recognition is an important indicator of how well our quality process is working and of our success in meeting customer needs."

Monsanto Chemical Co. is a leading manufacturer of chemical products, including detergents, fibers, plastics and resins. With $4.5 billion in revenue last year, it is the largest subsidiary of the multi-national Monsanto Corp.

Houston based Dixie Carriers Inc. operates 72 boats and 180 barges primarily in the Mississippi River and its tributaries, Houston Ship Channel, Gulf of Mexico, East Coast and ports in the Caribbean Basin.

WILMINGTON, DE (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Hercules Inc. (NYSE: HPC) today announced that effective immediately it is ceasing production operations at its Mica facility in Culver City, Calif.

This action will result in an approximate $11 million after-tax charge to net income in the second quarter.

According to a Hercules spokesperson, "In October 1989 Hercules announced its intention to divest its Electronic & Printing Products (E&PP) business of which Mica is a part, because E&PP no longer figured in Hercules' strategic vision and emerging product portfolio for the 1990s. Hercules has decided at this time to shut down the Mica operations and cease any further drain on the earnings of the corporation."

Mica was founded in 1950 and acquired by Hercules in 1985. The operation, which employed approximately 250 employees, had specialized in the design and manufacture of laminates and companion prepregs for the printed circuit board industry.

NORWALK, CT (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Wiltek, Inc. (NASDAQ: WLTK) today reported that revenues for the second quarter ended April 30, 1990, were $1,775,000, an increase of 15 percent over revenues of $1,541,000 in the second quarter of fiscal 1989. Net income for the quarter was $226,000, or 6 cents a share, compared to net income of $112,000, or 3 cents a share for the same period last year. In the six months ended April 30, 1990, revenues were $3,642,000, a 32 percent increase over the same period in 1989. Net income for the six months more than doubled, from $214,000, or 6 cents a share, in 1989 to $478,000, or 12 cents a share, in 1990.

Jay Fitzpatrick, Wiltek's president, noted that the company's liquidity also improved significantly. Cash and short-term investments grew from $900,000 on April 30, 1989, to $1,672,000 on April 30, 1990, an 86 percent increase. He said that the company intends to use this strong cash position to continue to enhance its service offerings in the areas of local area network gateways, file transfer and facsimile delivery services.

Wiltek provides geographically dispersed organizations with message data communications services. The company designs, implements and manages systems which allow users with incompatible terminals, computers and communications networks to send and receive information throughout their company and communicate with outside customers and suppliers.

NEW YORK (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Traders at the New York Stock Exchange were the chosen audience for lunchtime picketing by employees of Reuters (NASDAQ: RTRSY), the international news agency that provides information to financial markets.

The employees -- members of the Newspaper Guild of New York -- were protesting that while the company's earnings and stock price are hitting record highs, Reuter management is seeking major economic concessions in its contract talks.

Company managers are insisting that the nearly 500 Guild-represented employees accept deep cuts in medical coverage and a three-year wage increase that would lag behind even the most optimistic inflation forecasts. They also want to slash maternity pay and severance benefits and lower pay for many employees outside New York City.

The employees, including journalists, technicians, computer operators, and customer service and sales administration personnel, play a key role in making Reuters a fast, accurate and reliable provider of news and data to traders in equity, currency, capital and commodity markets around the world.

New York Guild President Barry Lipton said the purpose of the lunchtime picketing is to let Reuter clients on Wall Street know how dissatisfied employees are with management's position at the bargaining table after seven months of negotiations.

"Reuters is an economic giant poised for even greater growth with the introduction of automated trading systems like Globex," Lipton said. "But these are the kinds of contract proposals I'd expect to see from a dying mill-town factory."

The Guild's contract with Reuters Information Services, Inc., the U.S. subsidiary of the London-based parent company, Reuters Holding PLC, expired at the end of February.

SAN ANTONIO (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The Board of Directors of Valero Energy Corp. (NYSE: VLO) has approved construction of a 105-mile pipeline extending Valero Natural Gas Partners L.P.'s (NYSE: VLP) North Texas pipeline. The extension is expected to increase the throughput capacity of the partnership's intrastate natural gas pipeline system by more than 15 percent. A subsidiary of Valero Energy Corp. will construct the extension which will be leased to Valero Natural Gas Partners L.P.

The extension will complete a strategic east-west pipeline link across Texas, facilitating transportation of gas from the Mid- continent region to Midwest and Northeast markets. This project also will provide the partnership access to prolific gas supplies in the East Texas basin as well as increase the partnership's access to Oklahoma natural gas supplies.

The partnership already has a contract with a producer to move 100 million cubic feet per day (MMcfd) of gas through the new pipeline and is in active discussions with a number of other producers and potential customers concerning use of the new pipeline.

The pipeline extension, which will run from Bethel, southeast of Dallas, to Carthage near the Louisiana border, initially will be capable of handling 350-400 MMcfd which can be expanded to 750-850 MMcfd with a future addition of increased compression capabilities. Construction of the pipeline extension will begin in October 1990 and is expected to be completed in the first quarter of 1991. The cost of the extension to the company is estimated to be approximately $58 million.

Valero Energy Corp. is involved primarily in refining high- sulfur atmospheric residual oil into premium products, such as unleaded gasoline, through its specialized refinery in Corpus Christi and in marketing those products. Through subsidiaries, Valero Energy is general partner of and has an approximate 49 percent interest in Valero Natural Gas Partners which owns a 7,100- mile network of natural gas transmission and distribution lines throughout Texas and in Oklahoma, purchases and sells natural gas throughout the U.S., provides third party gas transportation services and owns 11 natural gas processing facilities.

SEABROOK, NH (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Edward A. Brown announced today he will retire on October 1 from his position as president and chief executive officer of New Hampshire Yankee, operator of the Seabrook Station nuclear power plant.

Brown, 60, joined New Hampshire Yankee in 1984. New Hampshire Yankee was created by Seabrook Station's joint-owner utility companies to complete the plant's construction and licensing, and to oversee management and operation of the facility.

"I was hired to do a job -- to head the company responsible for getting Seabrook Station built and on-line to produce electricity for an energy-starved region," Brown said. "With the help of a superb team of professionals, we were able to complete this mission. Seabrook Station is licensed and producing electricity, and will soon be in full commercial operation. I take great satisfaction in this accomplishment. Now, it's time for me to spend more time with my family and do some other things."

It is expected that Ted C. Feigenbaum, 40, senior vice president and chief operating officer of New Hampshire Yankee, will take responsibility for Brown's duties at Seabrook Station upon his retirement. Feigenbaum joined Seabrook Station in 1984.

"Ted Feigenbaum has the full confidence and backing of all the joint owners. I expect that he will become the new head of Seabrook Station," Brown said.

"In addition, when I initiated discussions with Northeast Utilities officials to inform them of my plans, they agreed that Ted would be their choice also, if and when their company were to become managing agent for Seabrook Station," Brown said. "I would be completely comfortable leaving Seabrook Station in the hands of someone as capable as Ted."

HOUSTON (JUNE 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) on May 21 approved an order affirming its grant to Mojave Pipeline Co. of optional expedited certificates to construct a 385-mile natural gas pipeline from Topock, Ariz. to the heavy oil fields in Kern County, Calif. Mojave today notified the FERC of its formal acceptance of such certificates.

Mike Holland, president and chief executive officer of Mojave Pipeline Operating Co. said, "The FERC's action was significant in that it removed several regulatory uncertainties that the project faced. With this final decision from the FERC, Mojave will be able to commence construction by early 1991 and be in service by early 1992. Mojave's acceptance of the FERC certificates is the final step in the regulatory process, which has spanned more than five years."

FERC issued Mojave an initial certificate on May 8, 1989. Mojave then reached a settlement with Kern River Gas Transmission Co. and Southern California Gas Co., under which Mojave and Kern River would construct a joint project along portions of their routes in California. The Kern River project will commence in southwest Wyoming and interconnect with Mojave's pipeline east of Barstow, Calif. FERC issued an initial order authorizing the joint project on Jan. 24, 1990. The certificates accepted by Mojave today were issued on May 21 and finalized federal regulatory authorizations by addressing issues arising from the January 24 order.

Mojave is a joint partnership of Enron Corp. and El Paso Natural Gas Co. According to Holland, Mojave has firm transportation commitments for about 80 percent of its initial capacity and expects to execute additional contracts in the near future. Only 90 million cubic feet per day of Mojave's initial capacity remain available for interested customers.

The Mojave project will be built and operated by Mojave Pipeline Operating Co. which has similar responsibilities for the Kern River portion of the joint project.
